The entry list, released by the Canadian National Exhibition today shows a total of 303 natators entered in the event, with 40 others in reserve. Of these numbers, 40 are from this city 43 will take the plunge. And among them are at least two who will probably be in the money, Percy Vivian and Norman Young, last year's winner and Ernest Werkentin, formerly of Hamilton, who won the event in 1927.

New York's delegation of 15 has some numerous contenders. They are Bill Goll, for instance, second last year, and Johnny Kiesel, who hasn't done so well in recent years but who is always dangerous and there is Marvin Nelson, who formerly hailed from Fort Dodge, Iowa, and who won in 1930.

Peter Cochrane, Ont., boat Isadore Spooner, second in 1930, is sending three others this year, and Glenn Sydney, N.S., again comes Warren Anderson, one of the biggest second hopes of the event.

Buffalo, N.Y., has eight entries, including Frank Temple, Joseph Stanley and Frank, both of whom may be well up toward the finish.

Altogether this year amounts to $7,500, with $2,000 for first, $700 for third; $300 for fourth; $200 for fifth and $100 for sixth. The race is to be held inside the breakwater at the Exhibition grounds, and will start at 10 a.m. on August 31 providing the water is 80 degrees or warmer. If the lake is colder than that the race will be postponed from day to day until it does warm up.

EDITOR'S MOTHER DIES

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 23 — Mrs. Agnes Ann Angus, 79, is dead here. She had lived in this city for many years. Her three daughters and one son, R. W. Angus, editor of the Chatham Daily News, survives.

QUEENS OF SKIES CATCH UP SLEEP

New York, Aug. 23—The two new queens of the skies, Mrs. Frances Marsala and Mrs. Louise Thad Dahlberg, arrived here after some 196 hours of sleep and rest they missed during the 2,000 mile transcontinental flight record for women.

Mrs. Marsala, petite merry-go-round over Long Island ended 45 hours, 17 minutes.

That mark surpassed the old one of 122 hours established last year at Los Angeles by Bobby Trout and Edna May Cooper by more than three full days.

DISPERSAL SALE OF RANCOCAS STABLE

Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 23—One of the greatest racing assemblages ever offered at Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas Stable—now is being broken up through a combination of dispersal sale.

The first day of the Rancocas stock—94 yearlings and 21 brood mare—was auctioned off last night and brought a total of $41,185, an average of $1,023. The other half will be sold tonight with the exception of the famous stallions Zev and Grey Lag which Sinclair expects always to keep.

Hornitals in this country buy $25,000,000 worth of drugs every year. Here three ingredients and one son. R. W. Angus, editor of the Chatham Daily News, survives.

Health Rules For Beauty Seekers

One reason why complaining, half-sick women often live to a ripe old age, even hanging on to fragmentary evidence of youthful loveliness, is that they take excellent care of themselves. The strong woman, if she is ambitious and conscientious, makes the mistake of driving herself beyond her strength. She'll hold down an office job all day, fix some awfully dinner, do the family ironing in the evening, fall into bed after midnight. That goes on until the day comes when something happens. The old step doesn't pick up quickly as it always has. Creases have appeared around the eyes and swollen tissues have formed beneath them. Shoulders droop a little.

Without vitality there cannot be well being or good looks. Vitality is the spark that keeps the motor of beauty running. To enjoy a sense of wellbeing it is necessary to follow certain health rules. No use trying to sidestep them; it can't be done.

The day should start with break-fast not merely a cup of coffee. From dinner time until breakfast is a long fast. Eggs, toast and fruit or raw vegetable, and a tea would suffice. Many a woman fancies she has a broken heart or that every head is raised against her when the egg business is nothing more than a hunger pain. Nourishing food is essential to health and spiritual strength. Women don't think enough about the pleasures of eating. They should learn a lesson from men to whom good grub is the very essence of life. The well-groomed male looks better and looks better than the nibbler.

Relaxation should be a habit. A fifteen minute nap after luncheon is a pick-up measure. There should, every day, be some form of play. A woman who still can play carry a valuable insurance policy against the mean tricks of Poppy Time. Recreation is necessary if one is to carry the load of every night and day out as many of us do. Muscles let the old mind creep on work duties and worry.

Sunlight is a mine of pep riches. Fresh air is an artist that tints the cheeks of pretty girls more skilfully than any beauty specialist. Exercise keeps soft and restless little tissue pads that act as shock absorbers to the backbone; it reshapes the figure, helping it in its efforts to retain the youthful outline, the trim sweep from lower rib to thigh, the fine arch of the neck.

Bathing is a health law. By scrubbing the entire skin surface of the body the circulation has to work to do in its effects to throw out wastes. The daily bath should never be a duty but a pleasure. Allow ten minutes for it and rest for ten minutes after.

With each meal have a raw fruit or raw vegetable, and at two meals have a glass of milk If underweight, make it half milk and half cream. Get to bed early. Late days produce an exhausted body and there is such a thing as being too tired to relax and rest comfortably. Don't keep out of bed immediately upon awakening. Indulge in five minutes of light calesthenics before getting your bath.

Do all these things and you'll save on beauty expenses. And live longer and more gloriously.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

Rapid reducing, by means of a starvation diet, sweets, starches and fats entirely deleted, will bring to the face of the reducer, a wan dispirited, hollowyed look. Won't do. All wrong! The figure may have better, but the face looks worse. With added to the diet that low in fats will supply nourishment that the body needs without adding an ounce to weight. Cantaloupe with the slim shape can partake of lean meats, vegetables that grow above ground, green salads, clear soups and fish. The should avoid such roasted tye bread for white bread and buttey pale tea and coffee clear.

While button curls are an interesting detail of the early summer coiffure they are under restraint. No thick bunches of them to loter, fere with a display of the contour of the head, but a discreet collection along the nape of the neck held in closely to furnish that fluffy lipped-in effect. The forward arrangement of the fashionable hairdress does permit such as is pleases; hair can be brushed straight back, be parted or sport an undulated beap.

When the complexion has taken on a deep tan, the happiest selection of lipstick is one of coral pink or raspberry; orange shades are likely to do a sickly fadeaway when the skin is browned. Powder should holds on longer than the kind one gets from the puff when one has gained a greater popularity than it has had in the past. And now the deathpearl colors rouge and lipstick of precisely the same shades. Makeup is one of the fine arts.

The girl with olive skin, dark hair and dark eyes looks well gowned in black combined with a bit of vivid coloring, like jade green or Chinese red. While suits her better than delicate shades of any of which her best choice is apple green or mauve. Pale blue and pink may make her skin look sallow and grey, simply wreck her.

The undersized girl in her teens who is worrying about not reaching normal height will have a good chance by eating plenty of milk, she keeps up a nourishing diet, gets nine hours of sleep every night, takes regular exercise in the open air, avoids over-activity and flurry.

Demonstration

A very interesting demonstration will be given by a lady of Montreal, at JOHN W. COOKS, this week, ending Saturday, August 27. She will show the ladies how to do water waving, by using transfers. The work is very easy. We invite all the ladies to call.

Direct Your Child's Activities

The generations which is growing up now is I think, even less prepared to amuse itself than any former one. It will have more leisure time than you or I have ever had. It will have more time to do what it chooses, and what it will do depends upon the parents of today.

A girl comes to mind as I write this, a lovely girl in her teens. She attends school until three o'clock each afternoon, except Saturday and Sunday. In the hours when she is not at school she is building she does home work, attends a dancing class, takes piano lessons with the attendant practising, belongs to a dramatic club which rehearses to the basket-ball team. In the moments left she is out at the hair-dresser's for a set and a wave at a certain hour, due at a gown shop for a fitting at another specified time, due at Sunday School at a stated hour on Sunday morning and——

Well, I'm going right now and thinking about it. Aren't you?

And every activity is directed, planned and supervised for it. If she ever had a moment alone, she'd probably be paralyzed and would feel normal again until she'd made contact with somebody to do something at a stated time again.

What about giving the kids a chance to develop as they please —that is, if they haven't already developed so far as to be past anything on their own?

In our modern attempt to organize youth, it seems to me we've all but suffocated them under a deluge of directed activities. How can they ever know what to do with leisure time—that most precious time for unfoldment— if we never let them have any? Cut out a few of the machine-made things and let them browse, or read, or explore—and find themselves.

Correct Manners

BALANCING THE BUDGET

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—My cousin was an usher for a recent wedding and the groom asked all his ushers or rather, told them, that they had to pay five dollars for flowers for their buttons. I do not think this was correct, am I right?

2.—If there are no pongs when soup cubes are served, is it correct to use your fingers?

3.—When sitting at a table, regardless of dinner, luncheon, and so forth and someone is being present, all to you, acknowledge that you be is standing? Does it make any difference in sex or age?

L.

1.—You're right.... this wasn't good taste and it wasn't according to custom. The groom's attendants shouldn't be "taxed" for the privilege of being his attendants. This puts exactly the wrong intervention on this privilege, which is a special one entirely.

The flowers of the bride are provided by the bride and her parents, for they are planned as part of the wedding ceremony.

Naturally the bride and her mother find it easier and more convenient to send these bouquets, that they will harmonize with the costumes of the attendants.

Sometimes the groom asks for the privilege of sending these flowers to the bridal attendants, but evidently not this groom! This young man is evidently overburdened by so much discussion of "budgets!" So he balanced his own.

2.—Yes. Of course if you wish to be ultra careful you may use your own spoon, but this isn't necessary.

3.—If a man is being presented to a woman who is sitting at a table she does not rise. The only exception might be if the gentleman were so old or so distinguished that she would wish to show him special honor and compliment.

THANKS FOR WEDDING GIFTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In acknowledging wedding gifts, is it necessary to send a "Thank you" card by every one of the gifts, regardless of whether you have already thanked the person personally?

P. R.

You should never send a "thank you" card until they have received the kind of gift e'd especially not when you have received a wedding gift. (That is, if by a "thank-you card" you mean the ready-made cards, the ones with the message of appreciation engraved or printed on them.)

For every gift sent the bride-to-be writes a note of appreciation ....written by her on her best letter paper, in her best manner, and with her best words....and she writes these notes as soon as she receives them. If she cannot thank the gift, if she can.

Then she writes a note to each giver even if she had personally thanked that person. The personal thanks may have been expressed as she casually meets the friend on the street, for instance, or at a party, but this isn't enough. There is nothing exactly correct about one of a wedding present....or at least there shouldn't be....and are there should be nothing casual about the expressing of our thanks for it..

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answers questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

WHEN HALF SICK HALF WELL

You Can Benefit From This Delicious Food

ARE you somewhat below par? If so, it is altogether likely that a regular use of Post's Bran Flakes will help you back to health. Those who are below par are often victims of constipation, and Post's Bran Flakes—a bulk food—has been made to ward off constipation arising from insufficient bulk in the diet.

Post's Bran Flakes gives best results when eaten regularly. Eat it with milk or cream as a cereal. With berries or fruits, or plain. Millions enjoy the appetizing flavour of these golden, crisp, toasted flakes. Made in Canada.

Ordinary cases of constipation, associated with too little bulk in the diet, should yield to Post's Bran Flakes. If your case is abnormal, consult a competent physician at once and follow his advice.

W. M. S. MEETINGS

FRANKFORD W.M.S.

The Frankford W.M.S. held its August meeting in the United Church. The opening hymn was "We Gave Thee but Thine Own." Then prayer was offered by the president after which there was a responsive reading.

The minutes of last meeting were read and the treasurer's report was received.

The corresponding secretary read a request from the Mission church in Belleville that a box might be sent to assist in making the needy comfortable. This request was laid over for the next meeting.

An expression of sympathy was sent to Mrs. A. Ford who is ill and not able to attend.

Mrs. R. Bush had charge of the program and opened same by two verses of the hymn "I Love to Tell the Story."

The Scripture lesson, first eleven verses of the first chapter of St. John's gospel, was read by Mrs. Windover.

The subject of the programme was the Missionary Monthly and the first article was a report on the circulation of the magazines given by Mrs. Bush which was very encouraging from the fact that it was so widely read.

A message from the cover was given by Mrs. Hendrick. Mrs. Morrow also read an article on the magazine. Mrs. Smith gave a reading on West China. Mrs. Hendrick read a letter from Miss Hinmon, a cousin, who is a missionary in India. The letter was very interesting.

A duet was rendered by G. Bonisteel and Miss Foster. Mrs. Windover read a paper on the study Book Mrs. Dixon gave a talk on the purpose of the W.M. A duet was sung in the course of which all joined "Getting New Subscribers." The closing hymn was "Come All Ye Faithful," after which Mrs. Coon led in prayer.

The collection was taken and meeting closed by all repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

GILEAD W.M.S.

The regular meeting of Gilead W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. D. Hubel on Wednesday pm. Aug. 10th. The president, Mrs. Balcanquel, opened the meeting with hymn 191. Mrs R Huffman read the Scripture lesson, the 1st chapter of St. John. Mrs. W. Clare led in prayer, and hymn 209 was sung. The Roll Call was answered with verse of Scripture, beginning with the letter "A". After the business was concluded, the collection was taken, Mrs. W. Clare sang a solo, and Mrs. Lawrence gave a reading, followed by a solo, by Mrs Fred Yorke. Readings were given by Mrs. R. Yorke and Mrs. Balcanquel. The meeting closed by singing hymn 240, and all repeating the watch word. Refreshments were served by the hostess and a social half hour spent.

It's the real fruit flavor that makes the difference. Packed full of plump, uncrushed Sultanas fresh from the sunny vineyards, Christie's Sultana Biscuits are flavorful, delicious, wholesome—fit for a king.

Weddings

RUDOLF—WISEMAN

TORONTO—In Christ Church Deer Park, at 3 o'clock on Saturday, a quiet but lovely wedding was solemnized when Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Wiseman of St. Catharines, formerly of Belleville, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Gray Rudolf. The marriage was performed by the Rev. J. C. Clough, and Mr. Borland presided at the organ, playing softly throughout the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was wearing a becoming tailored frock of white diagonal wool, with small, smart hat fashioned of the same material. Her accessories were white and she carried an arm bouquet of soft pink roses and lily of the valley.

Miss Alice Crawford attended as bridesmaid, gowned in pink lace made on flowing lines. She wore matching pink hat and carried roses and blue cornflowers.

Mr. Cyril Windeler was best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Royal York where the immediate family only and shortly after Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf left by motor for the west, going trip.

On their return they will reside at 1 Braemar Road.

OBITUARY

JACK KARL GILBERT

Suffering a relapse when apparently on the road to recovery from an attack of diphtheria, Jack Gilbert, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gilbert, 219 Albert St., died late yesterday afternoon in the Isolation Hospital.

In his thirteenth year, Jack had endeared himself to both young and old in Belleville, and news of his sudden passing came as a real blow to all his hosts of friends. Taken ill a week ago last Friday, the crisis was thought to have been passed last Tuesday. During that time he took a rapid recovery, but late Monday afternoon complications set in, and, never of robust health, he was unable to withstand the continued attack and his heart gave out. He died at 5.45 p.m.

In June the young victim had graduated from Queen Alexandra School into Collegiate with honors, and but for the fact that illness would not permit, would have tried the examinations. Governor-General Medal, Versatile, he had appeared in various entertainments about the city, his singing and dancing having made him a favorite juvenile entertainer. With his younger sister, Betty, he had won instant acclaim in two Rotary Ministrel Shows, the Kiwanis Karnival, and amateur nights at the theatres.

A valued member of Bridge Street United Church, Jack was one of the original four members of the Junior Choir and the Church Lads' Brigade. Last year ago he won a medal for singing in Queen Alexandra School, and when the Knox-Hole Cup at the Y.M.C.A. started a glee club, he was one of the original members.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gilbert, four sisters, and two brothers. They are Mrs. Percy T. Cole, of Trenton, Bertha, Harry, Betty, William and Harry, all at home. The funeral of private nature was held at 11 o'clock this morning to Belleville Mausoleum, Rev. A. E. McCutcheon conducting the service.

GILBERT—At the Isolation Hospital, Belleville on August 22nd, 1932, Jack Earl Gilbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gilbert, 219 Albert Street, in his 13th year. The funeral was held Tuesday morning to Belleville Mausoleum. a23-1i

LANG—In Belleville on Monday, August 22nd, 1932, Annie Weatherall, widow of the late Joshua Lang, in her 85th year.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Lionel Bowen, 56 Catherine Street, on Thursday, August 25th, 1932. Service at the home at 2 p.m. Interment Belleville Cemetery. a23-1i

TURNOVER UP ON STANDARD

Interested Shares Lead Way Upward on Tuesday

Toronto, Aug. 23—A number of gains, including several new highs for the year, were established in a brisk forenoon session on the Standard Stock and Mining market today. Volume of turnover improved a total of 238,000 shares changing hands in the first two hours.

Interlaked stocks led the advance, Noranda gaining nearly $1 to 20.00, a new 1932 peak, and Nickel selling up to $18.50. Coast Copper recovered 50 to $2.25 and Falconbridge added five cents to $1.36. Great Bear issues were comparatively quiet, Eldorado firming a couple to $1.34 and Algoma mining dipping a cent to 15 under light selling.

Siscoe and Sylvanite, up 3 apiece, set up new 1932 highs of 94 and 77, respectively

INCREASES ON TORONTO BD

Breadth of Interest Shown on Stock Trading

Toronto, Aug. 23—Trading on Toronto Stock Exchange in the forenoon session today was more notable for increased activity and breadth than for violent price fluctuations among the leaders. Volume for the two hours of 21,000 shares set a new high record for morning trading this year and was 2,000 shar-. above total transactions for yesterday's full five hour session. Gains were made in an appearance against an average for a full session of 0.10 point.

Prices continued to go higher with gains ranging from fractions up over 6 points, the extreme advances being recorded by isolated International Nickel, broke through 10 to sell at 10 5-8 and dropped back to 10 1-4 for a loss of 3-8. Consolidated Smelters was unchanged at 72 1-2.

RESISTANCE ON WALL ST.

Morning Bulge Carries Stocks up to High Levels

New York, Aug. 23—Stocks bulged up again to the tune of million-share-an-hour trading for a time today, but industrials encountered considerable resistance around the 100 levels at the finish, reached a fortnight ago.

Apparent inability of the industrials to follow rails and utilities declined through to new high ground dampened the enthusiasm somewhat and after many issues had got up 1 to 2 points during the morning, several receded 1 to 3 from the high around midday, as the pace of trading slackened. The last session was a starting up again, in the fourth hour, however.

Extreme advances of 2 to 3 points appeared in such issues as Case, International Harvester, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Corn Products, American Sugar, Sears Roebuck, Lagett and Myers B., Drug, Allied Chemical, and Dupont, but these advances were mostly reduced to 1 or 2 points in the early afternoon. Extreme gains of about 5 points appeared in Western Union and Liggett and Myers common. North American rose 3 and held up fairly well.

GRAIN PRICES

Winnipeg, Aug. 23—Prices off the Winnipeg Grain Exchange as at 10 o'clock this morning were:

Wheat—October ⅝ higher at 33⅛; December ⅝ higher at 37⅝; May ⅝ higher at 41 1-8.

Oats—October ⅝ higher.

REOPEN HEARING

Toronto, Aug. 23—The Royal Commission investigating into certain affairs of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission will reopen its hearings on September 3, it was announced today.

Eclipsing the Sun That Governs Our Conditions

Over ninety-three million miles away in the sky the sun, gigantic cannon ball with the moon between it and the earth, a darkened moon will present an awe-inspiring sight to the inhabitants of the vast 31st on both continents who will watch the shadow of the solar eclipse sweep across the continent from the Arctic Ocean, south northward to within a few hundred miles of the North Pole, then swing Westward across the United States, Hudson Bay, Province of Quebec, across the Atlantic ocean into the United States and then disappear out over the Pacific ocean.

The largest city in the path of the shadow will be Montreal, where already astronomers all over the world are gathering to view and photograph the eclipse. It is exactly 4.36 o'clock in the afternoon Montreal time when the total darkness and Belleville and Toronto will witness about ninety-one per cent totality. Just why this inspiring spectacle the like of which will not again be seen before July 28, 1963.

The actual period of darkness during the time sun is obscured at a given place is just 100 seconds. But for nearly an hour before, and an hour after the maximum of the eclipse is reached, there is a period resembling twilight. As the moon moves in front of the sun the disc of the sun disappears from view. First the sun is only partly overlapped, then completely. Two or three minutes before the eclipse becomes total, the moon's shadow becomes visible on the earth with great swiftness.

Suddenly the eclipse becomes total or nearly total in Belleville, and the sky grows dim.

Tongues of Fire

Shooting out into space from the edges of the moon are great tongues of crimson fire. Surrounding all this is a silvery halo, called the corona. When the last trace of the sun has disappeared and the moon's shadow has engulfed the spectator, the scene is awe inspiring. Savages in remote parts of the world still bow down in veneration before the strange fire god which is gobbling up the sun. In ancient times other races all over the world were equally unacquainted with infrequent eclipses. Strange stories of sacrifices to appease the wrath of the destroyer of light have been recorded. The approach of the moon in the extreme to those who are not acquainted with the mysterious workings of nature.

With the appearance of the shadow the temperature will drop. Sometimes dew falls. Strange noises spring up, seemingly differ. ent from the ones which blow in a cooler day or night. Flowers bow, birds go to rest, animals in the fields and woods seek refuge, cattle grow restless, farm and household ens behave in various fashion to show their alarm at the phenomena once never before witnessed by them. Even deep in the city and county set up weird howling. And human beings seem depressed and different for the time when the sun goes out—and the world apparently ends.

The sun in total eclipse, is only half as bright as it would be with a full moon. Often the dark moon is surrounded by a halo. It is impossible to tell time by a watch or read a headline on a newspaper. Far off on the horizon a pale glow whose effect is seen; it is the weak sunlight shining on the world outside the path of the shadow.

Stars appear overhead, the moon seems to hang like another world ready to fall on the universe below it with apparently no force to keep it from doing so. Strange sun spots dance and whirl over the surface of the earth everyday through the logs of tall trees, or through water, giving it a rippling appearance of moving bits of fire. Then gradually almost imperceptibly the black shadow moves off gaining speed as it goes and darkness replaces light. Once more men and animals and the business of living returns to normal. Even the sun comes out again in all the glory of a midsummer day. And never was Old Sol more welcome to a good look.

Smoked glasses are once more put by until 1963.

IRISH EYES

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"Ye he let" Sheila said in a clearer tone. "Well amuse him until I put on some lipstick. Chave and sting to him, dear, and give him a sweet kiss," she added. And quite unselfishly she went on, "Ma, I'm mixed up with those McCann boys again!"

"God forbid!" Mrs. Carscadden's voice said fervently.

"I really am Ma."

"There's worse things than death if the truth were known," the older woman observed solemnly.

"Sheila!" Angela called sharply, "Mr. McCann really is here!"

"What!" they could hear Sheila's gasp in a sharp whisper. She came to the door of the sun porch; she saw him, tall and dark and smiling. "Well, really, Angela," she said in the low stage of horror and exasperation, "really!"

"Well what could I do?" Angela retorted, aggrieved.

"I don't know what you'll think— I never dreamed—I was I could remember what I asked you to do you!" Sheila said looking so lovely in her confusion and pleasure and anger that Frank gave an elated, relaxed laugh and stammered on. She cried impatiently, "Angela!"

"You didn't say anything except that your sister was here to sing and sing for me, which she hadn't done."

Mrs. Carscadden now majestically adding herself to the group, Frank addressed himself to her in tones not quite loud enough to drown out her scathing observation to Sheila to the effect that perhaps now, she, Sheila wouldn't put it necessary to wake the dead when anyone called her a message.

"I did say Sunday in my wire," Frank admitted, "but today was such a heavenly day, and I was free and—"

"There's nothing said to me of a telegram," Mrs. Carscadden assured him. "That's the manners of today," she continued. "They'd never tell you anything, the lot of them. My own good mother'd never have a dispatch —sir" it was few she had, Sheila to God, for every man of them had death in the first word of it—but she'd never have one of them that the whole lot of us wouldn't run to her like a flock of birds. We, her mothin' from her, nor she from us."

"Telegrams used to mean trouble, Pop says," Frank contributed cheerfully.

"Children shame throubles," Mrs. Carscadden instantly amended. "That one, now," she went on with a dark glance at Sheila, "she'd drag the whole family into it like a dog draggin 'a tablecloth!"

"Manma, you don't believe that," Sheila protested.

"In up in flin' machines, off in cars, onto roofs—she'll leap into annything!" repeated the mother.

"Sheila will" Frank said simply, looking at her.

CHAPTER 30

"What makes it harder for my mother, Frank," Sheila said seriously, looking at him with shining blue eyes under the fringe of bang, "is that she belonged to such an extraordinary family, herself. They lived in Ireland, the land of the martyrs. Their one thought was how they could be more unselfish and a cross word you'd never hear from Epiphany to Christmas! When they could hardly toddle they were all down on their little bare knees begging my grandmother to let them go over to church, and when a fair came along, what'd they all do but trot poor little barley-sugar pennies off to God's holy poor. Visions were an everyday thing with my Aunt Maggie—"

Seated as she was on the arm of her mother's chair, she could not see Mrs. Carscadden's face, but Sheila sensed the danger in the air and interrupted herself to lay her own exquisite laughing face against her mother's hair and widen her eyes at Angela and Frank.

"If you know all that," said the mirror scathingly, "and if you've had yurs supper, you may as well call it a day!"

"Ma, isn't that all true?"

"It's truer than a great deal you will say before you die, me dearr."

"Mad, Ma?" Sheila coaxed her, as the same time pressing a sharp thumb nail into ice small of her mother's back with a force that would have caused a less experienced person to cry aloud. Mrs. Carscadden rose.

"Angela," she said instantly, like the good mother she was, "will ye step into the back room there wit' me, dear? wisha I'd put up the little curtains?"

"Let me help!" Frank offered.

"I will, indeed, Mr. McCann. But 'twill on'y take us the second of a second! An here's yure good mamma!" Mrs. Carscadden asked politely, in retreat.

"She's fine, thank you. She was perfectly delightful," Frank said with Angela's letter about the new house.—

"Do we love it!" Sheila exclaimed. "We'll be back," her mother said, departing with Angela. Frank and Sheila were alone.

"Do you honestly like it?" Frank said then.

"Like it! We're perfectly mad about it. Having the corner, do you see—we'll always have floods of sun. The joke is," Sheila went on nervously, "that my sister Margaret and her husband, Louis Shea, came down last Sunday, and now they want to get down in this neighborhood, and Angela's mother lives only three blocks away, so she'll come down with the baby all the time, and now Joe and Cecily are looking at the uppy flat, in the middle of the block—"

"You're talking to keep me from talking," Frank said, as she paused for breath.

Sheila stopped; dropped shadowed eyes.

"I suppose I am."

"One thing I came to tell you was" Frank began, "that Mrs. Cole sailed for Italy last night."

"Oh!"

"She said her brother have been planning it for years, and —our going, Frank hesitated," sort of knocked it in the head. They were delighted to go. She was laughing—heredity, I went down to the boat, and she was—I've never seen Delia so gay. She said she'd be back in more fun than our engagement party, Frank!"

"She didn't."

"Yes, she did. I think she felt relieved," Frank persisted.

"But it wouldn't have mattered," he said, after a silence. "It would not—it could not— have mattered to me, Sheila, because I—I couldn't have gone on with it."

Sheila said nothing.

"I knew it," Frank went on, "on Palm Sunday. I knew—why Beyna. Oeste and I could walk five years to get married, I knew that if you can wait at all there's something wrong. You were smart enough to know that. I wasn't."

"I?" Sheila asked thickly.

"Yes—you told me that."

She had been sitting on an old kitchen chair with a padded back; now Frank drew near it like box on which Angela had been sitting, and sat down and laid one hand on her own locked hands on her knee.

"It's—that was—with me," he said.

Sheila raised thick eyelashes, with a little effort, and looked at him.

"The world's split in two for me," the man said, as she made no effort to reply, but continued to look at him steadily through the black fringe of her lashes. "They're all laughing at me as here; I don't care. I want to tell everyone I meet about you. I'm not all I'm crazy. And it isn't only you, Sheila, it's everything. One of the fellows in the office is just married, and I was talking to him yesterday and thinking what a miracle it was to go home to your wife—"

"I know—" Sheila said in the pause, gazing at him with round, fascinated eyes, like a child.

"I'm not going on," Frank said. "But you have to know you must know—that you seem to me the most miraculously—well, I've never known anyone like you! You—I can't help it, I'm crazy about you!

"There's no rush" he went on as Sheila still did not speak. "We needn't tell anyone for weeks. Let me come and take you to shows, let me come over—you don't have to say anything to your mother until this time next month, if you do not want us!"

"Next month—" Sheila said, finding her voice. "I think it's four years before Ma wants to hear the name of McCann!"

Her hands were locked in Frank's big hands; now they were crushed and fingers. "I said her for one last question."

"Sheila, tell me, are you happy?"

"Happy!" she echoed, trying to smile. Tears came into her eyes.

"All right, then. Now this—" Frank said, "this is what we're going to do. We'll run into town, d'you see—my car is right over there—"

"I've been looking at it."

"Right," said we'll have a party. We'll go to a department store and we'll buy all sorts of things for your mother and Angela—and you, too. Mother reminded me of reading lamps, and I've asked if you had an ice cream freezer, and Connie—and there's cups—and towels—everything we like we'll send home. Shall we?"

"Oh but, Frank—" They were standing now, and she lifted the soft tumbled crown of her glittering hair, and the blue eyes over which the coppery bang drifted in a film. "Oh but, Frank, that'd be too much!"

Suddenly he put his arms about her and held her tightly and she looked up in silence trembling.

"You'll have to get used to this!" he said in a whisper.

"Sheila!" her mother called, emerging. They were apart again. "Ask Mr. McCann and he may stay for a taste of lunch an' have some manners to ye!" said Mrs. Carscadden.

"Mrs. Carscadden, you're very good," Frank said, glancing at his wrist "but I've some shopping to do and Sheila has promised to help me. I thought we'd go into town for lunch."

"I'll get my hat!" Sheila said, escaping into the house.

When she came out ten minutes later she looked her loviest in the blue suit with the red blue hat. The hemstitched frill that fell in crisp folds at the collar of the coat had cost thirty-five dollars, but it was plain and fresh; Sheila's shoes were shining, and the chamois gloves and bore were still damp in the tips from recent washing and had been snatched from the sunny back clothesline. Frank did not suspect it.

"You bought your topcoat? Good girl," he said to Ma." Frank approved. "I love that color."

"You ought to—" Your mother picked it out for your sister Monica Sheila reminded him.

"That's all—"

"Suppose you helped?"

"I don't know. I'd like to think I did."

"Well, come on," Frank said. "I'll bring her back to you safely, Mrs. Carscadden."

"I've no doubt you'll try to," Sheila's mother said pallidly.

"Ah, you love me, Mother!" Sheila was as radiant as the spring morning as she kissed her mother.

The black shape is the favrite, Sheila," Mrs. Carscadden said with a resigned sigh.

"And I'm your favorite child, Ma?"

"I may as well say you are," the mother said, "for it may be the last chance I'll have to speak to ye for days! Knows how long! When ye'd walk out of the house on me, Sheila Carscadden! I'm that lost when I'd clap eyes on ye next!"

Sheila and Frank were laughing as they ran down to the glistening, long shining hulk of the roadster. She helped her into the front seat, and Sheila settled herself there comfortably while he came about to his own seat at the wheel. She turned to wave at her mother and sister as she and Frank whirled off into the morning sunshine together.

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 11

The savages lion and the savage man saw Numa's quarry almost simultaneously. Before it came in sight their sensitive nostrils had told them it was a man, and Tarzan's had told him also that it was a stranger. The scent spoor was that of a black, old and male. Above through the gloomy jungle, bow came into view a wrinkled, dried up-weirdly-naked fellow.

Tarzan recognized the headgear of the witch-doctor. The first intimation the black man had that he was in danger was the crash of twigs as Numa charged through the bushes not twenty yards behind him. Before he could turn the lion seized him. At the same instant the ape-man, dropped from an overhanging limb full upon the lion's back, knife in hand.

As he alighted he plunged his knife into the tawny side behind the left shoulder, tangled the fingers of his right hand in the long mane and wound his powerful legs about the beast's torso. With a roar of pain and rage, Numa reared up and fell backward upon the ape-man; but still the mighty man-thing clung to his kill and repeatedly the long knife plunged into Numa's side.

Where he had fallen beneath the spring of the lion, the witch-doctor lay, torn and bleeding, and unable to drag himself away and watched the terrific battle between these two lords of the jungle. His sunken eyes glittered and his wrinkled lips moved over toothless gums as he mumbled weird incantations to the demons of his cult. Numa, clawing and biting the air, struggled fiercely.

GIRLS ARRANGE W. I. PROGRAMME

The August meeting of the Phillipston Women's Institute was held on Tuesday afternoon, August 16, at the home of Miss Monica McCarthy. The meeting was a particularly interesting one as the singing was carried out by the young girls of the community, and they were ably assisted on the large crowd present. Mrs. Billa Ketchenson led the meeting which was opened by singing the Institute Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read, the Roll Call was taken, responded to by "My ambition for the Future." Miss Olive Searles gave a reading "Only a Smile." After the business was discussed Miss Dorothy Hamilton gave a talk on "A Family Menu," which was very instructive. A debate, "Resolved that the country has greater opportunities for pleasure than the city girl" was then learn. The affirmative side was presented by Miss Ruth Brough and Miss Jennie Kennedy, and the negative by Miss Mildred Ketchenson and Miss Audrey Sheffield. All four girls proved to be splendid debaters, with special mention being given to Miss Audrey Sheffield. After much discussion the judges, Mrs. Lorne Robson, Mrs. Lee Ketchenson and Mrs. Milton Robson decided in favour of the affirmative side.

After a delicious lunch had been enjoyed and a vote of thanks presented to Mrs. McAvoy and Monica for their hospitality the meeting was closed by singing "God Save the King."

INJURED SIDE IN FALL FROM LOAD

West Huntingdon, Aug. 22—Mr. David Thompson, Moira, had a nasty fall last Monday. He was hauling sweet corn and climbed to the top of the load, to drive on, when in some unknown way his overalls caught on the end of a peg and he fell backwards heavily, landing on his back and right side on to a large stone. Badly dazed for some minutes, Mr. Thompson lay where he had fallen. Feeling much pained he struggled to his feet and with remarkable pluck continued to work through the day. But Tuesday morning it was necessary to send for a doctor on account of the severe pain on the right side. It is hoped that there was not a break and that a bad bruising is all that our friend has suffered. He is getting about though with discomfort.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating supper, being jam time without dessert, and Pa said, said he pop, I see by the advertisements that men's straw hats are being sold at 50c and 75c this yum, are you thinking of getting yourself another one for the rest of the season?

The old straw lid is bearing up bewtifully, pop said. It's still in splendid shape, with the exception of a few holes in it. I have high hopes of finishing the season with that 3 dollar straw hat in good and glorious feeling in those hard times, he added as an after-thot. I said, but Willyum, it's sure to get yellow sooner or later. No matter how fine a straw hat it is it's only human, she said.

O well, in that case we can rub it all over with a dime's worth of straw hat invigorator and start all it's little duckless glands working again just like new, pop said, and ma said, Well now that's a coincidence, it's a matter of fact I found a sample of hat cleaner under the door step this morning and she held forth would have it you were wearing your soft hat on account of the rain so I decided to give it a trial rite there and then, but as luck would have it there was only enough cleaner for half a hat, so the result is as you can easily imagined than discribed, she said.

But yee gods, couldent you buy another package of the stuff and finish the job, pop said to ma said, Well yes, ordinarily, but you see as it happens I used up the hat that I cleaned is covered with Bolshevik paint, in other words the cleaner seems to of been defective, the name on of it is Stanese Straw Revivor so whatever you do never buy any, she said.

My economical hopes was dashed to, gith, pop said. O well I saw Henry Ford saying in the Sun and Slosson's window and they only want 15 dollers for a new one, always had an ambition to own a Ford, and by golies this is my chance he said and with that he left.

I must say the distance from a dime's worth of cleaner to a 15 dollar Panamaw is from the sublime to the ridiculous, such a man. Meening pop.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT PAID SHOT OF PARLEY

Ottawa, Aug. 22—The Evening Citizen said yesterday: "The Dominion Government has paid the whole bill of the Imperial Conference—the hotel bills of the delegates, the cost of special transport and many lines of incidental expense, including entertaining.

"It was learned however, that after paying everything there will be a neat surplus out of the £50,000 which was originally appropriated for the purpose."

PARLEY'S CONTINUE

OTTAWA, Aug. 22—Negotiations continued today between Premier R. H. Stevens and the New Zealand delegation at the Economic Conference in an effort to reach agreement on certain changes in the Canada-New Zealand treaty passed the first of the present year. Changes proposed are understood to include wool and hide preference into Canada. The Australian and the Newfoundland delegation are also still in Ottawa continuing negotiations.

SCREEN FAVORITES PORTRAY ROMANCE OF BUSINESS GIRLS

The Paramount picture drama, "Working Girls" coming to the Belle Wednesday, for one day, marks the daily life and romantic story. Running through the graphic portrayal of the life and love problems of metropolitan business girls, is the thread of an intriguing love story involving the five featured players of the cast.

The love scenes open with a true-to-life presentation of a young woman's method of choosing a man to take her out, without the dampening effect of a formal introduction.

Paul Lukas, famous on the screen for his romantic roles, shares the leading male honors with Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Stuart Erwin. Lukas has established himself in the screen world in many successes, the most recent being "The Devil to Pay," "The Vice Squad," "Woman Love Once" and "The Beloved Bachelor."

Charles "Buddy" Rogers also ties into the love episodes of the picture. He recently showed marked aptitude for dramatic roles in the "Road to Reno" in which he played the part of Will Rogers' young son-in-law.

Mack Erwin comes into the love scenes as the ardent admirer of Judith Wood. He has been playing funny roles for years, gaining prominence in "Up Pops the Devil," and "Sailor Beware" and "Lie."

Judith Wood and Dorothy Hall, young Hollywood beauties, bring two New York business girls on their first visit to the great city, adventuring in love and romance.

Miss Wood appeared in "Women Love Once," and more recently, in "The Road to Reno." Miss Hall's previous work on the stage resulted in a call to Hollywood. She has appeared in several successes, the latest "Nothing But the Truth."

Brunswarve Wednesday

Jimmie Gleason in "Stealin' Home," a highly amusing comedy of the baseball diamond. "Colored Scales," another of the popular Brunswarve Paradise series, and Metrotone News, with its latest important events garnered from every corner of the world will be exhibited on the same program. Each lady attending the Belle on Wednesday evening will receive a dreamy perfume gift.

Bring 'Em Back Alive"

Sophia you've never seen, thrills you've never known amply describes Frank Buck's "Bring 'Em Back Alive" which closes a highly successful engagements at the Belle today. An Edgar Kennedy comedy, an interesting News reel, a fun story of action and wisdom precede the exhibition of "Bring 'Em Back Alive."

At The Capitol

"ARE YOU LISTENING?"

"IS MY FACE RED?"

When one prehistoric woman for the first time told a neighbor that she was really and truly in love with as a certain cave down the mountain, the beginning of the gossip columnist was born. It was just as much fun then to know something that you shouldn't as it is today. Stonehatchet as it is now to have the knowledge of the whole cave stuffed shirt. And today it is just those opens with a fine presentation of gossip, the Broadway columnist, to speak out or turn about a tangent as it was then to have tipped off something on a prehistoric bad man to the cave's Beloved Bachelor.

Charles "Buddy" Rogers also ties into the love episodes of the picture. He recently showed marked aptitude for dramatic roles in the "Road to Reno" in which he played the part of Will Rogers' young son-in-law.

C.N.R. REORGANIZATION REMOVES 55 OFFICES

Noted British Explorer Drowns When Kayak Upsets Off Greenland Coast

Fifty-Five Officers to Disappear, Reductions Ordered by C.N. Railway

Cuts as High as Forty Per Cent For Executive Offices

STATEMENT

Additional Action Called For by Continued Decline

Montreal, Aug. 24—Further reductions in the official personnel of the Canadian National Railways will be made effective on September 1, according to an announcement made here today by S. J. Hungerford, acting president of the system. Positions will be abolished or consolidated and there will be a lowering in the general average of compensation to officers.

Salary Ratings Down

It is understood that the positions which will disappear number about 55 and that the new revised salary ratings of Canadian National officers will be lower for corresponding positions on United States railroads. The officials of the N. is the largest railway in point of mileage and has gross receipts exceeded by only two system on the continent. As reductions in salary range from 4 to is believed, range from 40 per cent. in the case of the executive officers, the salaries are considerably lower.

Complete Survey

The statement issued by the acting president of the Canadian National Railways was as follows:

"There has been carried out a complete survey of all official and supervisory positions existing on the railway and system-wide.

"The decisions performed by the respective officers have been carefully scrutinized in the light of existing circumstances, and arrangements have been made for the abolition or consolidation of such position as can be dispensed with, without impairing efficiency. Moreover, positions calling for salary payments delayed until tomorrow the staff on an announced non-sleep basis had intended getting away today.

FIRST CHILD BITTEN BY ZOO SEA LION

New York, Aug. 24—The doubtful distinction of being the first zoo visitor ever bitten by a sea lion here befell 10 year old Victor Blazejak, Jr., of Brooklyn.

The sea lion, "Bouncer" became a widower about six months ago and he's been pretty surly ever since. When Victor scaled the rail around his tank and offered him on the head Bouncer took a vicious snap and Victor nearly lost his little finger.

TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIERS' LOGS

(By The Canadian Press)

Anxiety for two teams of aspiring Atlantic fliers was ended today with reports that one plane had landed safely at Harbor Grace, Nfld., and the other had crashed on take-off but suffered injury to the flyers. Both planes were lost overdue.

The plane reported to have crashed was that of Thor Solberg and Carl Peterson, which left Floyd Bennett field, New York, early Wednesday morning. The pilot was said to be so badly damaged that the flight will have to be abandoned.

After a night of anxiety for their welfare Clyde Lee and John Boch-kom, brought their plane down to a safe landing at Harbor Grace. Their next scheduled stop is Oslo, Norway, which will also the destination of the Solberg-Peterson plane.

George R. Hutchinson with his wife, Florida Mae Brown, and four teen assistants, walled five repairs to a camera to get off from Saint John, N.B., on a leisurely jaunt to London. They flew yesterday from New York to St. John.

MANIFESTO IS ISSUED BY CHANCELLOR

Permit No One to Revolt Against Laws of Reich

NO COERCION

No Doubt Manifesto is Aimed at Adolph Hitler

Berlin, Aug. 24—Germany was told by manifesto today the government of Chancellor Franz Von Papen would permit no one to revolt against the laws of the Reich.

The statement came a little more than 24 hours after five Fascist followers of Adolph Hitler had been condemned to death for the political murder of a Communist. The verdict was returned at Beuthen in Upper Silesia, establishing by emergency decree to cope with political violence.

The document was issued to meet a storm of protest that followed the death sentences, including a scathing denunciation of Von Papen by Hitler himself.

Aimed at Hitler

There was little doubt the manifesto was aimed at Hitler, who had declared his Nazis would be able to finish the "guillotine government" and pledged himself to do all possible to free the five doomed men.

Issued jointly by the Reich and Prussia governments, the document stressed the severest penalties for political violence would be invoked "against every law breaker, regardless of person or party."

Emphasizing the governments was not willing to yield to political pressure in considering the cases of the five men, the manifesto ended:

"Violent offences against verdicts should be addressed to the originator of the violence, namely Communism and to the government which in the interest of all had to react to sharp measures. The government will nip in the bud all attempts to tamper with the principles of the constitutional state and incite to political passions."

No Coercion

Before this official answer to Nazi threats or reprisals against the Beuthen verdicts, Chancellor Stresemann indicated it would not permit any coercion or political pressure for the granting of pardons.

Although Beuthen, where the five men were tried, was the centre of Prussian excitement there was no violence today. The situation generally will not not for several days.

Entered Office

One of the two entered the private office and ordered W. P. Robertson and Earl Rafuse to do likewise. Rafuse was "talking life insurance" to the manager and to the subsequent inquest into Prekleton's death.

The manager and Rafuse were then pushed into the staff section of the bank and toward the vault. Rafuse had just left. A third door when the shooting commenced," the manager said. He did not tell who was shooting or what was going on. Hamilton's office door was fired but from the marks on the walls and windows I would say about eight."

Probably never before in the history of Canadian crime has a would-be bandits waited into such a well-laid police trap as the Kashane Cast today won the great Kane handicap by a length, at odds of 9 to 1. Picks Up Time was next and Bow Bells ran third. Both were dead-heated in second place.

Nineteen horses went the distance of one mile and three quarters. Kings Plate was won by Bow to 1 and San Espoir at 100 to 9. Two years ago there was a head heat for first place in the race between Gentlemen's Relish and Coaster.

Rescuer of Courtauld Victim of Drowning In Northern Waters

Angmagssilk, Greenland, Aug. 24.—H. G. Watkins, one of the most distinguished of young British explorers, was drowned today when his Kayak—a one-man Eskimo canoe—upset in the sea.

He was on his 37 years of age.

Watkins rescued Augustine Courtauld from the Greenland ice floe in May after Courtauld, a member of Watkins' expedition, had been marooned for several weeks.

Details of the accident were not available. Watkins was leading an expedition investigating possible sites for air bases on an Arctic air route between Great Britain and Canada.

Despite his youth Watkins had established himself as a distinguished explorer. He held the Royal Geographic Society's medal shortly before he set out on this expedition he became engaged to marry Miss Margaret Rose Graham.

The kayak is a difficult craft to operate. The Watkins' expedition had several especially made and the members went into training to learn how to use them.

Police Have Tip Off on Bank Robbery and Three Taken or Killed in Raid

Ambushed, One Bandit Killed, One Wounded One Arrested

WELL LAID PLAN

Bandits Walked Into Well Laid Police Net

Shubenacadie, N.S., Aug. 24— Police guns blazed out the final chapter of an attempt to rob the Royal Bank of Canada's Shubenacadie branch.

Gerald Preckleton of Halifax, was shot to death in the bank office as he wheeled to fire at ambushed police officers, who had been tipped off to the planned looting.

Edson Boutilier seriously wounded in hospital at Truro, shot down with Preckleton.

Clifford Rice of Sydney, N.S., is held in jail at Windsor.

Preckleton and Boutilier entered the bank shortly after three o'clock in the afternoon. In the porch of the building they pulled handkerchiefs around their faces, drew guns and ordered clerks, Charles Lawlor and Roy McNeil to "throw them up."

Entered Office

One of the two entered the private office and ordered W. P. Robertson and Earl Rafuse to do likewise. Rafuse was "talking life insurance" to the manager and to the subsequent inquest into Prekleton's death.

The manager and Rafuse were then pushed into the staff section of the bank and toward the vault. Rafuse had just left. A third door when the shooting commenced," the manager said. He did not tell who was shooting or what was going on. Hamilton's office door was fired but from the marks on the walls and windows I would say about eight."

Probably never before in the history of Canadian crime has a would-be bandits waited into such a well-laid police trap as the Kashane Cast today won the great Kane handicap by a length, at odds of 9 to 1. Picks Up Time was next and Bow Bells ran third. Both were dead-heated in second place.

Nineteen horses went the distance of one mile and three quarters. Kings Plate was won by Bow to 1 and San Espoir at 100 to 9. Two years ago there was a head heat for first place in the race between Gentlemen's Relish and Coaster.

MARKETING OF 1932 CROP

Arrangements Talked Over by Bennett And Westerners

Ottawa, Aug. 24 (CP)—Financial arrangements for the marketing of the 1932 wheat crop were discussed between Prime Minister R. B. Bennett and several of his colleagues with representatives of the Prairie Provinces today.

The discussions are "highly satisfactory."

Renewal of the 1931 line of credit for marketing this year's crop, it became necessary with the banks, was the basis of discussion. The arrangement under which the 1931 crop was marketed, the three western provinces and the Dominion guaranteeing the current assets of the pools as the first margin of security, the Canadian government also passed an Order-in-Council guaranteeing the additional say loss.

1931 Method Succeeds

The marketing of last year's crop it is stated, worked out very successfully and there is no question as to whether the banks should again require the same line of credit and security this year.

Meanwhile the government is taking the question of credit and guarantees up with the banks. The Dominion government and western representatives will meet again tomorrow morning with a view to concluding 1932 financial arrangements.

Iron Fist is Defied by Storm Troops Staging Demonstration at Beuthen

Government Declaration is Flaunted by Socialists

"FREE OUR MEN"

Make Demand That Five Doomed Fascists be Liberated

Beuthen, Germany, Aug. 24—Enraged by the imposition of a death sentence on five Fascists convicted of political murder, hundreds of Nazi Socialist storm troopers staged a stormy demonstration today in front of the court house where the sentence was passed on Monday.

They turned out in defiance of a government declaration that the iron fist will fall upon all those guilty of political violence. The occasion was the arrival of Captain Erich Klausener, emissary of Adolph Hitler, to confer with defence attorneys in an effort to liberate the condemned men.

In Uniform

Edmund Heines, a Nazi member of the Reichstag and a leader in the Beuthen district, apparently had ordered the men to turn out in uniform. Police reinforcements had difficulties keeping the crowds in hand as it surged through the streets singing Nazi battle songs and shouting "free our men!"

Wilhelm Frick, chairman of the Nazi party in the Reichstag, sent a telegram today to chancellor Von Papen warning that dangerous consequences would result if the sentence of execution of the five men were carried out.

PREDICTS NEW STANDARD FOR CHEESEMAKERS

Patrons of Elmbrook Factory Entertained by Maker

MANY ATTEND

Geo. W. Barr Director of Dairying is Principal Speaker

Tuesday evening at the "Elmbrook," one of Prince Edward County's finest situated and best kept cheese factories, the maker, Roblin Dulmage, entertained the factory's patrons and their families, and the Elmbrook district generally throughout the district, their families and friends. The affair was made fortunate in having Mr. George H. Barr, Director of Dairying, Province of Ontario, as his principal speaker. Mr. Percy Mallory, secretary-treasurer of the Central Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association, also spoke briefly, telling of the foundation, aims and growth of the patrons' organization. The Consoretville trio furnished music for the evening.

Factory Spotless

Elmbrook factory is probably the finest appearing of the county's cheese factories, both in the interior counterparts its exterior, scrupulously clean with its walls nurably decorated by Harold Stapleton of Picton. Tuesday evening's visitors found the factory spotless attending to congregate on the lawn in front of the building. Some two hundred persons found ample accommodation on tuburn-ed cheese boxes, to listen to the various speakers.

Mr. Vandusen, president of the Prince Edward County Cheesemakers' Association, was the most acceptably as chairman of the proceedings, and in opening congratulated the maker on the especially neat and cleanly appearance of his plant. He also ventured the opinion such a capable and painstaking maker in Roblin Dulmage, being called on, congratulated his patrons on their appreciation of the fine work he is doing, crew their attention to the necessity of the consistently supervision of their milk receptacles and carriers, that one should arrive at the factory in the cleanest of condition, also urging the individual maker in producing a cheese free from scalding or burnt curd flavors. The better the cheese, the greater the return would be to producer and manufacturer." Mr. Dulmage concluded by reading a humorous article entitled "Depression" by Charles Mc. Donald.

Geo. W. Barr Speaker

George W. Barr, Director of Dairying in the province of Ontario was the his first visit to the county in a official capacity and he made the day visiting dairying establishments throughout Prince Edward, and his impression of the factories was that he had never seen them in such good condition. The quality of Cheesemakers throughout Central Ontario was improved and they are miles cleaner than this season. New regulations, and "cheesemakers" certificates had been made for the present year and he wondered if these new requirements had not much to do with these notable improvements about the plants. The Minister and Deputy Minister of Agriculture were taking personal interest in dairying and dairy production and were desirous of every cheesemaker the absolute on every for keeping their factories in the highest of conditions, and the factory patrons on seeing to it that everything appertaining to the milk supply be kept clean and sanitary. He had introduced the finest cheddar cheese in Canada and the maker was only responsible for certain qualities of the cheese, to keep up Ontario's standard, the cheese factory, patrons closest co-operation with the maker and provincial regulations was necessary. He had, in visiting factories this year, found more new screening done about the plants than in the past fifty years put together. Mechanical defects were being eradicated, and he was greatly pleased with reports of district inspectors regarding this the present season. Means for cleansing and cleaning milk cans had been made in numerous factories and he trusted soon this standard of hygiene cleanliness self elimination of rancid flavour in cheese, would be inaugurated at all cheese factories.

Predicted New Standing

He predicted that new requirements of obtaining first class cheesemakers' certificates would be made for 1933. A good maker had nothing to fear by this, and it would make either the cheese manufacturer improve or be graded lower on where he belonged. Patrons of factories must aid their makers, he could not produce first grade cheese from milk with dirty conditions existing on the farms. He wanted to see cleaner and purer milk from the farm, and even tidier, busier and more careful workmanship at the factories that Ontario might hold her pre-eminence in the quality of her cheddar cheese.

Reeves Mr. Mallory, the following gentlemen spoke briefly, Mr Platt, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Picton; Mr. Edward Rose, president of the Picton Board of Board; Mr. Cook, cheese exporter of Belleville; Mr. Irwin, District Dairy Order.

At the conclusion of the address-

PROGRAMME IS ONE OF MERIT

Kiwanis Club Royally Entertained by Youngsters

Members of the Kiwanis Club, who have been irregular attendants at the luncheon held through the last two months at the Country Club have missed one of the finest of the season and the one held on Tuesday outstripped all previous efforts. That was as surved by the steward was all that could be desired, while the entertainment supplied by Ernie Pinkie was the best of the year. There was no question but enjoyment: prevailed as a delightful programme was given by Miss Alice Hallatten and Harris, the Betty Long of Brooklyn, N.Y. and Miss Mary Drummond, the club also welcomed Art Claxton, Hillsdale governor, and Mr. A. Small, Kiwanian of Niagara Falls besides Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Long, of Brooklyn, Miss Donovan and Mrs. George A. Lee.

Likely Hold Carnival

At the conclusion of the regular meeting, the members discussed the advisability of holding a carnival this year and a committee was was adjourned, a committee of Fred Deacon, Bruce Allen, William Rankin, Jack McIntosh, Carl Read and Ernie Pinkie, with power to add to their number, was appointed to go over the proposition and report back to the club. Some of the members thought the club would be well advised to cancel the carnival this year on account of business conditions but others argued that it would be a mistake to go by the boards would only be allowing it to fall and interfering entirely. It is almost certain, that the carnival will be held this year, some time in September, although the attractions will be as large as in the past, expenses will be cut considerably. The money raised from this carnival is used exclusively for the furtherance of Kiwanis work and it is by this method the club has of raising funds for its work.

The district governor, addressed the club briefly, when called upon by the president, complimented and complimented the members on their choice of meeting place. He stated he thought it would be to the advantage of the club to close during the summer months as many members were unable to attend regularly. Mr. Small also extended the welcome of the Niagara Falls club to be Club Secretary Rogers. The secretary spoke on the inter-city tilt to be held at the Royal York in Toronto on Wednesday next and hoped that Belleville would be represented. The meeting was then turned over to Ernie Pinkie who introduced the artists, Miss Betty Long, who is visiting in the city delighted with three popular song numbers and two solo dances. Miss Little about only eight years of age is extremely versatile and her applause greeted her effort. She is a pupil of Miss Irene Bowen and the children hours and hours before the grown ups was quite noticeable. Miss Katharine Donovan's dance ingenue of the city is progressing fast in the dancing line and she delighted with two dance numbers, which were executed. Katharine is always a favorite wherever she appears and the thanks of the club extended to her. As usual Leo B. Riggs was at the piano accompanist. Miss Mary Drummond also welcome at the luncheon as a guest and reading in her own inimitable style. Fred Deacon expressed Kiwanian appreciation for the entertainment and this sentiment was voiced by every member of the club.

Laws of Heredity Must be Studied by Doctors To Conserve Well-being

Study Physical and Mental Diseases to Find Basis

Dr. Madge Macklin Deplores Genetics Untaught

New York, Aug. 24.—Dr. Madge Macklin, London, Ont., yesterday told the third International Congress of Eugenics physicians and surgeons effects of heredity in carrying disease from one generation to the next.

Dr. Macklin, who is the only Canadian and the only woman on the programme committee of the congress urged conservation of mental and physical well-being of human beings along the same lines as conservation of fish and game. Montreal, in its Internal Audit Department, where he was highly valued. He had a summer home at Lake St. Louis, where the death occurred by drowning.

"Not until we have a medical profession as conversant with the laws of heredity as applied to physical and mental diseases as they are with the use of the surgeons knife and with prescribing drugs, will we have a safe basis for controlling conservation of the human race," she said.

She deplored the absence of teaching of genetics in medical school curricula and urged adoption of courses in the study hereditary during the last year of medical students' training.

Dr. Macklin will speak before the International Congress of Genetics at Cornell on Saturday on "statistical evidence of inheritance of cancer."

Mrs. M. Hawley, Centenarian Of Trenton, Dies Tuesday

Deceased One of First Settlers in That Community

Trenton, Aug. 24.—(Special) — Mrs. Narinda Hawley in her hundredth year passed away at her home on Marmora Street, Tuesday. Mrs. Hawley was born in Ireland moving to Trenton, when a young girl and has resided here ever since. Her husband the late Albert E. Hawley was one of the first settlers in these parts, the old Hawley estate taking in the property of Dundas street from the river back as far north as the railroad on the east side of the river. In less than one hundred years the old Hawley farm was changed from green fields into a busy business section and residential district. Mrs. Hawley is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. C. Bagley of Trenton, and Miss Hawley of Trenton. She was a member of St. George's church, and always took an active part while able in the work of the church.

The funeral service will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. following which interment will be made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The pall bearers will be grandsons of the deceased.

CONTINENTALS LOSE 1ST ONE

Frontenacs of Kingston Have Edge Winning in Trenton 7-6

TRENTON, Aug. 24.—(Special)—The Continental Life dropped their first game of the playdowns with Kingston Frontenacs on Tuesday night 7 to 6. The largest crowd of the season turned out to watch the Continentals take the measure of Kingston and they were not disappointed in the sloppy playing of the insurance men. The game was poor on the part of both teams, each having a number of glaring errors. At the start of the game things looked easy for the strong Continental team but the Kingston boys began playing loose ball but the Continentals started the same kind and held them one better.

Calverson in the box for the locals pitched superb ball but was not receiving any backing from the infield. Hawley and Bell were the main stay on the attack against the visitors but were disappointed in the pinch hitting of the gamesmenery with Bews on. In the fifth, the Continentals had the game five to two and seemed to be coasting along to an easy win but in the seventh the Kingston pushed three men around to go into the lead and added two more in the ninth, while the Continentals failed to tie the game up.

The line up to Kingston Thursday and it is to be hoped that they play better ball there than they did at home. Any of the teams, that were in the league during the season's play could beat Crowe's men in last night's game.

Line-up: Kingston.—Bellringer 2nd; Bews 1st; Gowsley p; McMahon rf; Mackenzie 3rd; Wilcef; Roberts if; Dougall ss; Simpson c.

Continentals — Chambers 2nd; Carty as; Jordan 1st; Rutan rf; Calverson p; Bell 3rd; Johnson if; Kidd c; Culverson p.

Score by Innings:

Kingston.....003 000 300 7

Continentals.... 002 000 001 6

Umpires— Mack, Reynold; Bases Purdy.

EIGHT SHIRTS ARE FILCHED

Wife Left Them on Line All Night, Gone in Morning

Trenton, Aug. 24 (Special)—The expression "that a person would give you the shirt off their back" sounds all right but when they take the shirts off your clothes line all night and until they get them on your back is a different story as one Centenary College St. can testify to. His wife having done the weekly washing on Monday morning hung the clothes out to dry and looked for them when out all night, in the morning eight of the ten shirts had disappeared. Seven of the shirts left in consideration by the thief or did he think that eight was enough for use. The police are investigating the matter.

FRED JOHNSON

Trenton, Aug. 24—(Special) — Mr. Fred Johnson age 51 died at the Belleville Hospital on Monday. Mr. Johnson was born in London, England, and came to this country as a boy moving with his father, he spent the greater part of his life coming to Trenton fifteen years ago During the past ten years, he has been with the C.P.R. railroad.

The surviving members of the family are his wife Mrs. Edith Johnson, two sons Leslie and Maynard and one daughter, Thelma, all of Trenton. Also one sister, Miss Margaret Johnson of Trenton. Mr. Johnson was a member of the I.O.O.F. for a number of years and the local lodge will attend in a body. The funeral will take place at 2.30 Wednesday at the Presbyterian church, interment to take place in the Evergreen Few advertisements in your newspaper start that way. Yet most of them are just as personal, and almost as promising.

Manufacturers and merchants must know your needs and wants, or go out of business. They must know, for instance, that a woman who next month you'll be very much interested in a new hat, new dress, new shoes, or a new lamp, or new toward or many other articles, useful or ornamental besides the week-end prices on food products. They must foresee your wishes—and have what you'll want when you want it.

And they do—constantly striving to suit, at the lowest possible prices. Then telling you in advertising of the gifts they have brought from the far corners of the earth, to please Your Royal Highness.

Children Now Hanker After Glorified "All Day Sucker"

SOMETHING NEW

No One Yet Has Figured How Long One Will Last

"Aw, nerts," that twentieth century expression which fails so readily from the immature mouths of babes in the classrooms, and at ugly from the elders as well, who seek some snappy retort to the wisecracking sallies of the corner schoolers, might be an epithet in the sense of the word, yet it is mere description of the times and the manners which now surround us. Manners, it has been said, have stripped the city from one end to the other.

One's sense perception need not be so very keen to detect the delightful fragrance that rises high above the musty odors of exhibitionism down Broadway, and the acrid tang from the mufflers of motor vehicles, both ancient and the sleek town reresounds with the crunch and snap of a nut eating populace literally goes crazy, and the attendant swells, which follow the breaking of the shell. Each store has its assortment of delicious varieties of Mother Nature, garnered from far off lands, roasted and toasted and salted, and then spread in tempting array in bellboard boxes to catch the fancy of the young and induce the feathering of pellets of the old. For, whether you like them or not, like a mystical incense their fragrance permeates and holds you to the counters, where they are so plentifully heaped. Then another customer is found to join the ranks of the ever army of munchy nut chewers, for among all the plain and fancy varieties of the shell enclosed delights, ranging all the way from Barbados, cocoa, walnuts, hickory nuts, pecans, hickory nuts and so forth, the humble peanut from Virginia takes no second place. In fact so great is the demand for the bin-skinned, triple-jointed peanuts of circus fame, that they are now done in the cellophane wrappers. You can count the joints through the package.

But among all this sudden storm of peanut rivalry, which whirl circularly in the strengthening gales, and which are strewed haphazardly in the aisles and corridors of public buildings throughout the city, has arisen another peculiar and unique built especially for the younger folk, but nevertheless appealing to those to whom mature tastes, too. Real Big Babies.

Now we have the glorified "all-day-sucker." More windows are loaded with them, from the security of their plate glass protection they vend their wares in full array, surmounted by blobs of candy, which make many a passer-by's peptics shudder with acute attacks of jitters. For, oh, the colors of the rainbow. Colored like old fashioned agate alleys. Striped with all the variations of the most modern barber pole, and flavored with all the succulent tastes of the Arabian nightmare. Full pound or so stomach aches all for a nickel or a dime.

Once are the days when you as a little boy, or a little girl, sneaked off to the corner and threw your hard earned cent down on the wooden counter of Mr. Glotz grocery store and received a good, big

WEED LOSS 40 MILLIONS

The National Research Council of Canada has issued a pamphlet, "Weeds and their Control," a popularization of the subject. The wide distribution of weeds with the consequent heavy losses for which they are responsible is stressed, the worst weeds being widely adaptable as to soil and climate. They are even invading the recently settled areas in the Peace River Country district.

Weedy crops of wheat are reduced from nineteen to forty four per cent. The average rate of say eighteen per cent in the prairies, means a total loss of forty million dollars through wheat, oats and barley, to which must be added the loss of keeping the weeds within bounds by additional cultivation, the cost of threshing, handling, shipping, annually the equivalent of 95 trainloads of sixty cars each of weed seeds, cost of dockage, and other losses.

Weeds, it is no wonder, offer one of the greatest spiritual lessons in Scripture, for yields of 900 pounds of mustard and 1200 pounds of stinkweed seed per acre are often reached in heavily infested fields. The cure or control is 4½ per cent solution of sulphuric acid at the rate of 75 to 100 gallons per acre. For control of wild oats, chemical solutions above avail. As they germinate to a depth of 12 inches, shallow cultivation, preferably in warm dry weather after the plants have reached a height of four to six inches, is recommended. Hay and pasture crops, barley, green-feed harvested before the wild oats are matured, control this weed. Perennial weeds must have their roots starved by preventing top growth. As the bulk of the root system of nettles cannot be reached by deep cultivation.

Precautions are given in the use of chemicals to kill or control weeds, on account of fire hazard.

Poverty weed is one of the pests which is successfully dealt with in small patches. Compiled black summer fallow for more than a year is necessary for the complete eradication of the weed.

The common weeds of the west were once rare in the early days of agriculture on this continent. Hence there is need of farmers familiarizing themselves with every new weed which is first easily combatted. Sample of such weeds should be sent to the nearest agricultural college, experimental station or to the Department for identification.

Leafy spurge is now becoming a real pest. The hoary scress and the Russian knapweed are other menaces to the crops.

Silage, feed and manure are contributing factors to the spread of weeds.

TRACKING CRIMINALS WITH PLASTER CASTS

Frequently found at the scene of a crime are many bits of evidence, such as footprints, tire-prints, tool-marks, teeth-prints, wheel-tracks, and numerous other material clues.

All of these are perishable, and yet this very evidence will serve to indentify the criminal in court, says M. L. J. Kaempfer, in Hygeia (Chicago). We read:

The use of casts and molds has been of value in various fields of science to preserve in natural shape and size an object of importance. This process which at the present time is called "moulage" is extremely valuable in criminal investigation. Tracks in soft wax can be just as identifying as finger-prints.

If a door has been jimmied in the course of breaking into a building, there will remain along its edges marks produced by the tool employed. Casts of these marks can be made and compared with the suspected tool in determining its identity. Heretofore it was necessary either to saw out the part of the door involved or to remove the entire door for court demonstration. Alphonse Poller, an Adstrian, is the creator of this method. His untimely death in 1930 constituted a terrific loss to the world of science.

COMMENTS

Taking a book or two of philosophy out of a San Francisco store without paying for it because he was hungry for food and for knowledge brought a youth into court. The magistrate was equal to the occasion and sending the boy, gave him a dollar so that he might not be hungry.

This was thirsting for knowledge. It reads like the incident in the Barrie play when a young man breaks into a library and spends hours at night reading books which the family of the house and others respect but do not read. That library episode ended in marriage and ultimate membership in the British House of Commons, in a drama-way of course.

"Dad, what is a polyglot?"

"My boy, your father had to leave school and go to work long before he ever got as far as geometry."

LOOKING OUT
By Alin Michaelis

When you at last can understand
How brave your brothers are,
Your faith will take you by the hand
And lead you to a star.

For when you turn your vision out,
Away from self always,
To view the whole wide world about
And search its varied maze,
To note the unfamed heroes there,
How fine, how wise their deeds,
Then you will lose all thoughts of care,
All frets for little needs.

When you have known these other men
Who go so staunchly on.
Youwill be heartened once again
To face the darkest dawn;
For you will know you, are heir
To gifts for which you grope,
You, too, in life's great dowers will share,
Its courage, trust and hope.

MONTREAL WILL HAVE one hundred per cent eclipse of the sun Wednesday afternoon, August 31, while Toronto will have only about ninety-one per cent partial which gives Montreal quite a jump on the Queen City. Perhaps Toronto will claim that the ninety-one per cent partial eclipse in order to make better visibility for Toronto Fall Fair visitors. However, President Bob Mitchell says Riverville Grounds are not the best possible place to see the eclipse, high, dry and unobscured by trees or mountains or the big opinion some people have of themselves. Riverville farmers have more of the eclipse than Toronto without the totality of Montreal and folks hereabouts will need to select a good point of vantage for it will be many years before such an opportunity occurs again. Where the eclipse is total one hundred seconds will be occupied by the partial eclipse. An eclipse of the sun is caused by the moon getting between the earth and the sun. The moon casts a great cone-shaped shadow on the earth. At the point of this shadow the eclipse is total; outside that comparatively narrow track it is only partial. The shadow will be visible first about 2.15 and will finally disappear about 4.28, but at no time during the eclipse will there be total darkness here. The next eclipse is scheduled thirty-one years hence. Here's a description of an eclipse written by one who noticed much during the few seconds the eclipse lasted:

Awe-Inspiring

"When the last trace of the sun has disappeared (in the belt of totality) and the moon's shadow has engulfed the spectrum, the scene is awe-inspiring. Often the temperature drops, sometimes dew falls, strange breezes spring up, seemingly different from the breezes of normal day or night. Flowers close, birds go to rest, animals in the fields and woods seek refuge, cattle grow restless and dogs often set up howls.

"The sky is only about half as bright as that of a full moon. Often the darkness is so intense that it is impossible to tell the time by a watch. Far off on the horizon an orange afterglow effect is seen; it is the weak sunlight shining on the world outside the path of totality.

"Overhead, the eclipsing moon seems to hang in the heavens like a giant cannon ball, with apparently nothing to keep it from falling on the earth."

DO YOU FEAR TO BE ALONE IN THE DARK

Many Adults do Not Admit Their Nocturnal Fears

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

Most grown-ups are afraid of the dark than they are willing to admit it, and of course this fear is very common among children. It is usually during infancy and early childhood years that people respect the dark and night in general are developed, and for this parents are usually to blame.

For a child does not begin life harboring such a fear. An infant will sleep peacefully and without a sign of restlessness in a thickly dark room, and indeed, that is the way children should sleep, even when they use but a light burning is merely admitting to them that there is something to know about the dark.

Usually it is only after children hear silly stories about the boogy man, hobgoblins or ghosts that they become timid and afraid when left alone in the dark, or harassed to venture into it.

Adults make a grave mistake when they use the dark as a means of frightening or covering a naugh ty boy or girl. Not only is this child scarce when he hears from his elders, his reasoning not being developed enough to form a valid judgment that can combat such stuff and nonsense, but in his unimagination he enlarges upon it and makes more than a mountain of foreboding place than was intended by those who tried to scare him.

Children can also be subjected to terror-stricken over the dark, and this sometimes becomes serious as great and usurps the child's thinking to such a degree that it produces a serious nervous disorder.

The dark to be sure, is full of shapes when sunlight is absent or the lights are out. It is so easy to people dark places with all sorts of grotesque and even hideous figures, that often one must make a deliberate effort to stop the mind from racing on in such a way.

Again, the dark harbors the unknown, and the fear arising from time immemorial has been awe-inspiring. We feel that something may happen in the dark, and usually anticipate that it will be something sudden and unforeseeable.

Another reason why darkness is upsetting to many of mild is because it deprives us of sight. Not to see with the eyes shut is natural enough, and therefore does not bother us, but not to be able to see with the eyes open is quit a different matter!

If an adult suffers from this fear it is best to try to trace back into the early days of his or h s possible cause. Having been shut in a dark closet as a form of punishment is one of the commonest causes. Some such cause always can be found, although it may not have been a definite fright or shock. A story or a book may be to blame, and there are many other possibilities.

The greatest care should be taken to bring up children unafraid of the dark. If a child shows hesitancy about venturing into the dark alone, he should be taken by the hand and gently led, proving to him that nothing is going to jump out at him or grab him. It is a good practice purposely to send children on errands to dark rooms, and after a while they are proud of their achievement.

The dark is restful and consoling after we become used to it. One can think more clearly in the dark; when really, with its disturbing changes that claim our attention, is blotted out.

In short, learn to like the dark yourself, and above all else, don't let your children grow up in fear of it.

MORE WHEAT TO BE SHIPPED FROM CANADA

MONTREAL, Aug. 24.—As a result of the six cents a bushel preference granted Canada by the United Kingdom in the agreement signed at the Imperial Economic Conference, millions of bushels of Canadian wheat that has formerly been shipped via the United States will now be exported from Canadian ports, J. H. Rainville, President of the Montreal Harbor Commission, stated yesterday. He declared that the agreement would result in a great increase in the handling of grain in Montreal, Saint John and Halifax.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 24, 1912

Mr. G. H. Bennett left today for Toronto where he will spend the next couple of weeks.

Miss Beasie Duckworth left this morning to visit friends in Toronto.

The cadets selected to go from this city to the Toronto National Exhibition are: S. Nurse, S. Minns, C. Adams, K. Bunnell, P. Jose, L. Wright-myer, F. Plumpton, V. Doolittle, H. Williams, G. Delong, F. Rayfield, R. Armstrong, G. Pauley and R. Woodley. They will stay in the Queen City as the guests of the management for ten days or more.

Mr. Frank Thompson has returned from a successful fishing trip in North Hastings.

Mr. Miles Frost of Syracuse, N.Y., is visiting his home in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wheeler, James Street, are visiting friends in Kingston.

Messrs. H. L. Moore, B. Huff, G. Covey and A. Bell of this city were in Kingston yesterday.

Mr. Harry Wallace and Mr. Wm. Clarke of Port Arthur, are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Wallace, South John Street.

AUGUST 24, 1902

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Aylsworth have returned to the city from Rochester, N.Y., where they have been visiting friends.

Mr. J. A. Orr, proprietor of the Sudbury Journal, is the guest of Mr. Jas. Orr, Veranda St.

Miss Elizabeth Worrell, North Front street, has gone on a visit to Philadelphia with her brother, Rev. George Worrell and his family, who have been spending the summer here.

Mr. Dr. Meacham, who recently returned from Japan, is in the city the guest of ex-Mayor Curtis Bogart.

Mrs. J. B. Cleak of Bancroft found a gold nugget about the size of a small bean in the crop of a hen which she killed recently.

Mr. E. W. Milburn of the Bank of Montreal, Peterboro, is spending his vacation in the city.

Dr. Harry Burdette of St. Paul, an old Belleville boy, is renewing acquaintances in the city.

AUGUST 24, 1892

Mr. C. E. Lyons, barrister, is in Cobourg, yesterday on business.

Mrs. Norman W. Phillips left yesterday for Montreal on business.

Mr. Charles Nosworthy and Mr. Wm. Ketcheson are enjoying a few days' recreation at the Sandbanks.

Mr. Charles Chandler of Montreal, is visiting his sisters, the Misses Chandler at their home on William street.

Mr. and Mrs. Shanklin, who have been spending the summer in the city, have returned to their home in Chicago.

There will be a quoit match in the court house yard to-morrow afternoon. Game will commence at 1.30.

Phil Hart will show his St. Bernards at the Kingston and Toronto bench shows.

Manager Jack E. Ketchenson says that there will be a large number of entries at the horse races here on Aug. 31 and Sept. 1st.

50 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 24, 1882

There were many row boats on the bay last evening. It was truly a delightful night to be upon the water.

Messrs. Jacob Kelso, D. B. Robertson and Wm. Webster have gone on a fish trip to the Georgian Bay.

The lawn festival tonight on the grounds of W. H. Ponton, Esq., in aid of the Women's Christian Association, should not be forgotten.

A large quantity of fruit was stolen last night from Mr. Geo. Bull's garden on Coleman Street. These nocturnal raids on gardens in the city are getting more and more frequent. Something should be done to put a stop to such actions.

And now the farmer smiles as he gazes upon his immense crops, and sighs as he reflects that as other farmers have immense crops too, the prices must soon tumble. Life is full of misery.

The street car drivers struck for increased wages yesterday. They were paid off and their places filled with new men.

FIRE THREATENS ENTIRE VILLAGE

Vivian is Now Entirely Surrounded by Wall of Flame

WINNIPEG, Aug. 24.—The village of Vivian, 40 miles southeast of here, is almost entirely surrounded by fire, North east and west, the flaming muskeg threatens the little hamlet and all available men and even some of the women have dropped their chores to wage a fast and night battle with the advancing menace.

Practically no rain has fallen in the district all summer and the undergrowth is tinder dry. Already the line of fire has swept over the farms of some of the settlers and although none of their buildings have yet been destroyed. They have suffered heavy losses in hay and other crops destroyed, and fear is expressed the flames may reach the village unless rain intervenes or the wind shifts from its present reach.

At Hadashville, 40 miles east of Vivian, the flames are under control, after a light shower last night aided bands of besiters, who had been working night and day over the week-end. The danger in that area is said to be practically over.

CAN ABSORB 25,000 HORSE POWER AT ONCE

Toronto, Aug. 24.—The Ontario Hydro Commission is ready to take delivery of 25,000 horsepower, October 1 from the Beauharnois Company and is in a position to absorb it without difficulty, officials stated here last night. The October delivery would be the first of a series of blocks to be laid down between now and 1937 under the Hydro's contract with Beauharnois.

Commissioner Eyland enquire said tonight that most of the additional power will be used to provide relief to consumers in the eastern part of the province. Much part of it may be routed through the Leaside converter station later.

DELAY FLIGHT ONE DAY ACCOUNT OF WEATHER

New York, Aug. 24.—William Uhrich, Dr. Leon M. Piculli and Miss Edna Newcomb today postponed their hop-off on a proposed non-stop flight to Rome. They had announced their intention to get off at dawn, but adverse weather reports caused a delay until tomorrow at dawn.

WRESTLER ARRESTED FOR UNLAWFUL ENTRY

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 24—A few minutes after the Coleman of Winnipeg, Man., threw Floyd Marshall of California at last night's wrestling show here, he was taken into custody by detectives on a charge of being in the United States unlawfully.

Police Captain John Carry said Coleman has been in this country since 1928 and recently was arrested in Cleveland for being in this country unlawfully but was free under $500 bond.

ORIOLES WIN DOUBLE BILL

Defeat Leafs Twice to Even Series Played

(By Associated Press)

Much of the credit for keeping the Montreal Royals in the International League's first division belongs to Orvell Chase, clever pitcher.

Chase stopped the onrushing Newark Bears 3-2, with six hits yesterday for his 18th victory of the season against this string of victories he has lost 10 games. A remarkable record when it is considered he is toiling for a club that has won very few more games than it has lost.

The left hander has been one of the hardest working hurlers in the league. He has pitched 224 innings in 38 games, allowing 218 hits. In complete games he ranks well up in the list with 14.

He had to be at his best yesterday for he drew Johnny Babich as an opponent and Murphy was in form. Chase took a two run lead in the first three innings but the Royals came back with one in the sixth and won in the eight, when Ivy Shiver clouted his fifth homer with one on. Shiver, incidentally, had scored the first Montreal run after he had tripled in the sixth. Murphy granted only seven hits and fanned five.

The Baltimore Orioles wound up their last trip to Toronto by knocking the Leafs from contention, 9 to 1 and 2 to 1. The Orioles pounded Ray Walker and Earl Cook for 14 hits in the opener, while Cunningham was finishing the job for Clancy. The second game was a pitcher's duel between Sugar Cain and Jerry Abbercook with the former holding a slight edge. The Orioles bunched three of their seven hits for one run in the second and then scored what proved to be the winning tally in the third when McGowan, who had collected four hits in the first game, led off with a single, reached third on Kelly's office and eventually scored on an unfield out. Cain gave Toronto only four hits.

All the other clubs were idle.

SPORTS

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Yesterday saw the Intercollegiate Football Union of Canada teams in yearly schedule for the first time in years Toronto Varsity opens the season against Queen's on Saturday 8th, while Western Ontario opens the season on McGill, Here's a little problem "The Bisons and While have been under a deep dark cloud of late years but will have a feeling that the cloud will "break" this fall." Maybe not, but wait and see.

When one speaks of football it means cooler weather, and cooler weather makes one think of golf. There are many of the local powers to be have made a recent move towards the betering of the Toronto Maple Leafs to Belleville for fall training schedule or not. Even Oshawa is now in the field and are making a heavy bid for the Leafs to train in the Motor City.

It might be appropriate to mention that the Leafs have not done that disappointed when we heard that New Toronto had changed from the "Cabana Dukes". Those celebrated intermediates in the West Toronto loop sure were "laying so the dog" during the season and we have always liked to see seen a pool season series in the O.B.A.A. play-downs between Oshawa and the winner of the C.O.B.L. It is our honest belief that the winner of loop winner will experience little difficulty in getting into the Toronto club into camp in the play-off series regardless of the fact that the C.O.B.L. winner may have to play every day this week.

This afternoon the Belleville Victorias, winners of the Bay of Quinte intermediate league, play in Deseronto, the Tyo men to play in Belleville in the play-off series in Belleville last Saturday by the score of 11 to 4. The winner of the series will be sent to Aylmer to play the Aylmer Imperials for the championship of Eastern Ontario with the Kingston Frontenacs.

Steady Work of Bailey.

The steady battery work of Lewis and Galna for the Fruit Insists was one of the main reasons by which the locals were returned ultimate winners of the Kingston softball diamond was fast and the locals took advantage of its fine playing. Both Lewis and B. McGuire hit the only two home runs of the game, one for the Guire, at short for the locals galloped herself to four safeties and two of which was a double. Pat Finger and Helen Smith starred for the visitors in their team. For the homesters Marion Grass, Marion Walker and S. Forbes starred.

B. Frederick started on the mound for the Fruit Insists but he to Marion Walker in the sixth frame after five runs had been scored on her in the fifth frame. The game was keenly contested throughout and following the game, it was decided to play the third and deciding game of the series in Belleville on Thursday or Friday evening.

TABLES TURNED ON KINGSTON

Belleville Fruit Even Series by Defeating Frontenacs 13-5

Showing a complete reversal of form, the Belleville Fruit girls' soft ball team defeated the fast Frontenacs by the score of 13 to 5 in Kingston last evening.

The Babe Lewis, Galna locals mile hurler, gave the town's share of the victory as the little lass fanned Trenton Fruit to heights at times to subdue the hard hitting Frontenacs. Besides pitching excellent ball throughout Babe whitfied 10 batsmen swiftly and failed to give a single base on balls.

The Belleville Fruit players exhibited themselves in the field by making many sensational catches out off runs, when the occasion arose. The final play of the game supplied by Doris Bladed was without a doubt the feature play of the night, when the scrappy little Belleville batsman of the Fruit team leaped high into the air to catch a line drive and pull her team out of a bad hole. The entire Belleville Fruit team played splendid ball and by virtue of their win are now tied in the first play-off series for the championship of Eastern Ontario with the Kingston Frontenacs.

DOESN'T WANT WIFE TO FLY

Mollison Hopes She Will Not Attempt West Ocean Flight

New York, Aug. 24—Captain James A. Mollison, arriving by ship, reported plan of his wife, the former Amy Johnson, to duplicate his feat of flying solo westward across the Atlantic.

His only comment when he heard that his bride had given an interview to a London paper, in which she outlined a plan to fly from Britain to New York and then return —as he plans to do—was: "I don't expect to see Amy flying, but I do hope she will not make such a trip."

Winds Cause Delay

Mixed winds about half way across the Atlantic from Harbor Grace, Nfld., which will be Capt. Mollison's taking off point from this continent, changed his receive to contrary winds return trip today. Fogs were reported over the Great Banks and the sky was said to become more overcast and mixed with wind. The youthful aviator is undaunted by this but prefers a wind from the west to assist him on his flight. Capt. Mollison reported off Cape Newfoundland, they shifted to south very slowly 1,500 miles away.

"I won't go until it is reasonably clear at night, and I am fairly well rested," was the way Mollison explained.

Capt. Mollison yesterday inscribed his initials along the line of his log book which he will keep with him in the headquarters of the American Geographical Society, where the inscriptions of Col. Lindbergh, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and other pioneer aviators.

Mr. Merle Todd Visits Many Stirling Friends En-route to Coast

STIRLING—Mr. B. O. Lott of Sidney, attended the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Rook, of Toronto on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Morley Ayrhat and Baby Anne, accompanied by Mrs. George Lucas and her children, Mrs. John Rosebush motored to Port Hope on Wednesday where the latter is attending the wedding of Mr. Ayrhart of the Hydro Electric staff has been transferred to Port Hope.

The largest shipment of hogs delivered at Campbellford stockyards this season came in on Friday last, by S. Covert's truck from Mr. J. Hamilton's farm, Seymour. The load consisted of twenty hogs weigh ing 3,740 lbs., the price being 84.75 per cwt. Not so bad for a beginner!

Mr. Bazzard is a nephew of Mrs. Covert's and Miss Hume and has only been farming on his own for somewhat over a year.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Orrigal are moving this week to Madoc to live.

Mr. J. S. Marshall and Miss Iris were Stirling callers on Thursday.

Mrs. Alex. Hume of Sumbeam Lake, Miss Marshall of Harmony spent the ten hour with Mrs. Russell Marshall on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ketcheson Jr.son, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ketcheson Sr. Park, in fact they brought Mrs. Park home after having been a visit there.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Linn of Monument Hill, Mrs. Edmund Linn and Mrs. G. F. Linn, Mrs. Arthur Linn of Queen's Park, Toronto, remained over Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Linn, Stirling, after motoring home from Pembroke where they were the relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sarles and Mr. and Mrs. A. Richmond spent Sunday in Tweedsmuir.

Mr. Everard Drewry, wife and daughter Cynthia, Bay of Quinte and Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Drewry of Quinte, Mr. and Mrs. Lockhart motored to their respective homes on Sunday after a two weeks visit with Mr. and Mrs. Gardner, Mrs. George Drewry.

The burial service of the late Mr. W. J. Graham of Toronto, formerly of Stirling, was held in the Rural Cemetery on Friday afternoon. Many friends here will sympathize with Mrs. Graham and daughter who survive.

Mrs. Harry Johnston, who died suddenly in Trenton, was an uncle of Mrs. Ernest Hubbs, Stirling.

Mr. Merle Todd of Wellman's who is on the teaching staff of Fenwick Public School, has just returned from a motor trip of some five weeks' duration to the Pacific Coast with a friend of his. Right thoughout the trip Mr. Todd was in all, the young men spending six nights, via Minneapolis on the journey of Calgary.

The first stop of any length of time was made at Winnipeg where Mrs. and Mrs. Neil White, relatives of Mr. Todd, entertained and he spent some time in Fernie, B.C., with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Will Todd, formerly of Burnbrae, going on to Vancouver to friends there. He was much impressed with the beauty of the country on the way through especially Lake Louise, Jasper and Stanley Park.

In the Okanagan Valley so beautiful with fruits, apples especially, which are now in season, he spent some time with the numerous irrigation units.

While at Calgary he visited Mr. George Mack, a former resident, who is employed at High River and where he heard Rev. Alex. Rannie, President of the Alberta Conference of the United Church preach, and who is a former Stirling boy. While there, a trip was made to the Prince of Wales' Ranch, from which was a most interesting sight. Turner Oil Valley was also visited, where 200 wells are producing the gasoline flows continuously. From the gasoline is extracted and the dry gas is piped a short distance from the well and burned, making a most spectacular sight; from a certain point in the valley as many as 200 flares can be count as many as twenty-five of them being gasoline wells. This is considered a great waste and the Conservation Board are considering the matter that the flow must be curtailed; when Mr. Todd viewed it the flow was not being so much effected. He reported the crops good, especially in the Calgary district.

In the absence of St. Paul's Parsonage folk on their vacation their thoughts of Sunday evening were poisoned on Thursday night after the Rev. Mr. Hall had left the manse, who was feeding the dog in the absence of Mrs. Hall, when according to the kennel on Friday morning they had disappeared and on investigation the dog was found stretched out at the back of Mr. Hamilton's garage. A veterinary was immediately called but the dog had been poisoned with a powerful poison which had strangled the dog before the poison had taken effect on the stomach. How any one could make away with such a faithful dog as a well-behaved and scarcely ever barking dog is a mystery, also the owner's property is a mystery, also the motive what was the incentive for a cruel act on a harmless, dumb animal for there is a penalty under Section MP. "Every one is guilty of an offense and liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding five hundred dollars over and above the amount of the damage, or one year's imprisonment with or without hard labour, who attempts to kill, wound, maim, poison or injure any dog, bird, beast, or animal except cattle, which is two years' imprisonment."

Airmail Service Siscoe-Pascalis

Air mail service between Siscoe and Pascalis, in Quebec, will be established on or about September 15th. It is announced that the first flights the Post Office Department will issue special stamps which will be affixed on letters carried on the first flights from Siscoe to Pascalis or from Pascalis to Siscoe, provided they are sent to the District Superintendent of Postal Service at Quebec.

Those who desire to have air mail carried from either Siscoe or Pascalis on the initial flights should have their letters reach the District Superintendent of the Postal Service at Quebec not later than September 12th.

The envelope or cover of the letter must bear the indication "Via Air Mail Siscoe-Pascalis, P.Q." or "Via Air Mail Pascalis-Siscoe, P.Q." as the case may be, under the name of the addressee and the address. This cover must carry the proper air mail stamp at the rate of six cents for the first ounce. The letter and the cover must then be enclosed in an outer cover or envelope addressed to the District Superintendent of Postal Service at Quebec. The purpose of this outer cover also carrying stamps at the ordinary rate for letters, is to have attached the special cachet in connection with the flights.

For instance if a Chicago man wants to have a letter reach him self via this night, he addresses the letter "via air mail Siscoe-Pascalis, P.Q." or vice versa, gives his address as Chicago not to Pascalis or Siscoe and encloses this in the envelope to the Superintendent as directed above. Further information for those desiring to have letters carried on this flight may be obtained at the local post office branch.

ADVERTISING for the MERCHANT of TO-DAY

Conducted by HAROLD S. EDGAR

A series of weekly articles on advertising and sales promotion being prepared for the merchants of Belleville and district by members of The Ontario Intelligencer.

ARTICLE NO. 17

More About Up Grade Merchandising

The question is often asked — why continue to spend millions each year to advertise a product so widely distributed and so well known, and Wm. Wrigley, Jr., Chicago.

"Tell em quick and tell 'em often. You must have a good product in the first place and something that people want, for it's easier to row down stream. Explain to folks plainly and sincerely what you have to sell, do it in as few words as possible—and then tell them often enough."

"Advertising is pretty much like running a furnace. You've got to keep on shoveling coal. Once you stop the fire goes out. It's strange that some people's imagination can't compass this fact."

A merchant told me the other day that he did not believe in doing any advertising, for he had a list of over 1,000 names and was going to him for years. He was blind to the fact that many of those old customers were gradually dropping off, or dying and more and more the balance was becoming appealed to by the advertising of other merchants. To be successful in business today you must be continually adding to your list of customers as well as holding up new business. As I have said before the man who is standing still is really dropping behind.

Another merchant in commenting on his plans said, "As the business is going at present we are not going to make a profit for the year and we will be lucky if we break even." Could a man be more blind? Do not think for one moment conditions are going to come back exactly as they were before the depression. The fact we need to consider a further substantial increase of advertising as soon as we can manage to commence it if we are to hold our own.

Many people seem to be busy trying to get business. No one likes to do business with a doleful merchant, and a busy appearance, even though it may be only imaginary, will create a favorable impression. Do not think for one moment conditions are going to come back exactly as they were before the depression. "Your windows, are they frequently dressed? Do people stop and look at them expressing admiration of your goods? Are they the talk of the town and story? Inside the store, are you making the best use of the display in the location of the goods and the relation of the products to each other?

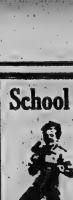
The lighting of your windows, do you light them early in the evening and leave the lights on late? Do people on the street think the store is not open), it usually is worth more than it costs.



Are the store inside bright and cheerful? Are you holding down your light bill?

I cannot emphasize too strongly that it is essential for you to study your store and see if you cannot easily make changes that will make for better display. Study your shelving — your counters — your windows — your advertising. Study other stores and other advertising, not necessarily in your size or even your own type of business, but study them all and look about you for ideas.

NEXT WEEK—DRESS IN BUSINESS

DATES OF CONCERTS HAVE BEEN FIXED

LONDON—Dates of concerts to be given by the London Symphony Orchestra at Queen's Hall this season have now been fixed. This follows a breakdown in the negotiations for an amalgamation of interests between Sir Thomas Beecham, the Coutauld-Sargent Concerts, the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra and the London Symphony Orchestra.

The first concert will take place October 3, and will be conducted by Sir Hamilton Woodward of Dunedin. His program is unusual in that it is entirely made up of one work—namely the first performance in England of an orchestrated version of Bach's "Art of Fugue" (Die Kunst der Fugell). This was Bach's last work and it has for long been regarded simply as a theoretical work.

180 years this extraordinary work has been arranged for orchestra by Wolfgang Graeser, a German scholar.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Summer-Worn Complexion

Sunshine makes a girl feel happy and look worse. Taking inventory of feminine faces at bathing beaches and other outdoor spots where the dear beauty rather brings one pretty clearly to the conclusion that there's no such thing as a "beautiful tan". It may give been a fairly decent pigment when it was first laid on, but now it looks very, very tired. It is disintegrating. Some of it is sticking, some is giving up. The tortoise shell complexion is an Autumn curse. It will soon be with us.

If the complexion looks as if it can stand more exposure to the rays of the sun and you are one of those reckless don't-care persons, then postpone the whitening treatments. But if leatherettes has already set in, it is not too soon to go conditioning.

What many girls don't understand is that exposure to strong tanning burning sunlight has an effect other than putting on putty-brown tints; it changes the texture of the skin, coarsens it, destroys delicacy of structure, in fact turns a pretty skin into a certain copy of the complexion of an old lady.

To the sun we can be thankful for only one complexion help; its rays produce sweat and sweat cleanses pores. Black-heads that are in fine feather in the winter season are shadows of their former ugly selves in mid-summer. Perspiration is an effective and successful pore worker.

It's no good starting on a bleaching process unless there is to be done a bit of complexion coddling, protecting with a brimmed hat, and look worse. END OF THE ROAD

By Lela Parks Murrell

Never had the Kentucky hill regions looked more beautiful; never had life seemed sweeter, nor the desire to live been more keen to John Tidwell than on this morning when he fondly kissed his wife, Lola, and his three-months' boy, and with an axe swung across his shoulders and blithely whistling, he started to the field to work.

When out of sight and hearing of the house, his whistling ceased as thoughts of happiness came quickly shut off. Grave fear and despair settled upon his features. From its place of concealment in a clump of bushes he drew forth his shot-gun, slithered down the stump well screened by the bushes, he carefully cleaned and oiled his gun and loaded it. Blotching a trace of sleuth about his heart he walked on to a piece of timbered ground and pushing the gun against a tree set to work clearing up a field. But he was like an automaton so far as his work was concerned.

As swiftly and anxiously as his eyes travelled to the grey ribbon of a road that wormed through the rugged hills, so ran his thoughts. He could not bring himself to tell Lola that the night before he had talked to in the darkness last night in front of Cain's cabin had come to warn him. The Gaither brothers, Jack and Jim, were out of prison. They had hunted up old Joe Gaither, an Uncle, and were out to get him for the part he had in the killing of his son.

Tidwell was flabbergasted, and almost the completion of an old feudal quarrel that had been smouldering ancestors, so long ago that the actual cause had been nearly forgotten—over a Tidwell had shot and killed a Gaither. The oath of vengeance had been handed down from father to son until the three Gaithers were the last surviving males of their clan. "And young John Tidwell was the last surviving male of his name."

With the imprisonment of the nephews Wade Gaither and Joe Gaither leaving the neighborhood at once, young John had figured that the feeling would dwindle and cool—forgive, if not forget. But he had wished to forget it. But they were back, and before witnesses had sworn to kill him on the old code.

It would be three against one when they came—today, perhaps or tomorrow, or next week. He would always be the dread. He was no coward to stand facing the issue but it was as a cold sickening dread gripping him; because he found life good and he wanted to live to it.

"Why had it to be?" he groaned in anguish of soul, as his mind flung things belonged to an antiquated race, to ancient history. He had been always so much above hate. He had learn cool, ambition filled him. With the knowledge that he had gained, he would make the rough, infertile acres of his land produce as none other about him had done. Thanks from other mountain folk—a coarse illiterate lot—had a more effect upon him than raindrops bestowing upon the parched soil. He thought of Lola, the pretty mountain flower he had wooed and won two years before. He had not known that two could be so blissfully happy together as they were, and when he baby was born, his baby boy, with his head almost about the news at the top of the world to enter one with whom he came in contact. Then, quenching his proud joy, for all the heinousness of fate; it was a boy and would have to take the accursed feudal oath!

As the sun mounted the zenith, he paused in his work and removed his hat, letting the breeze blow through his dark curls. His stalwart body stood straight as an arrow, the ideals of the mountain country, and in his dark eyes smoldered the fire of a fighting race, unbeknown to him he was wanting to live. Over the region that he had come to regard as love since birth, his restless gaze wandered. Again it searched the road, simultaneously with the appearance of a black speck upon the hill slope.

He watched the dark object as it bumped along the rutty, grey ribbon of a road. Watched until it grew near enough for his keen sight to recognize the occupants of the topless battered old flivver. It was the three Gaithers! Soon they would cross the railroad track that ran near. Soon they would turn up the narrow road that led alongside his field—

Uneasily he reached for his gun. His hands trembled a little as he took aim. Then braced himself behind a tree which only half hid his form.

He came the Gaithers, unkempt, determined, grim faced men, their guns resting upright at their sides. The noonday passenger train suddenly swept from around a bend and sent out a shrill screeching signal for the crossing. The signal seared in John Tidwell's ears like the trumpet of doom, and straightway he knew that the drama about to be enacted.

The flivver turned the car slow down the steep for the train to pass. The train puffed on smoke from the engine blurring for an instant the little prayer twitched his lips.

Then the flivver leaped forward. A terrific crash smote the air, a sound that shook the earth and echoed in his mind until his dying day. There was a wild scream, the screaming of brakes as the train came to a standstill. For an instant his nerves were stilled. Then leaped and pounded madly in his veins. What had happened? Had the Gaithers' train move on? Stumbling a little, he started forward to the scene of carnage.

There was close to the track, but stopped dead still," volunteered the fireman. "Must have left the car on the track and it caught under the clutch."

It was the hand of providence" murmured Tidwell, not realizing he had spoken the words aloud.

"Eh? Yes. 'Smighty bad!" mumbled the deeply moved engineer.

INDIAN GIRL HAS A CHANCE

Stiff Competition in Women's Swim This Year

Toronto, Aug. 24.—When the women swimmers of Canada compete in their 10-mile grind at the Canadian National Exhibition, Miss Margaret Ravior, Philadelphia, will enter the water favored to repeat her wins of last year and 1930, according to local swimming experts, however, she will face the stiffest kind of competition.

Ruth Corbett, strong and courageous Toronto entrant, is expected to make a good bid for possibilities honors. Other amateur contenders include Gertrude Ederle, Miss Canada, 1931; Miss Englich Channel; Lillian Copplestone, New Zealand star, who claims to have gone in the distance in 9½ minutes faster than Miss Ravior's best time, and Dorothy Nalevaiko, Glen Cove, N.Y., United States amateur champion distance champion and Lisa Commandini, 17 year old daughter of a Chippewa guide at French river, who came down here to train some weeks ago. Spectators watching her as she approached the end of her training yesterday were surprised by her speed and easy style in negotiating the distance and coming in the $4,000 prize money.

KIRKPATRICK—DURLING

Campbellford — Miss Beatrice Rhoda Durling, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Durling of Toronto, and George Arnold Kirkpatrick, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kirkpatrick of Woodstock, were united in marriage at the cricket ground evening at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs: Clifford E. McPaul, Hillier, Ont. The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. F. G. MacTavish of Campbellford, beneath a beautiful arch consisting of a huge white bell surrounded by pink and white streamers and banked by multi-colored gladiolias and fern. The bride entered the room to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Mrs. J. Mackintosh. The bride was beautifully attired in a floating white chantilly lace dress trimmed in ermine.

Her hat was a drooping white shepherd hat gloves while mauve and her shoes white kid. She carried a bouquet of white sweetheart roses and babybreath, tied with white satin ribbon streamers. Miss Mila Morris, was gowned in a long blue ruffled net dress over a white taffeta slip and carried a bouquet of pink and satin slippers. She carried a bouquet of pink and white gladiolas. The best man with Mr. Hugh Murray of Woodstock. The bride left by motor, to contain crepe ensemble with brown hat and accessories. The gift to the man was cut cuff links, to the bridesmaid a sterling bracelet, to the flowergirl a sapphire brooch. There were guests present from Woodstock, Windsor, Hamilton, Burlington, Toronto, Weston, Belleville Campbellford, Osseeon and Glenvillle. After a short honeymoon in the Rideau Lake district Mr. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick will reside in Ottawa.

THOMPSON—GIBSON

STIRLING — (Special) — The marriage took place Wednesday, August 10, at 10.30 a.m., at St. Andrews' Manse of Ruth Olive Miss Gibson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gibson, Edmonton, formerly of Rawdon, to Mr. Arthur Thompson, son of Mr. and Mr's. John Thompson of Menlo. Rev. J. N. McLeod officiating. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Storey of Trenton, sister, and groom's only sister, were the attendants.

The bride's costume was seal brown chiffon velvet with turban of the same with accessories, gloves, hose and shoes to match, amber beads. She carried Sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Brady was gowned in flowered chiffon, with corsage of roses and a corsage bouquet.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Jas. Matthews, where a dainty buffet luncheon was served. Only the immediate members of the contracting parties were present. Later, the happy couple left, by motor through Quebec and the Adirondack Mountains, returning in about two weeks to reside at the groom's old home in Menlo.

The bride's travelling suit was of beaver, Fox fur and brown hat. Their many friends join in extending them a very happy married life.

A man convicted of house-breaking said he had nothing to say in his defence, the judge could think of only one sentence.

GRATEFUL MOTHER'S LETTER

"With my last baby," writes Mrs. William McLean of Ebro, "and I have a family of eight children, I was only able to nurse him for about four months, and then naturally turned to Eagle Brand to bring him along. He was a normal infant all the way, but after starting him on Eagle Brand he gave me little or no trouble, eating regularly between feedings, and grew to be such a happy, contented little fellow. He cut his teeth without difficulty and has not had a sick day in his life. Wherever I go, people admire him and say 'What a lovely baby,' and ask me how I feed him. Eagle Brand is highly thought of in our home, and I recommend it to every mother seeking a satisfactory food for her infant."

BRAVERY OF DECKHAND SAVES TWO CHILDREN

Toronto, Aug. 24—Bravery of Lucian Linard, deckhand, saved the lives of two children yesterday.

As the boat on which he was working passed through Peter's Canal at Centre Island, Linard saw June and Albert Taylor struggling in the water beyond their depth. When he threw them lifebelts the children ran out of reach. To reach them, Fully dressed Linard dove to the assistance of the children.

ROMANTIC PLAYERS LEND ZEST TO TENSE SCENES IN PICTURE OF METROPOLITAN LIFE

Many personalities and a score of Hollywood's most beautiful actresses appear in the cast of Paramount's picture drama, "Working Girls", the latest feature at the Belle tonight only.

Paul Lukas, who leads the cast, plays the part of a romantic scientist who becomes involved in a pair of small-town sisters seeking careers in New York, and, with Lilyan Tashman, has her biggest role since Paramount signed her from the New York stage. Miss Tashman plays the part of the other sister, and is featured comedy characterization.

Frances Dee, spotted for major selection who played Sondra Finchley in "An American Tragedy," has the part of Lukas' fiancee, a wealthy fiancee. Joined with the featured actresses are Priscilla Dean, Judith Allen's Vaughn, Gretta Gould and Dorothy Burgess, the working girls.

Dorothy Stickley, who played Molly in "The Front Page" on Broadway, makes her first bid for screen honors in "Working Girls." She, with Mary Forbes and Claire Dodd, play the principal character roles.

Others in the cast of nearly two-score speaking parts are Marjorie Gateson, Harold Huber, Tyrone Power, Lowell Sherman, Mitchell Ayres, Guy Sherman Edith Arnold, Marion Byron, Lisa Gore, Grace Mitchell, Shiela Manners, Sue Gomes, Ruth Chanding and Jane Keeper.

"Working Girls" Director Wallace Ayres's latest production, is from the screen play by Zoe Akins, Paramount writer and author of the Broadway drama hit "The Greeks Had a Word for It."

"What Price Paris" a highly amusing comedy, "By the Light of the Silvery Moon", a sing-song delight, and Paramount Pictorial will fill out the entire bill.

Tonight is Giveaway Night at the Belle.

IS MY FACE RED?

Straight from the shoulder, Hollywood writes its most entertaining phenomenon of personal comment in modern journalism with "Is My Face Red?" a production that dynamites column conventions.

A swift-moving drama, sparkling with wit and excitement, it is fashioned around the life of a brilliant cast, which includes Helen Twelvetrees, Richard Cromwell, Robert Armstrong Arline Judge and Xavi Cugat.

In keen, incisive fashion, the picture lays bare the secrets who battles family skeletons on the "hot seat," tears him from his pedestal and plunges him into the pit of his own creation. His career is destroyed by the scintillating scandal which holds breathless interest and then, unexpectedly up to the smashing conclusion.

His headlong this type of columnist without gloves. "Is My Face Red?" at the Capitol Theatre, does a section with playful and entirely unsympathetic character. The gossip columnist is Helen Twelvetrees, is a weak-buckling, dashing figure who nevertheless has certain charm, audacity and courage his better moments.

This columnist's chief fault is egotism and a lack of ruthless in assessing the notoriety upon which it feeds. He is fearless, even to hand slapping the truth about a speakeasy crusher, when he knows that doing so may mean his death. In a way, he is true to the journalistic principle that the story is the thing 'at-all costs.

The final picturesque flare of his snatching which now provides a climax which will cause "Is My Face Red?" to be remembered and talked about when most current pictures are forgotten.

Miss Twelvetrees gives a sparkling performance as the columnist's show girl sweetheart and scandal scoop, and Jill Kennedy is outstanding as a society beauty who runs afoul of Richard with him in a "personally conducted tour of the gutters."

"Is My Face Red?" will please everyone and should not be missed today or Thursday at the Capitol.

Tonight is Glassware Gift night for the ladies.

The supporting programme includes "When Summer Comes" a very funny comedy, "Movie Memo" an entertaining novelty, Ripley believe it or not" and a current event.

METAL SHARES MOVE UPWARD

New Price Peaks Established on Stock Board.

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—Base Metal Shares, establishing new price peaks for the year and current advance, featured action on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchanges Market today, balance of the list losing ground in face of increased offerings.

International Nickel and Noranda provided brisk movements. Standing up 80 and 75, respectively from last night's final despite some profit-taking towards midday. Falconbridge retained a net gain of 12 at 31 and Sherritt Gordon was up a few cents at 40.

Golds were a set section. Malartic Gold Fields added 36 to 818.26, Dome 10 to $12.05 and Granada, Wright-Hargreaves and Pickle Crow finishing 4 apiece.

In the Great Bear Lake Section Eldorado moved up to 1.85, while Algoma Mining and Dominion Explorers both put on 5 cents each. Oils were irregular, Vacuum Gas dropping a half and Homestead a cent.

Sales for the first two hours totalled 211,000 shares.

LEADERS DOWN FROM PEAKS

Profit Taking Noticeable in Early Hours of Trading

TORONTO, Aug. 24. — While hardly up to the record breaking pace of yesterday's torrential session trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange in the morning hours today showed appreciable activity, with transactions approximating 20,000 shares compared with 30,000 yesterday. Prices drifted again higher, although profit-taking brought the list down from their peaks around midday.

International Nickel was the leading gainer, up a new high for the year of 78 at 1-2 and a noon price of 77 1-2, a net gain of 2-3. Consolidated Smelters reached the previous top of 78 and dropped back to 76, unchanged.

C.P.R. lagged behind by the pace of Nickel and lost a fraction to 16 1-2.

Yeast and Brazilian Traction were taken in increasing amounts at fractional higher prices.

International Utilities A was up 6 1-4; International Utilities A preferred 2; Canada Cement Preferred 5; Laura Secord A 1 and Moore Corporation A 1.

N.Y. TRADING IS TRENDLESS

Early Afternoon Shows Tendency Toward Weakness

New York, Aug. 24—The stock market appeared weighed today from the effect of reaching new highs for the recovery, and stumbled about confusedly in quiet trading. The list showed considerable weakness in the early afternoon.

Efforts to bid up some of the lower prices issued, while profit taking was going on in several of the traditional leaders met with limited success. A few isolated groups were higher, with the bad coal railroad issues registering some sharp gains. Coppers and merchandising issues had an interval of strength.

Moreover a number of issues which sold off 1 to 3 points were American Telephone, Columbian Carbon, Allied Chemical and U. S. Steel common. U. S. Steel preferred showed early 4, then lost part of it. National Dairy advanced 4, to a new 1932 high. A number of the coppers and merchandising issues got up 1 to 2 points, but failed to hold up well in the later selling. Prices generally were irregular. Sears and National Biscuit rose 1 point or less.

The midweek business statistics were mildly encouraging, showing a slight increase in electric power production for the week ended Aug. 20. A number of traders, however, appeared to be willing to take profits, regarding more decisive indications of seasonal business pickup as premature. The ebb of steel production as reported by "iron age" took the edge off encouraging comments by chairman Taylor of U.S. Steel. Nevertheless, substantial pickup after Labor Day is still confidently expected.

HUCKSTERS AT OTTAWA?

Magazine Truth Bitter, Calls A Very Absurd Busy Body

London, Aug. 24. (C.P. Cable) — Under the heading "Ottawa Huckstering," the magazine Truth declares Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of Canada, has only half succeed in bringing the Imperial Conference from idealistic heights down to the level of the Canadian lobbies.

"The British ministers," it says, "soon found themselves breathing the syphilitic atmosphere of Dominion politics in that happy hunting ground of industrialists on the lake. From the Times which did its best to save the face of the conference was obliged to expose in decorous terms the amazing Bennett methods of negotiation. Bennett was encouraged not only by the fantastic but unrestricted publicity by the unofficial super-Imperialists, including the absurd busybody Amery."

"SKINNER" NO NAME FOR BANK GOVERNOR

London, Aug. 24—Today's newspapers, still buzzing about Monsieur Norman's visit to the United States, commented guessing as to the reasons for the journey of the governor of the Bank of England.

"Whatever his mission," said the Daily Express, "we can only wish him the best of luck. Americans distrust our financiers enough as it is without the governor of the Bank of England nominating himself as financier. Norman travelled to the United States as "Prof. Clarence Skinner."

The Labor'te Herald suggested Mr. Norman was secretly making a loan. Otherwise, it asked, why should he commit Great Britain to an eventual return to the gold standard.

LIQUOR EVIL ELIMINATION

President Hoover Says 'All May Not Agree on Method'

Washington Aug. 24—President Hoover considers himself on common ground with the prohibitionists in his desire to rid this civilization of the evils of the liquor traffic.

He made this statement in a letter to Dr. Daniel A. Poling made public by the chairman of the allied dry forces for prohibition. Poling had telegraphed the president asking for him for re-election, and in making public the chief executive's reply made under the signature of Mr. Hoover his endorsement of Mr. Hoover. The President's letter said: "We are on common ground in a desire to rid this civilization of the evils of the liquor traffic. "We may not all agree on method but I have come to Save . . . through Spending

Not many of us, these days, are troubled with so much money that we cannot spend it. But we ARE interested in spending the money we have, to get the most out of it.

One way—and not a new way, either—is to make a budget. Put down, week by week, the money that comes in. Put down beside it, week by week, the money that goes out. So much for food, so much for clothing, so much for rent. So much for giving, and for luxuries.

It won't always be easy, of course, to stay within the budget. That's where advertising helps you. Advertisements in this newspaper tell you how much rugs, butter, breakfast foods, dishes, homes, automobiles will cost, BEFORE you go shopping! They point out ways to save money. They show you how to cut a little here, a little there. And each day, they tell about new inventions, new products, new ways of doing things, that help make this life of ours very much worth living.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 24—Trading on the Toronto Livestock Market was slow today, with light offerings in all the classes. Prices remained steady with Monday's close. Cattle trade opened slow; calves firm; hogs firm; sheep and lambs unsettled.

Receipts—Cattle 500; calves 200; hogs 500; sheep and Lambs 610.

Lettners were all bought. There was no movement on weighty steers. Medium to good, butcher steers sold at 4.50-5.90 with a few choice at 6.15. Good butcher cows sold at 3.25-3.50. Bologna bulls brought 1.75-2.00.

Choice veal calves brought 6.50-7.00 with common downward to 3.50. No grass calves offered.

Hogs brought 4.65 f.o.b. 4.90 off track and 5.15 to 5.25 off cars.

Good ewe and wether lambs had prospects for 5.75-6.00. Few sales on sheep made above $2.00 per cwt.

L.O.B.A. PICNIC AT 12 O'CLOCK PT.

Stores and wooded groves of Trenton's Glenora Park present an ideal setting for members of the L.O.B.A. and friends and families who journeyed to that location Wednesday afternoon, to participate in their annual picnic. A large number left the city at 1.30 in some buses belonging to the Rawson bus line and intend to spend the day taking part in the programme which has been laid out by those in charge. Loaded baskets of lunch which were packed by the ladies in the order were an integral part of the equipment which was taken by the picnickers.

SOLVED!

● Gillette solves, believe it or not, a problem that has baffled metallurgists for years. We have just developed a secret automatic process for achieving uniformity of hardness in razor steel. This method typifies the skill that makes the Gillette BLUE SUPER-BLADE possible.

The Blue Blade is made in addition to the regular Gillette Blade and in the green package.

Picton Fair Opens Gates With Large Exhibits and Interest

Classes Well Filled With Horse Racing Feature

Picton, Aug. 24—This afternoon, (Wednesday) saw the opening of Picton Agricultural Exhibition of Prince Edward Agricultural Society, which will hold its 73rd year by-gone affair, concluding tomorrow (Thursday) night.

Tuesday night saw all exhibits in place, in readiness for the opening day. Exhibits began to flock in and arrived early this morning, though not a few exhibitors had brought their animals yesterday and were busily preparing them for the show. Competition will be especially keen in the cattle and horse classes this year, judging by the entries, and all of the county's outstanding herds are represented. This is a great Holstein country and these animals, of course, predominate with dreamy second.

Horse classes are open to the province and are well filled. Driving horses are especially numerous and will hold a session on the track today and tomorrow.

Beautiful Exhibits

The Crystal Palace is an interesting place to view some wonderful displays of flowers and plants, striking exhibits by local florists, exhibits by local merchants, a section given over to arts and handiwork, another filled with ladies' work and their very large section filled with dainty home baking, bottled goods, etc. The building is filled with the aromas of music from the radios.

The grounds are gaily decorated with flags and bunting.

In the fruit building one sees practically every variety of apple, plums, grapes, pears, etc. A long table is given over to the display of the field and garden. Seed and grain entries are especially numerous. Corn is especially tall having had plenty of moisture this year.

P.S. Exhibit Attractive

The Public School exhibit is very attractive and here one sees exhibits of art, writing, composition, manual training, serving, etc. Mr. Fred Wilson, principal of Picton Public School is in charge.

The poultry classes were eliminated last year but are back again with a bang.

The sheep and swine pens are all filled with prize winning animals.

All about the grounds booths and concessions are dotted and they seem to do a good trade in spite of the so-called depression.

Tonight, Midway is very good and well patronized. It includes a merry-go-round, caterpillar, ferris wheel, mix-up and fun-on-the-run, a shooting gallery with a stinging black bear, a Hawaiian girl show, a collection of freaks and oddities, Jungleland, and a glass show as well as many concessions, games and booths. Here, bright lights, gay chatter, music, horns, shouts, and jostling crowds hold sway.

Three Races Each Day.

The starter for the three races each afternoon is Roy Brothers of Stratford, well known horseman.

Teams who are battling for the softball championship of the county are Demorestville, Wellington, Bay of Quinte, Bloomfield and Consecon.

Bankers of Picton, Cities Service of Picton, Imperial Oil Company of Picton Moose, Bloomfield and Consecon Creams are playing both afternoons. Each member of the winning team receives a sweater as a prize.

Picton Citizens' Band are in attendance and presents a delightful program with their gay uniforms S. S. Lockyer, Conductor.

Dr. Stevenson, Provincial Zoologist, has a booth relating to pests, rabies which is of special interest to farmers.

All that is needed to make the fair a success is good weather tonight and tomorrow.

Officers and directors responsible for this year's fair are as follows:

President—Gen. R. R. Hepburn, Picton, 1st Vice-President, Geo. Hooe, Woodrow. 2nd Vice-President, E. M. Herrington, Picton Secretary, Geo. Hepburn, Picton Treasurer, F. W. Minaker, Picton Directors—S. P. Dodds, Woodrow; I. F. Fraser, T. O. Crandall, E. J. Healy, F. J. Webster, Howard Leavens, H. S. Collver, F. B. Minaker, A. E. Calnan, Major Welch, W. S. Mallory and Wm. E. Calnan, Picton; Fred H. Hubbs, Bloomfield.

WILL ROUGH IT IN THE DESERT

Women Will Depend Wholly on Their Own Resources

London, Aug. 24—Lady Louis Mountbatten and the Marchioness of Milford are leaving England next week on an adventurous trip into the Sahara Desert. They will take with them neither companions, servants nor luggage.

The trip may occupy many weeks and the means of transportation they will use will include trains, ships, airplanes, horses, mules, camels and their own feet.

"We want to get away from people, towns and hotels," said the Marchioness. She is 36 years old and her companion is 31.

The two travellers intend to depend wholly on their own resources and to enjoy unrelieved "roughing it."

FRIENDS MOURN DEATH OF PICTON YOUNG MAN

West Lake—Mrs. Percy Suddaro and daughters Thelma and Meta are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Mullin-ger and other relatives here.

This community was shocked, when word went round of the death of Mr. Kotz, son of Mr. W. E. Knox of Picton, while bathing at the Lake Shore House beach on Friday. It is said that the young man was a good swimmer but a heart seizure was the cause of death. He was employed in Regina, Sask. and was spending his holidays with his parents in Picton, for whom much sympathy is felt.

Mr. D. Maitland returned on Friday from the Wesley Coe hill district) where he had spent the past week with friends.

Mr. Harry Pooley of Bloomfield was heard with pleasure at the United church on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yardley have have moved back to their home here.

Eugene Irwin has been visiting at the home of Mr. S. Brooks, near Bloomfield.

Mrs. Fisher arrived on Friday from Detroit and will visit with her husband and children for a couple of weeks at Mr. Maitland's.

The beautiful flowers at the church on Sunday were arranged by Mrs. Clayton Eggleton in memory of Miss Finley S. Hyatt.

Mrs. O. Buttingham is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. John Heffer.

ACCUSED MAN FLEES

Goshen, N.Y., Aug. 24.—Joseph Quinn, also known to police as D. F. Dunbar, indicted for the murder of two special policemen, escaped from the Middletown County jail here today. He was accompanied on his flight by Winsor Bliss a trusty.

Summer Complaint

"I have found Baby's Own Tablets the best of all children's remedies for Summer Complaint, Colic, Teething and Constipation," writes Mrs. Georgina Walker, Thomasburg, Ont. Certificate of SAFETY in each 25c package. More than 1,250,000 packages sold in 1931.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER I

Mary Faith sat burning her bridges. For three years, almost four, she had been waiting to burn them. Waiting to give up her room at Mrs. Puckett's family hotel in River Street. Waiting to tell Mr. Mark Nesbit, the head of the Nesbit Mercantile Company, that she was planning to give up her position as his private secretary also. As soon as he could find a girl. Waiting to let her small world know that she was going to marry Kim Farrell at last.

For three years, almost four, she had been engaged to marry Kim Farrell.

For three years she had worn his modest diamond on the third finger of her left hand, and had spent a part of every lunch hour embroidering guest towels and table runners for the home that would be Kim's and hers some day.

"If you don't get married pretty soon," Jean Bartlett, the head stenographer at Nesbit's, would say to her less than a week before, "you'll own enough linen to start a department store or a linen shop! I don't believe in hope chests or anything like that. There should be a law against them.....Too many girls find them. Drive disappointment to the bitter end of them instead of blushing brides!"

Mary Faith had not answered her. She had only looked at her with a clear, untroubled eyes and smiled. She had no doubts about Kim Farrell. He loved her and she loved him. And so she was willing to wait for them.

And then late last night, as if to tempt Mary Faith, Kim had suddenly turned to her in the lamplit dimness of Mrs. Puckett's old-fashioned parlor and asked her when she would marry him.

"Why—in about two weeks, I think," she had answered him as soon as she could get her breath. "You see, I'll have to tell Mr. Nesbit I'm leaving, and it will take me a few days to break his new secretary in to do my work.....Kim, to think of us really getting married in two weeks! Why I never knew anyone could be so happy as I am right this minute!"

Long afterward it came back to her that he had said nothing about his own happiness that night.

At breakfast she had told Mrs. Puckett that she was going to be married on the first of October.

At noon she had broken the news to Jean Bartlett, who was half expecting to step into her shoes at the office.

It was half past five in the afternoon now, and Mary Faith was standing at the door of Mr. Mark Nesbit's private office.

She had something for him to sign—to sign and push the door knob in the other.....It was going to be hard to push that door and walk into the office to tell him she was leaving Nesbits at the end of the month.

She had worked for him for four years—one year as a stenographer and three years as his private secretary. The place itself was like home to her. She had come to love the big, shabby offices with their cork-covered floors, their green-shaded lights and their high, narrow windows that faced the west.

The people who worked in them were her friends—all of them, from Jean Bartlett down to Stanley Odeski, the office boy. There was not one of them whom she was not going to miss in the new life that lay just ahead of her.

With a keen little sigh she turned the door knob and walked into Mr. Mark Nesbits office. He was standing with his back to the room, looking down into the parking space at the side of the building and fidgeting with the window shade.

At the sound of the door closing he swung round and met Mary Faith's eyes. Her deep steady eyes were like Mary Faith herself, some how. You could not look into them without seeing that you could have on her always for honesty and goodness.

They were dark blue, fringed with heavy lashes, and they would have given a certain beauty to even a plain woman. But Mary Faith was not plain. Health glowed in her cheeks and lips with a rose-red flame that left the rest of her face to the dusky whiteness of her skin, to the blackness of her brows and lashes. Her dark hair swept up from a widow's peak on her forehead and her lips, when she smiled, had the tilt of flying wings.

She was not smiling now. Serious and silent, moving like a breath, she came across the thick carpet of the office and laid her letters down upon Mr. Nesbit's glass topped desk.

"I can mail these on my way home, Mr. Nesbit," she said quietly as she stood beside his chair, watching him sign his name to them one by one.

He had nice, clever-looking hands, she thought, watching them move across the papers in front of him. She had always liked his nice, homely face, his dark, kind glance, his firm, pleasant way of giving orders.

She knew that he was a bachelor and that he was only thirty-four years old. She knew too that he was making tremendous success of the business that had been left to him by his father.

But neither his money nor his attractive bachelorhood had ever had any power to stir Mary Faith. For she had met Kim Farrell just a little while after she began to work at Nesbit's and since that time there had been only one man in the world for her—Kim.

"Mr. Nesbit," she said when Mr. Nesbit had laid down his fountain pen and was looking up at her and the letters, "Mr. Nesbit, I want to tell you that I am going to leave at the end of this month."

He turned in his chair and gave her a sharp frowning look.

"Leaving?" he repeated. "Leaving? But why? Don't you like it here? Things suit you here?"

"I'm going to be married on the first of October, Mr. Nesbit."

He went on frowning at her a moment or two longer.

"Married," he said finally in a flat colorless voice, "I see."

"I'm sure Miss Bartlett can do my work. And I think she'd like to have the position," Mary Faith went on. "If you decide to give it to her I'll be glad to show her—or anything she'll need to know, before I leave."

She waited for him to answer her; but he only looked at her with his long sit- her with puzzled, curious look in his eyes.

The room was very still. Outside the half past five whistles began to blow. The office building standing in the building banged twice. In the outer office Stanley Odeski began to whistle "The Wedding of the Winds." He had been whistling something like it all day long.

"I'll be sorry to leave," said Mary Faith, with a nervous little catch in her voice, "I've enjoyed working for you, Mr. Nesbit."

Still he said nothing, and there seemed to be nothing more for her to say. She turned to go, and at the same moment movement Mr. Nesbit gave a start as if he were waking from a deep trance.

"Wait a minute" he said, "I—I suppose I should have been expecting this. But the fact is that it takes me completely by surprise. Somehow or other, I've never connected you with the idea of getting married and going away."

CHAPTER II

He got out of his shining mahogany chair crossed the office and held the door of it open for her as she went out—a thing he never had done for her before in all the time she had worked for him. A thing that no employer ever does for his secretary or for any other person who works for him, as Mary Faith knew very well. It was as if he had forgotten all at once that she was his employee and was seeing her for the first time as a young beautiful woman.

Her own little room opened off his office. Her desk stood against the wall that faced his door. She sat down at it and pen and letters he had just signed into their envelopes.

When she raised her head from her work a moment later he was still standing in the doorway looking down at her in that same puzzled, frowning way.

"Did I tell you that I'm sorry you're leaving?" he said. "I meant to if I didn't. I'm going to miss you Miss Faith.....He seemed to be on the point of saying something else to her then suddenly he changed his mind apparently, for he shook his head and went back into his own office, shutting the door of it behind him.

He was still in it when Mary Faith left a few minutes afterward.

She knew that he would miss her when she left Nesbit's. She, in addition to her regular work, she did all sorts of little odd jobs for him. Every year she sent out his Christmas cards. She picked out the presents that he gave to his mother and his two sister on their birthdays.

When he was too busy to leave the office at noon she always sent Stanley Odeskaki out to buy a bottle of milk and a sandwich for him.

She kept at her all the people he did not want to see; and by some miracle she did it without hurting their feelings. There was no doubt that Mary Faith had a way with her when it came to dealing with people. Almost everybody liked her. She was more than a secretary to Mr. Mark Nesbit. She was the guardian of his comfort and his peace of mind all day long, six days a week, year in and year out..... Of course, he would miss her.....

Mrs. Puckett's family hotel in River Street was once of your ordi, nary boarding houses.

It had been a fine old place when Mrs. Puckett bought it twenty years before; and it was still a fine old place.

Its walls of red brick were worn smooth by many rains and snows. The bay trees that stood in green tubs on either side of the door were always neatly trimmed. The door was painted white and its brass knob shone like a small sun.

Within there were Oriental rugs faded to soft blues and grays and pinks. There were old mahogany chairs that were the color of port wine. There were bookcases with latticed doors and there was a pair of faint Indian mats on the hallway mantel.

To the left of the hall was the dining room with its eight little round tables and its plain, chair-covered chairs, and its curtains of ruffled muslin.

Between the curtains in one of the front windows hung a small framed sign which read:

DINING ROOM OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

That small sign, with its neat, black lettering on a white background, had been the means of changing the whole course of Mary Faith's life.

For on a certain Sunday night in November three years ago Kim Farrell and his mother had seen it in the window as they passed the house; and they had come in to have their supper there.

That was how it had happened that Mary Faith met him. She had fallen in love with him before he left the house that night, and three months later she had promised to marry him.

There was a note for him on his mother lying on the table in the hall when Mary Faith let herself into Mrs. Puckett's house that night.

She read it on the way upstairs to her room.

Dear Mary Faith

Mother is asking me to ask you to have dinner with us tonight. He will stop for you at half past six.

Kim

Half past six.....It was twenty-five minutes past that very minute! Mary Faith flew up the two flights of stairs that led to the top floor of the narrow three-story house.

Her room was a large one with three windows that looked out across the housetops and chimney-pots to the distant trees of Hallmarch Park three blocks away.

It was filled with things that she had been collecting for more than three years. There was a breakfast set of pink sprigged china on a table in one corner. On a shelf above the bed was a row of books and above the books hung a Simon etching.

Under the bed hidden by a valance of dotted Swiss, was a battered steamer trunk filled with the linens she had embroidered. On the writing desk lay a scrapbook half full of household hints and recipes that she was always clipping from newspapers and magazines.

The bottom drawer of the old bureau was filled with the garments that she had bought for her honey, moon. A breakfast coat of creamy silk. A combing jacket of yellow satin with high-heeled mules to match. A little lace cap trimmed with yellow rosebuds. Princess slips and dance sets. Five yards of thick smooth satin of the subtle shade that Mr. John Chalsworthy calls "moonlight color". Mary Faith had bought it for her wedding dress almost two years before and it had lain in the bottom of the drawer ever since.

To this room of hers she always returned at the end of the day with a feeling of rest and home-coming.

It was true that she loved Nesbit's and she got a certain satisfaction from her work there. But she was the kind of woman whose life never could be filled by an office career. She was the kind who would rather clean cupboards than keep files in order, who would rather run a sewing machine than a typewriter.

To potter around the room with the dust from the set of china, picking the withered leaves from the plants on the window sill, satisfied some home-making housekeeping instinct in Mary Faith.

And tonight she had no time to potter about. All of her movements were swift and sure. She took a dress out of her tweed office dress while she stepped out of her pumps. In five minutes she had washed her face and hands, brushed her hair and buttoned herself into a plain black silk dress that Kim had always liked.

Even my hair looks happy tonight," she said herself, smiling at her reflection in the mirror as she pulled her bag down over its crisp shining waves.

It was twenty-five minutes to seven when she ran downstairs. The front hall was empty. So was the parlor. The doors of the dining room stood open and through them came the buzz of voices and the clatter of dishes and silver. The boarding or supper. So often said himself that he had no sense of humor.

It was seven minutes past seven when he rang the doorbell.

Sorry if I'm a bit late," he said when Mary Faith opened the door. "A man came in to see me just as I was leaving the office."

"I'm sure you had something with the darkness behind him.

He was an exceptionally good-looking young man, tall and straight and broad-shouldered. He had gray-eyed and ruddily bloom. His nose and his cleft chin were almost too well-cut. If there was any weakness in his character it showed itself in his sensitive, sulky, pouting mouth.

Outdoors the night was cold and still. The stars looked so big and bright and near that Mary Faith felt that she could stretch out her hand and touch them all if she tried to.

ALL 24 — MR. AND MRS. — YOU CAN'T BEAT THE MILKMAN

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 12

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

For a time the old witch-doctor felt no doubt as to the outcome of the struggle he was watching; the strange white man must surely succumb to the terrible Numa. Who ever heard of a lone man armed only with a knife slaying so mighty a beast? Yet presently his old eyes went wider and he commenced to have his doubts and misgivings for slowly there came into his sunken eyes the light of dawning recollection.

Groping backward into the past reached the fingers of memory, until at last they seized upon a faint picture, faded and yellow with the passing years. It was the picture of a lithe, white skinned youth swinging through the trees in company with a band of huge apes. The old man's eyes blinked as he recalled this sight of twenty years before and a great fear came into them, the superstitious fear of one who believes in ghosts and demons.

And the time came once more when the witch-doctor no longer doubted the outcome of the duel. He was even more frightened, for now he knew that the jungle-god would slay Numa. What would then be his own fate at the hands of the victor? He saw the lion weaken from loss of blood, its mighty limbs stagger and tremble as the beast sank to rise no more. He saw this forest demon put its foot upon the still quivering carcass.

Then it raised its face to the moon and bayed out a hideous cry that from the ebbing blood in the veins of the witch-doctor, Terror almost overcame him as he shrieked "Who are you?" Tarzan turned his attention to the man and something akin to pleasure touched his savage heart at sight of this fear-stricken, sneering creature. He stooped to staunch the wounds of the old man before he answered: "I am Tarzan—Tarzan of the Apes."

19 STICKS DYNAMITE FOUND ON C.N.R. TRACK

Amelia Earhart First Woman to Cross Continent on Non Stop Flight

Foreigner Finds Sticks In Gravel, Enough to Blow Up Half of Oakville

Train Passes Over Spot Near Oakville Shortly After

PLOT PLANNED

Fortunate Discovery by Foreigner Saves Train

Toronto, Aug. 25 (CP)—Nineteen sticks of dynamite equipped with detonators, were found beneath the Canadian National Railway bridge at Oakville, near here, early today. The dynamite was rigged to explode when a train crossed the bridge, police of the automatic signal system at that point. A tramp, sleeping beneath the bridge, gave the alarm after he had frightened two men away.

No Trace of Men

Police swept over the district immediately, but so far have found no trace of the men. The tramp, whose name is not yet known said he had noticed the two men walking around the bridge. He went over to see what they were doing, and took to their heels. Further investigation disclosed the dynamite.

Wires from the explosive were attached to each rail of the track. A freight train, due to pass the point shortly after the explosive was found, would have closed the circuit and exploded the dynamite.

Found in Gravel

After the men had run away, the transient, a foreigner, gathered up the dynamite, which he found had been pushed into the gravel between the ties and ran with them to the railway station here, he triumped and fell in his excitement, scattering the sticks all over the station platform. Fortunately, the dynamite did not explode. It was gathered it again and placed it in a sack, then turning it over to the police.

Connected with Electric Wire

According to W. P. S. Ipley, station master at Oakville, the dynamite was connected with the electric wire which connects the two rails. "As soon as an engine approached the bridge, this would start to spark," he said.

The first train scheduled to cross the bridge after the dynamite was found, he said, was a passenger express.

There was sufficient dynamite in the bundle to have blown up a large part of the town of Oakville, and the hunt increased in the search as the news of the explosive spread.

Train Thunders Over

Hamilton, Aug. 25 (CP)— The Hamilton train which sped to Toronto and on which the dynamite charge on Oakville Bridge was evidently timed, thundered over the spot where the explosive had rested without passengers or crew knowing what had occurred.

The sticks had been removed but a short time before the train reached the spot, and later in the day civilian, police or railway men had yet learned, that anything unusual had occurred to the train during run.

Efforts were made to discover whether any person on board could have been the intended victim of the would-be assassins.

BURSAR OF UNIVERSITY CHARGED WITH THEFT

Winnipeg, Man. Aug. 25.—(CP)—John A. Mashney, K.C., prominent in religious and educational circles in Western Canada, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the University of Manitoba, was placed under arrest here today and charged with theft of $47,631.37 of the University's funds.

Arrest of Mashney followed the disclosure yes-terday that shortages of "several hundred thousand dollars" had been found to exist in the university's funds of the University.

Irregularities were said to have been discovered in the books of the Bursar's office. Besides being chairman of the Board of Governors, Mashney was Bursar.

MINERS FORCE IDLENESS

Perth, Ill., Aug. 25—The Union Coal Miners' war upon the new $5 basic wage contract reached a new front today when a caravan of 5-500 miners surrounded a pit at Mark; five miles southwest of here, and forced the mine into idleness.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.— Benjamin Chapman, financier, won a divorce from Jessie Chapman because, he said, she flew away and left him. Mrs. Chapman is now flying in the Near East with Mary Pickford, he complained. Chapman "that she wanted to be as free as the birds of the air."

BREAK-IN IS FRUSTRATED

Constable Kelly Arrests Man and Finds Silverware in Pockets

Frustrated in the attempt to break into the Bon Ami beer warehouse Roy Davis alias Fraser Armstrong, address unknown was arrested by Provincial Constable Kelly Wednesday evening.

Constable Kelly was walking along Pinnacle street when he heard a peculiar noise behind the Loyd Bros. warehouse about 9 p.m. Wednesday evening. When he himself called the name of the disturbance he found Davis alias Armstrong trying to break a window in the building by kicking it in.

The officer at once arrested the man and took him to the police station where was questioned and searched by the officer and Sergeant A. Booth. Upon searching the prisoner the officer found he had in possession a piece of table silver in his pocket. One tablespoon, one teaspoon, one knife and fork, were found in his pockets. The accused man stated that he had stolen them from a Kingston cafe but upon investigation by the officer further, the police found that the pieces of silver had been stolen from a boat anchored at Deseronto. They were identified by the owner of the cafe later.

Davis was remanded, in custody, for one week, when he will face charges of stealing and attempting to break into the beer warehouse.

GHOST SHIP IS CARRIED OFF SHORE

Point Barrow Alaska, Aug. 25— The crew of 23 Eskimo who went out in the hope of finding the ship Barchino early in the week were still missing today, and the shifting ice has again carried the vessel out of sight of land. Two other parties set out yesterday on them sent back word they had not found the ship.

YOUNG LOVER WINS GIMCRACK STAKES

Seven horses ran. Betting on Light Sussex was 4 to 3 and on Nolt Begum 4 to 1.

PAIR FLIERS TEMPT OCEAN OTHERS STAY

Lee and Bochkon Get Off to Good Start From Newfoundland

MOLLISON'S PLANE

May Not Go For Several Days or May Start Friday

Harbor Grace, Nfld., Aug. 25.— "Lucky Mountain Boy" was droned over the ocean today, speeding eastward with Clyde Pangborn and John Bochkon in the van of this week's field of 18 aspirants for transatlantic honors.

The red monoplane hopped off the Harbor Grace airport at 5.31 a. m. E.S.T., scheduled to land at Keiley Field, Dublin, Ireland, on a flight of about 20 hours.

The plane carried 450 gallons of gasoline and fuel to keep it afloat for 37 hours.

Lee and Bochkon got away in bright sunshine with a light west wind behind them. Weather reports for the first 800 miles of their journey were favorable, but they thereafter with rain and headwinds for a while after that the course was free of squalls on the other side.

The 3,150 Mile Course

Their 3150 mile course by way Dublin, Southern England and Cherbourg.

Whether that had forced "Green Mountain Boy" down on the Bargoo Beach previous to landing at Harbor Grace, or had proved the undoing of Thor Solberg and Carl Petersen, Norwegians, who crashed Tuesday night in the waters of Paradise Sound, in Placentia Bay.

Today Solberg and Petersen continued the work of dismantling their plane for shipment back to New York, one wing had been completely off.

Flying Hutchinsons Wait

Meanwhile the "Flying Hutchinsons" have completed two laps of their leisurely transatlantic flight and were at Port Mernier, Anticosti Island, preparing for the next hop to Labrador.

The New York Captain James A. Mollison was studying weather reports and preparing for his ocean journey across the North Atlantic. Mollison flew from Portarmock, Ireland, and landed his plane on a New Brunswick meadow last year, after a flight of 30 hours.

Three other flyers, William J. Brock, Del Carter, Russell, and Edna Newcomer, were getting ready to leave Floyd Bennett Field, New York, on a projected non-stop flight to Berlin.

Mollison's Time

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Captain James Mollison, Scottish flier, who last week made the first solo westbound flight across the Atlantic but not get away on his return flight to England for three days, thought he has tentatively set 10 morrow for the take-off, but the definite gasoline tank" is all set. Dr. James Kimball, exprt, at Floyd Bennett Field, today says stormy weather blocks the path and it would be "over the days before the conditions clear up."

TAKEN FOR RIDE AND YIELDS ONLY $1.75

OTTAWA, Aug. 25.—E. Wallace was taken for "a ride" early today. Wallace was walking home when two thugs lights out, accosted him. Three men were in the car, one got out when Wallace was at the car and forced the pedestrian into the machine.

The "ride" didn't last long. Wallace was taken about a mile robbed of $1.75 and told he had, give Den released, unharmed.

Consecrate Buckfast Abbey, Rebuilt By Monks Former Glory Restored

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CPO)—In the presence of the Papal Legate, His Eminence Francis Cardinal Bourne and many foreign bishops and abbots, and rebuilt Buckfast Abbey was consecrated today, after exactly 26 years of steady labor by the monks.

This was the first consecration of its kind in England since the reformation, 400 years ago. Cardinal Bourne had the full entourage of a Papal Legate, including three Papal Chamberlains. His sermon at the ceremony was broadcast throughout the British Isles.

Among the Monks stood Brother Paul Lasca Bourra, expelled from Burgundy with many others. he came to this quiet corner of Devon and bought some land for a few pounds. While gardening 40 years ago he discovered the foundations of the earliest Abbey. It had been intended to build only a small Gothic church, but the discovery of the ancient ruins impelled the Monks to restore the Abbey to its full glory of the 15th century.

Nearly three than four monks at a time have been engaged in the building of this great monastic centre, which now includes a church 240 feet long, 62 feet wide and 40 feet high.

Full Military Honors are Accorded R.S.M. 'Tim' Jordan By Late Comrades in Arms

Probably never in peace times, has a larger funeral of a military nature passed through the streets of Belleville than that which was accorded the late R.S.M. Timothy Jordan, D.C.M., M.C., Wednesday afternoon. Several thousand of the citizens of Belleville and others from throughout the district, lined the streets over which the cortege passed to witness an honour paid by the men of their gallant fellow soldier of two of Britain's wars, and one who by strong faithfulness his King and Country had won honours for himself and themselves per a last outward tribute of respect to the memory of a gallant warrior.

Supported by His Comrades

Lt.-Col. F. G. Kraler, D.S.O., Argyll Light Infantry of which unit Thomas Jordan had been regimental sergeant major, had permitted the arrangements for the funeral to be made by the 21st. Battalion Club of Belleville and co-operated with that unit's officers. The way possible to make the last earthly parade of Regimental Sergt.-Major Jordan befitting that occasion. The local battalion furnished the firing party and its commanding officer, officers and men also formed a unit in the funeral procession behind the 34th Battery was present consisting of their O.C. Major Wm. Wills; the Sea Cadets were represented; the Belleville Citizens Band several members of which were 21st Battalion bandsmen, the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada and a host of returned soldiers unaffiliated with any organization also paraded.

To pay tribute to the memory of their departed comrade and ex-regimental sergeant major, ex-officers

PRUSSIAN DIET ONLY DUMMY

Prussian Cabinet Does Not Regard Itself as Responsible

BERLIN Aug. 25.—Franz Bracht Federal Commissioner for Prussia today told Hans Kerri, president of the Prussian Diet that they kept is little more than a dummy organ station in which the acting Prussian Cabinet does not regard itself responsible.

The cabinet was set up at the direction of President Von Hindenburg, Chancellor Papen said it responsibly only to him. It is willing to appear before the Diet but that would be merely a matter of courtesy. The Diet is to assemble August 30th.

On that date the National Reichstag will have its first meeting and will be opened, according to tradition, by its oldest members, in this instance Herr Torgler, leader of the Communist Party.

Dissension of the Right are indignant at the announcement she still preside at speaker's chair for single day. They have suggested the police should prevent this insult to Nationalist Germany.

BEE'S STING CAUSES DEATH AFTER 2 YRS

Ottawa, Aug. 25 (CP) —A bee caused the death of Frederick C. Jackson, 55, dairy farm inspector, Ottawa, who died from a sudden seizure on Aug. 23, it was learned today.

Two years ago Jackson was stung by a bee and rendered unconscious for several hours.

For several years in Doukhobor colonization schemes.

BLOOD AND IRON TROUBLES

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 25.—"Blood and iron" society's anti-Semitic "Nordic" movement has had a violent turn today when four bombs were hurled into a Chinese restaurant, scattering flaming gasoline goods. The store was wrecked and two clerks injured.

Brief Wire Messages

Hamilton—Any offer at all for a Presbyterian Church can't I get a bid for it? Any offer at all for the property? I'm not going to dwell on it, but if I get a bid I'll stay here all afternoon. Can't I get any offers at all?

Toronto—Increased consumption of paregoric in Canada is occasioning the narcotics division at Ottawa very serious concern, declared C. H. L. Sharman, chief of that division, before law enforcement officials of the Pharmaceutical Association today.

Sioux City, Iowa—Sheriff John A. Davenport today declared war on pickets blockading highways in their efforts to enforce a farm strike and ordered them to disperse. Thirty five pickets were jailed early today as a result of refusal to obey the sheriff's command to leave the highways.

Ottawa—The question of financial arrangements for the marketing of Canada's 1932 wheat crop was under discussion for two hours today. Bankers, Dominion and Western government members were at the conference.

PARLIAMENT TO OPEN OCT. 6TH REPORTED

Will Last Only Long Enough to Ratify Conference Agreements

DECISION SOON

Earlier Date Likely Than Previously Expected

OTTAWA, Aug. 25—(By Canadian Press)—Parliament will probably open the first week in October, possibly October 6, according to reports in Government circles today. This is considerably earlier than previously expected. No definite decision will be made by the Cabinet, it was said.

The expectation is that the session will be adjourned after effect has been given to the trade agreements into at the Imperial Economic Conference. This will not take longer than two weeks. The adjournment will likely be until the last of January.

FIRST TO FLY COAST-COAST

Mrs. Putnam First Woman to Make Non-Stop Flight

Newark, N.J., Aug. 25.— Mrs. Willa Brown Putnam landed at Newark airport at 10.32 E.S.T. today completing the first transcontinental non-stop flight made by a woman.

She made the flight from Los Angeles in 19 hours and two minutes. Mrs. Putnam's flight was transcontinental flight from Los Angeles at 8.30 p.m. Eastern Standard time yesterday. By coming non-stop from Los Angeles to Newark, Mrs. Putnam also won the distance flight record for women, which means she has missed taking from. Ruth Nicholas in her record flight across the Atlantic. Miss Nicholas last year flew 2,000 miles from Oakland, Cal., to Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Putnam was unsighted on her flight since she passed over Amarillo Texas, at 11.10 p.m. at that time, she had flown only 1,000 miles airline distance in eight hours and minutes out of Los Angeles. The last 2000 miles she must have made at a speed exceeding 180 miles an hour.

The last great west-east non-stop flight for men is 17 hours 48 minutes held by Frank Hawks.

Playful Equines Takes Big Nip

H. Mason of Petérboro, will read with some excitement future stories of police dog bitings throughout the Province. Yesterday, Constable H. Mason, are small potatoes. Horses bite Constable Mason also again.

Mr. Mason, it seems, was standing with his back to the curb on Bridge street yesterday afternoon when a bakery wagon pulled up. He paid no attention to the horses, in a playful mood, the big horse leaned over and gave the local beauty bite on his off-shoulder. Mr. Mason, sensing into the fun, whacked the brute over the side of the nose. The horse retaliated by taking a fresh and deeper hold. Again the man smacked the animal on the "beak" as clean and flesh began to show signs of wear. He shouted a few times into the horses ears. Then the animal's jaws were pried apart and Mr. Mason was released. After a clean fun of course, remarked Mr. Mason as he rubbed his shoulder, and no hard feelings at all.

The horse is well known for a popular brand of stock feed.

Highways Into Council Bluffs are Cleared of Farm Holiday Pickets

Baby Reported Dead During Skirmish at Night

TEAR GAS USED

Hundred Striking Farmers Landed in Jail For Assembling

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Aug. 25 The highways into Council Bluffs from every one, were cleared of Farm, ers' Holiday Association pickets shortly before noon today.

While officials carried out this programme a report was being checked that a baby died during the engagement last night between police and a large body of the farmers who have been picketing highways into Council Bluffs and also around other market centres.

It was reported that a mother, in a motor car caught in the crush had tried to protect the infant from tear-gas fumes used by the police and had suffocated it.

Upwards of 100 of the striking farmers were placed in jail as a result of Deputy Sheriffs' charges of being members of an unlawful assembly. A dozen were sentenced to a month in jail.

5 PER CENT ECONOMIES

Paris Aug. 25—The official journal today published a decree outlining five per cent economies for all government ministries as part of a campaign to balance the budget.

FUR EAR MUFF DOUBLE SUIT IN 90 DEGREES

Ottawa, Aug. 25—(CP)— A heat wave means nothing to John Bouchard, of Renfrew, Ont.

The mercury hovered around the 90-degree in the Capital on Wednesday; collars wilted and coats were discarded, but John was cool, though he made the mistake of walking into the side of an automobile, suffering serious injury.

Taken to hospital, he was found to be wearing two topcoats, two pairs of trousers and a cap with fur-lined ear-muffs.

Soviet's New Gun Kills at Range of Thousand Miles

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Lester P. Barlow, Military Engineer, of Stamford of Deadwood, Conn., has written the Soviet Government the secrets of a war device so terrible it makes all known weapons look like toys, he says the Soviet Government was the only nation powerful enough to stand for complete disarmament.

His invention, he claims, enables high explosive, phosphorous fire and Lewisite Gas to be dropped one inch object from a base 1,000 miles away.

National Groups Meet Hoover, Plan To Make Money Easy and Spread Jobs

Washington, Aug. 25 — Summoned by President Hoover, representatives of national business and industrial groups met government financial leaders today to perfect plans for the administration's business conference here Friday. They included chairman of the business and industrial committees of the 11 federal reserve districts.

Tentative plans for making money easier and spreading jobs were brought to the meeting from industrial organizations, some of the conference chieftains, including Owen D. Young, prominent Democrat and chairman of the New York committee.

Some Democratic political leaders looked warily at the conference. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, issued a statement expressing hope in results of the conference but asserting "the association of business and intellectual leaders of the country with these schemes has been unavailing because they have been used merely as a sounding board for the Republican party."

Days Grow Longer, In Few Billion Years Daylight Saving Not Needed

TORONTO, Aug. 25.— Daylight Saving Legislation will be unnecessary in a few billion years. For days, of their own accord, are getting longer and longer.

The mystery of the lengthening day was explained to the Royal Astronomical Society, by Sir Frank Dyson, Astronomer Royal and Director of the Greenwich Observatory.

"The moon is pulling at the tides and the earth is turning under this sort of friction and the friction will tend to reduce the speed of the earth's rotation. It would work out the extraordinarily minute measurement of one one-hundredth of a second a day every century. If we look back and work out these figures were, they had been twice as long recently by scientists, he said.

SEPARATE SCHOOL RE-OPENS SEPT. 6

Classes at St. Michael's Academy, both junior and high schools, will be resumed on Tuesday, September 6th, it was announced by the Separate School Board.

WATCH FOR AN ESCAPED INMATE

Official word was received by the local police early Thursday morning to the effect that an inmate of the Industrial School for boys at Mimico had escaped. The lad's name is George Allee and lifts in Ottawa. He was described as being fair complexion standing about five feet seven inches, tall and rather good looking. He wore a peaked cap, grab trousers and a blue striped shirt, but had no coat. The police in Eastern Ontario are keeping a sharp lookout for the lad as the officials at Mimico are of the opinion that the lad was headed towards home.

BICYCLES AWAIT THEIR OWNERS

Two unidentified bicycles are at present at the local police station awaiting their respective owners. The bicycles were found by local police laying in ditches in "the outskirts of the city and brought in to the police station." The bicycles can be procured by their respective owners by being identified.

HEAVY MIDWEEK MARKET SEEN

Thursday's mid-week Belleville market was quite largely attended by vendors and purchasers alike. Baskets of peaches were in evidence and sold at 60c for the larger ones and 35c for the smaller ones. The peaches were fine looking specimens and somewhat larger than usual. Long black berries sold for 15c a box, while cherries brought 15c for two berry boxes.

Apples brought 75c to $1.00 a bushel. Tomatoes dropped slightly in price, when they sold for 20c a peck, while new potatoes brought 15c a peck. Pickling pears sold for 30c a peck, while fine small pickling cucumbers brought 10c the small basket. Green corn sold for 10c a dozen and Canadian corn for 25c. Fine looking celery was offered for five in a bunch, while pie pumpkins brought 10c each.

NOTHING NEW IN JOB LINE

"Nothing new to report," was the answer at the office of the Government Employment Office on Campbell Street today.

While a number of single and married men of the district have signified their intention of accepting any farm work which may be offered, by registering their names at the employment office or relief clerk in the city hall, calls for help so far have not been very brisk and the number of jobs exceeds the demand. Threshing operations in the district, while the crew in full swing have failed to account for more than a small percentage of men available.

COAL CARGO IS UNLOADED AT DOCK

One more cargo of coal consigned to the Ontario Shore Gas Company of the city, is being unloaded today by the steamer Chamberlain which docked late last evening. During the past season the above boat has made several trips to the city, each time loaded with thousands of tons of coal for various manufacturing companies in the district. Although the full cargoes have been carried owing to the shallow depth of the water in the harbor and bay.

FINAL TOUCHES ON MEMORIAL HOME

Final touches are being added to Memorial Hall on Front Street, new headquarters of the Army and Navy Veteran's Association, by painters and decorators who have been working inside and outside the building for the past few days. Striking improvements has been noticed following the painting outside of the ornamental cupola of red, white and blue on woodwork and brick-work, lettering and the crest of the Association which has been painted on the front of the building is particularly clean cut.

and former other ranks of the 21st Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, and former old centres in Eastern Ontario. Brigadier W. St. Pierre Hughes, D.S.O. who organized and commanded the battalion on its mobilization in Kingston in early November, 1914, and who took the unit overseas for training and France in 1915, and commanded there, journeyed to Belleville for the funeral and to pay his personal tribute; Lieut.-Col. H. H. Fenn, D.S.O., an original officer of the battalion, who following Lieut. Col. Hughes, took command of the battalion at the battle of Amiens, 1918, commanded the 21st throughout the subsequent fighting to the end of the war, and till his demobilization in Toronto on May 24th, 1919, laid aside his journalistic activities at Wilkerson near Lake Huron, to be present and likewise pay honor to the memory of one, who as a comrade-in-arms between himself and N.C.O.'s, he had ever found faithful in those arduous duties. Major the Rev. William Kidd, M.C., original chaplain of the 21st. Battalion, came from his country home near Smith's Falls, to conduct the last rites for his soldier comrade and friend, whom he had known so long and for whom he had a brotherly affection and the highest esteem. Hamilton, Toronto, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Port Hope, Cobourg, Colborne, Brighton, Trenton, Peterboro, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Madoc, Tweed, Picton, Wellington, Napanee, Kingston, Brockville, Cornwall and Ottawa were represented.

Lay in State

Wednesday evening the body was conveyed to the Armouries where it lay in state with guard of honour, led by the Argyll Light Infantry. At two o'clock in the afternoon a parade of returned soldiers and citizens of the community well filled the drill hall to hear a service of dignity and simplicity. Major Kidd officiated, Major the Rev. J. Beauchamp Payne, chaplain of the A.L.I. read the lesson. No soldier could have had a finer eulogy than that delivered by Padre Kidd for his friend and comrade. Tom Jordan; or a more heartfelt message of sympathy extended to bereaved family than that expressed by the last sergeant major's family Wednesday afternoon. To Tom Jordan's outstanding capabilities as a soldier, to his character as a man, to his devotion to duty as a King's man, to his integrity and to his work for the welfare of his regimental comrades, Padre Kidd paid eloquent tribute. His fervent delivery of sincere appreciation and deepest sympathy was reflected in the hearts of the two hundred exiles men who heard him. The tributes of Belleville at this service knew the words of the chaplain to be true; they too had known Tim Jordan, and his many qualities.

Carried to Gun Carriage

Mounted shoulder high, the members of the 21st Battalion Club of Belleville, all originals of the 21st Battalion, who had mobilized with Tim Jordan in Kingston on the 6th of November, 1914, bore the flag draped casket to the awaiting gun carriage on the Armouries road-way; Captain Tom Hyland bore the deceased's battle awards and Corp. Wrightsinger carried the cap.

Led by the Argyll's pipe band the cortege moved at the dead march via Pinnacle Street, Victoria Ave., Front, and Bridge Streets to Murney's Hill, where it broke into quick march. On the Albert College entrance the parade broke off to proceed by bus and car to the Belleville cemetery and interment. It reformed and again at the dead march proceeded to the graveside.

Once more shoulder high the remains of Sergeant Major Jordan were borne to his last earthly resting place by his former comrades and lowered in the grave. A soldier's burial then took place, with Padre Kidd officiating. Three shot round salute was fired, Last Post and Reveille sounded and Bugler Clarke, piper of the Belleville 21st Battalion Club played the lament, "Flowers of the Forest." Regimental Sergeant Major Thomas Frederick Jordan, D.C.M., M.C., had been consigned to a soldier's grave after a soldierly lifetime.

Original 21st men acting as bearers were Field Marshall Johnston, 59,536 Lorne Foster; 59,436 Joseph Hart; 59,513 Arthur E. Johnson; 59,557 William Michaud; 59,712 Harper S. McElrath.

The YES and NO of VISION
By J. A. McFEE
Professional Optometrist
Irritable persons are sometimes those who are fighting eye strain!
You, eye strain does in many cases cause or aggravate irritability.
It is a question of nerves!
Yes, the eye strain depletes that nerve supply, upsetting an even balance that instinctively strives to maintain.
Then the remedy is to get rid of the eye strain!
Yes, when that is done there is usually more optimism, because of a better functioning nervous system.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. M. POUCHER

The funeral of the late Mrs. Margaret Poucher was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of her nephew, Elijah Hoxton, 5th concession of Thurlow. The Rev. E. Symons, rector of Belleville, conducted the service at the home and at the graveside in the Stirling cemetery. Evincing the esteem in which the late Mrs. Poucher was held by her friends, many were in attendance at the funeral and the floral tributes were beautiful.

The bearers, all nephews of the deceased were Messrs. H., Oscar, and Howard Anderson, Walter Jones, Elijah Horton and John Bush.

MRS. NELLIE COOK

The death occurred at the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday evening of Mrs. Nellie Cook, beloved wife of Mr. B. Cook, 135 Lingham Street, following an illness of three months' duration. The late Mrs. Cook was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Loula Soule of this city. She was born in Belleville and resided here until her marriage. For some time years she lived in Winnipeg and then removed to Los Angeles, Calif., where she spent ten years. About a year ago she returned to Belleville. Mrs. Cook was a member of the Tabernacle United Church and the Ladies' Guild of the Bridge Street of Belleville. A woman highly esteemed by her many friends in this city their sympathy goes to those now sadly bereaved.

The immediate family surviving are the husband, the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Loula and Eric and one daughter, Ann, all at home; two brothers, Walter of St. Catharines and Warren of this city, and one sister, Mrs. Margaret Shaddock also of Belleville.

ST. MICHAEL'S PICNIC PROVES BIG SUCCESS

Attractions, Races And Games Enjoyed by Crowds

CHICKEN SUPPER

Archbishop O'Brien And Many Clergy Are Present

Hundreds of citizens of Belleville and visitors from the surrounding countryside were present yesterday in St. Michael's Picnic Grounds for the annual chicken supper and lawn social sponsored by that parish. The weather was ideal for the event, the first Wednesday half holiday in five weeks that was not visited by showers. The booths presented a gay air with their decorations of flags and bunting. The shady picnic grounds offered every advantage for the entertainment of young and old and the crowd lingered until a late hour after the delicious supper. Among the distinguished guests present at the supper were His Excellency, Most Rev. M. J. O'Brien, co-Adjutor Archbishop of Kingston, and many of the clergy of the surrounding parishes.

Small lots gathered early for the social and slides, swings, the fascinating fish pond and a program of races made their afternoon most enjoyable.

The results of the afternoon's sports follow:

Running Races

Girls, 6 and under—1, Pat Dolmension; 2, Hazel Wales; Meeker; 3 Gynneth Donavon and Thelma O'Brien.

Girls, 3-legged race— Irene Boyle, and Adrienne Cruj; 2 Jo Ross and Dorothy Ovelay.

Boys, 3-legged race — 1 Joseph O'Carroll and Gordon Clapp.

Baseball

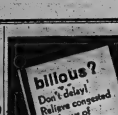
Two baseball games were played during the afternoon and the play-off in the tournament had to be postponed until next week on account of darkness. The first game between the Kiwanis Club and the Firemen ended in a win for the latter team, the score being 20 to 11. Eddie Peets and Austin Walsh were umpires.

The line-ups of the teams follow:

Kiwanis—Wannamoot, p; Forder, lf; Hanley, ss; Goodfellow, c; Shapiro, 2b; Logan 1b; Oliphant, 3b; Cook, cf; Chapelle, rf.

Firemen—Pomeroy, 1b; Carter, lf; Latchford, c; McDonald, cf; Forbes, p; Snell, 3b; Greatrix 3b; Thompson, rf; Canning, ss.

In the second game the K of C defeated the Express 24-9. The line-up were:



K. of C.—Doran, ss; Black, cf; Boyle, 1b; Murphy, 2b; Bennett, 2b; Donahue and Domenico, p; Harris, c; Donavon, rf; Callaghan, lf.

Express—Callaghan, 1b; Burnett, lf; Sargent, lf; Barnard, ss; Snyder, 3b; Clarke, 3b; O'Callaghan, rf; Davis, lf; Christie, cf.

In the play-off between the Firemen and K. of C. the score was 14 to 14 when the game was called in the fourth innings because of darkness. The umpires were Dick Goodfellow and Eddie Shapiro.

The supper was served by the ladies of the congregation, the long tables being arranged, out doors. The menu was excellent, every delicacy being provided. The first table was filled shortly after five o'clock and serving continued until about eight o'clock. The reputation of the ladies of St. Michael's parish for providing delicious supper was well upheld last evening.

Three booths of games were in charge of the men and these did a thriving business. The girls of the parish looked after the fish pond, which was besieged by tiny tots from early in the afternoon, and the refreshment booths. Later in the evening a dance was held in the pavilion, Helen Darrah's orchestra providing music for the occasion. The evening's activities came to a close as twelve o'clock. The various organizations of the parish co-operated in a splendid manner to make the social the outstanding success it was.

Softball Series At Local Fair

As an added attraction for the Belleville Fair a men's softball tournament has been arranged by the board of directors with a fine large silver trophy going to the winning team.

The tournament is to be of the county nature with teams together the champion men's softball teams of the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward with the league standing and runners up clubs in the district also being invited and also have signified their intention of playing in the tournament. Mr. Chas. J. Symons or the sporting editor of the Ontario-Intelligencer will gladly take any entries and the draw will be made for the schedule on Saturday.

The teams to be invited are Sidney "Bluggers," Tendenville, champions of Prince Edward, Victoria champions, Colborne Hill, champions of the Thurlow league, Canniffon and the Continental Life team winners of the Belleville Senior league. The tournament is to be of a county wide nature and should create considerable interest in the surrounding community.

Two games will be played on Tuesday afternoon, the opening day of the fair, while one game will be played each evening following until the ultimate winner of the tournament is decided. The tournament will be of the elimination type with the winner of each game advancing into the next round and the loser dropping out. One of the finest silver trophies ever given will be awarded the winner of the fair tournament at the 1932 Belleville Fair.

Risks Life and Rescues Child

Motorman Sees Babe on Rails, He Never Hesitates

LONDON, O., Aug. 25.—Clinging from the pilot of a speeding plunging limited of the Lake Shore Electric, Interurban Line, Motorman Bill Lang, yesterday scooped from beneath the wheels of his car three-year-old Lela Smith, as she played on the tracks.

Lang, one of the veteran motormen of the line, had brought the speeding car into a curve, when he noticed what appeared to be a bundle between the rails.

Looking sharply, he saw it was a baby—Lela, playing with her doll, "Elvira".

Applying the brakes to the car, travelling 55 miles an hour, Lang flung himself through the door and on to the pilot barely in time to snatch up the baby.

Help! Help! What Animal's This!

TORONTO, Aug. 25.—The local customs office is in a quandary. To their colleagues in the Customs Department at Ottawa an appeal for help has been sent. It all centres around the importation of an animal.

Usually, animals are either allowed into Canada or not allowed into Canada. But this time, its different. The animal in question was a crossbred Zebra Jackass, and it came from Dallas, Texas, to the private Menagerie of Arthur Miles here.

Unaware of the official problem it has created, the Jackass, Zebra, Zebrass, Jackbra or whatever it is, enjoying itself here.

But—for purposes of importation —what is it? Is entered Canada as an "article dutiable", or domestic beast of burden. But again, should it not have been allowed to enter as "for improvement of stock?" Anyway, bewildered officials have given up. The buck has been passed. On Ottawa, rests the decision.

DR. L. G. BROWN ASPHYXIATED

Failure to Answer 'Phone Alarms Wife Who Makes Discovery

TORONTO, Aug. 26.—(By the Canadian Press)—Dr. Percy G. Brown, prominent Toronto surgeon and physician, was found asphyxiated in his office here early today when his wife and a friend entered the building to deliver a message to the doctor. He was 49.

Unable to reach her husband on the telephone although she knew he was at the office Mrs. Brown with Harry Hodgins, hurried to the down town address to find Dr. Brown's body on a couch in a gas filled room.

Although police worked over the body for two hours resuscitation efforts failed.

After service overseas Dr. Brown started practice here and had been connected with the medical staff of the Canadian National Railways for a number of years.

Coroner Dr. Julian Loudon investigated and characterized the case as one of accidental death. No inquest will be held.

NEW OFFICIAL SELLS TRAFFIC

High Pressure Salesman For Railway is Announced

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON — Three utterly new positions have been created by the London, Midland and Scottish Railway Company with a view to making the railway more popular with the people, or as one of the officials put it, to sell more service of the kind that travellers and the general public want. These three men began their railway service at the foot of the ladder and have worked up, road by rung, one having begun as a telegraph boy of the London, Midland and Scottish, and the other two as junior clerks.

The appointments are: Chief Commercial manager, Ashton Davies; Chief Operating manager, C. R. Bywom; Chief 'office for Scotland, J. Ballantyne.

This is how E. J. Lemon, vice-president of the company, put it in an interview: "The chief commercial manager will be the sort of high-pressure salesman for the L.M.S. The pure technician is subordinated to the idea of service. We are amply provided with the means of transport. What we want to do is to sell transport.

"We are reorganizing the work of the chief general superintendent and chief goods (freight) manager by appointing in their place two chief managers, separately responsible to the vice-president — the chief commercial manager responsible for both goods and passenger business and the chief operating manager responsible for all phases of railway operation.

"At the same time, the commercial organization will cease to deal with any train and station operation, and this will enable the chief operating manager to concentrate upon the operation of the required services, employing the railway system and other operating equipment to its fullest purpose."

Ashton Davies, at present passenger manager of the London, Midland and Scotland, is 37 years of age. He began with the company as a telegraph boy in Manchester. Mr. Byrom's present post is that of chief general superintendent, while Mr. Ballantyne is chief goods manager.

DONATES FUND TO INVENTORS

Generosity Enables Other Inventors to Make Progress

(By The Canadian Press)

STOCKHOLM — Alexander Lagerman, now regarded as one of Sweden's greatest inventors, was penniless seventy years ago. He lacked the means for completing his foremost invention, the almost miraculous automatic match-making machine, which later led to Sweden's success in the match industry.

The Swedish Academy of Science recognized Lagerman's merit and gave him a sum of 3,000 kronor to enable him to perfect his invention. Lagerman, who died 26 years ago, in his will donated a fund for the benefit of inventors in need of economic support. A few days ago 11 young Swedish inventors among 60 applicants got various sums from the Lagerman fund to enable them to complete their promising inventions. These include an accumulating fuel pump for Diesel engines, a new protective device for railway crossings, household and agricultural appliances, etc.

Chief Engineer G. A. Hull, president of the Swedish Inventors' Society, in an interview given on the occasion of the awarding of the Lagerman gifts, declared that Sweden has given a great number of inventions of world importance, probably more than any other nation. Among her inventors are Emanuel Swedenborg, the famous thinker and religious leader, and such men as Dr. Laval, the originator of the cream separator, John Ericsson, the inventor of the Monitor and the propeller, Gustaf Dalen, father of the Aga Lights, which explains why gave his name to the prolgrade thermometer, Alfred Nobel who discovered dynamite and many others of similar fame.

YANKEE SLANG IS MAKING HEADWAY

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL — Yankee slang is making headway in Scotland despite the severe disapproval of its use by the more serious minded population, according to Gilbert H. King, Scottish exchange student from McGill University, who has returned to Canada to engage in teaching work.

The spreading of the use of slang terms among the young people of Scotland, he said, is one of the effects of the American talkies. There are indications, however, he said, that this American influence will be counteracted by the growing popularity of British talkies which are today coming into their own.

SCENIC HIGHWAY EAST OF ACTINOLITE OPENED

Million and Quarter Dollar Highway Opened at Mountain Grove by Premier Who Chops Through Birch Barrier

65 Mile Stretch From Actinolite to Perth is Final Link in New Highway to Capital of Canada

MANY MILES SAVED IN CUT-OFF

Scenes in Construction Camp at Mountain Grove And at Madoc Where Premier Henry And Party Took Part in Ceremonies

Provincial Highway No. 7 was officially opened by Premier George S. Henry on Wednesday afternoon. The Premier came over the highway from Perth as far as Mountain Grove where he left the party going between Perth and Actinolite. Driving up in his car he paused across the road the Premier's car stopped and he got out followed by the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, and Mr. H. M. Smith, the Deputy Minister. He was presented with a specially engraved axe by Mr. Black on the axe was engraved the crest of the highway agent with the No. 7 on it. With four well aimed strokes did Premier cut the birch tree which formed the barrier and the road was officially open for travel. A shot of 21 dynamite cartridges were also fired as a salute. The setting was unique in that the virgin forest combs right down to the edge of the highway which will now be made accessible to the thousands of nature lovers. On the left was Hennigers' Camp where the men who worked on the road were lodged, about five hundred people thronged the road to witness the opening, coming from all parts of the Dominion and tourists from that great nation to the south who are the forerunners of the thousands that will use the highway that was opened yesterday.

Enjoy Camp Dinner

Following the opening ceremonies the Premier and the visiting delegates and visitors adjourned to Hennigers' Camp where a real camp dinner was served. The menu consisting of; premier Hon. George S. Henry of Ontario, who opened Highway No. 7, from Actinolite to Perth. Ceremony took place at Mountain Grove.

Soups—Tomato, Bisque, Pea Soup, Relishes—New Beets, Pickles. Meat—Roast Lamb a la Provincee. Vegetables—Lemon and Addington Potatoes, Hastings Marsh Hay (Sweetcrust), Lake of Golden Corn, Baked Beans (¼ Nelson Style). OPENS HIGHWAY

the department and to the engineers in charge at the work. Mr. Henry having been connected with Highways department for seven or eight years could readily see what difficulties they had to surmount in order to make the road what it is today. The road, the Premier continued, while opening up a new territory hitherto untapped by the tourist gave employment to thousands of men, which is a great deal in these times which we are now passing through. For the past nine months men have been working on the road and receiving a nominal wage. Two hundred thousand dollars alone is estimated to have been spent on salaries. This, of course, means a great deal to the various factories and the men who are employed there. In speaking of the advancement made in the past few years that we now know that as the motor age and that good roads are an absolute necessity to the province, giving easy access to the country which will attract thousands yearly. The tourist trade today is fast becoming one of our largest industries and everything possible that can be done to foster it should be done. In conclusion Mr. Henry stated that he was very glad to have the opportunity to attend the opening in that it gave him a chance to meet old friends and to make new and that another link in Ontario's highways, which are second to none, had been forged today.

Road Development

The Hon. Leopold Macaulay was the next speaker and remarked that while credit was being given to the men who helped to make the road possible, the Premier deserved the highest. A few years ago, he continued the people of Ontario had just begun to realize the importance of good roads and since that times had advanced rapidly to the present high standard which she holds in regard to the road. Every year more cars are appearing on the highways, this despite the depression. More cars are using the roads this year than last despite the fact that the American tourist trade is down twenty per cent. to last years total. Hon. Macaulay felt that this is a strong point in favor of better roads as the figures compiled by the department this year prove that more Canadians are seeing Canada first.

Road Values

The present roads of the province are a living value every year. The present stretch of road costs one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Wages paid out right on the job total six hundred thousand, and, the speaker said that that much more money was put into circulation, as the men who received it used the money for various articles of clothing and food stuffs. During the period of nine months that it took to build the road 9,351 men were employed in the construction work. The total length of the highway is 27 miles. The number of man days worked was 225,000. These figures were given to the Ontario Intelligencer by Mr. Macaulay and bear out his statements that the road was a big help to the province at large as the men employed there came from all parts of the province. Many are of the opinion Mr. Macaulay continued, that a good many public works started by the government in times of depression are a waste of money but such is not the case.

Hail in Wages

Half of the price of the road costs were paid out in wages to the wage earner who in turn supports his family buying goods from the merchants which create a demand for different, products which helps the factories keep open and give work. The entire thing works in a cycle doing good at every new purchase. Hundreds of thousands were spent on material such as gasoline that was bought to be used in the construction of number several. In regards to gravel the same way was needed the Minister of Highways feels that the road that was opened yesterday opens up an entirely new country which will be the means of the road paying for itself in a short time. In conclusion

Mr. James P. Hill, M.P.P., of East Hastings who congratulates Provincial highway contractors at opening of Northern Highway.

W. H. Ireland, M.P.P., for West Hastings who attended the ceremonies in connection with the opening of Highway No. 7, yesterday.

W. R. Tummon, M.P., for South Hastings, who was one of speakers at Mountain Grove at ceremony of opening of New Provincial Highway No. 7.

he stated that regarding the department could do by way of enhancing the beauty of the highway they would gladly lend a hand to do so.

Mr. R. M. Smith, deputy minister, the next speaker gave credit to the engineers Mr. Arthur Smith and to Mr. Nelson and their staff. Mr. Smith originally came from this district and was quickly enthused over the completion of the road which he feels will open up a heretofore back woods section.

No Burden to Counties

The Hon. Robt. Cooke when called upon said that the road in itself was unique due to the fact that it was the first time that, say road in the province had ever been built that the counties through which it passed did not have to pay a certain portion. The entire burden was borne by the Provincial Govern, ments in an endeavour to alleviate the unemployment situation.

Mr. W. E. Thomson of the Dominion House also voiced his congratulations to those connected in the building of the road, which will bring the surrounding communities closer together. Mayor Wright of Kingston, Mayor Denne of Peterboro, also expressed their pleasure that the road was completed.

Few Hours' Journey

Dr. Spanky speaker in the Dominion House, who has lived in the neighborhood all his life remembers the time that it used to take three days to go from Actinolite to Perth whereas now it is a matter of a few hours at the outside. In touching the march of progress since the time he was a youth he finds that it brings greater comforts to the human race as a whole which is the primary thing after all.

Mr. James F. Hill of the East Hastings riding in the Legislature in speaking of the highway said that having served on the advisory board with Mr. Macaulay he could well appreciate the difficulties that the department was up against in building the new road. In conclusion Mr. Hill stated that the government had been fortunate in getting a good class of contractors engaged in the work. The present road fills a long felt need Mr. Hill stated in conclusion. Mr. T. A. Thompson M.P.; of Lanark, Mr. Fred Reid, M.P., as Windsor, Mr. Strickland M.P. for Peterboro, Mr. Stedman of Lanark, Mr. Lancaster, M.P. Havelock, Mr. Hambly of Lennox, Mr. John Orsag, K. Lanark and Mr. Pringle road inspector for the county all expressed their appreciation of the department in making this road possible. The meeting was brought to a close by giving three cheers for the Premier and Mr. Macaulay and the singing of the National Anthem.

Leave For Madoc

The Premier and party then left for Madoc where a meeting was held in the Memorial Park. On leaving along the highway from Mountain Grove to Actinolite one could not help but appreciate the beauty of the new road. All hills have been cut down to easy grades, curves are banked and motorists driving the motorist a good view ahead. The standard of over a mile is runs as straight as a string going through the rock cuts some of which are fifty feet high, skirting the edge of the swamps, running across the meadows through virgin country of unsurpassed scenic beauty, which will be appreciated by the tourists in the years to come. The road bed is 40 feet with a crushed rock base with finer crushed stone on top with a covering of tar which rolled makes a perfect road bed. Outside of the fact that the road will open a great deal in the way of tourist trade, it means a great deal to those living between Madoc Ontawa. By the old road that is via Port Hope, Belleville and King, ston, it was 263 miles, but by the new road it is 179 miles, a saving of 76 miles, Leaving Peterboro the road will run through Norwood, Havelock, Marmora, then to Actinolite where the new section has been completed thence to Perth and Ottawa. Even from Belleville it will mean a saving of nearly forty miles by using the number seven highway. Course of Rivers Changed.

Where the road crosses the Salmon River the old course of the river has been changed to make a shorter bridge which has been built and is one of the finest concrete bridges of its kind. All curves and steep embankments or ditches are protected by heavy cable strung on posts. The road is the last word in the way of highways.

After going to Madoc the Premier and Mr. Macaulay came in by the south as it was their with that they inspect the piece of road being paved between Belleville and Madoc. They were met on the outskirts of the village by several decorated floats and a fleet of tunting festooned cars, a majority from Peterboro and also from their kith and kin to furnish the music for the occasion. The Peterboro Chamber of Commerce was also there in a body. They were welcomed by Reeve Gilbert, of Madoc in a few well chosen words. Warden Hall, Madoc.

Hon. Mr. Robt. Cooke, acted as chairman and introduced the Premier who in a few telling words that had assembled in the park. The Premier in speaking to the people of Madoc enlarged somewhat on his speech that he had given at Mountain Grove earlier in the day, in regards to New Ontario. He still Minister of Education and has a soft spot for the children. The roads and benefits that we provide today will help the coming generation to get a better start in life.

Roads Help Rural Parts.

The roads that we have today, the Premier continued improved the life of the rural dweller as he can now get out among his neighbors a good deal more, enlarges his field of vision which gives him a broader outlook on life and consequently makes him a better citizen. While the building of roads has passed beyond his hands the Premier stated that of Education he was and that to get out and see the schools and community life was one of his big aims as that will make the history of tomorrow. Premier Roosevelt.

Mr. Macaulay addressed the gathering much the same as his earlier speech. Other than that he heartily was in agreement with the Premier in regards to the children that nothing was too good for them in the way of making things better than they have ever had and the building of new roads and opening up the province is a big factor in this. In conclusion, Mr. Macaulay said that the progress that we have had in the past twenty-five years will probably be equalled in the next 25 and that they should be met and accepted as assets.

A banquet was given in the St. Lawrence Hotel at seven pm. in honor of the Premier and the Hon. Mr. Macaulay. Guests consisted of Hon. R. J. Cooke, Mayor D. Dunne of Peterboro, D. A. Strickland of Peterboro, A. T. Embury, M.P. for Bancroft; Percy Lancaster of Havelock; James Hill, Brule Tummon; Robt. Mitchell and others.

SMART MIDWAY

Live Stock Exhibit Worth Miles Going to See

Fair time. To the young it is a period of sideshows, free samples, the bark and yells of the midway, the flapping of gaudy canvas wherein is depicted The Strangest Creature Alive, The Indian Rubber Man and other strange creatures from another world apart. To them also is associated the shrill of calliope and the glistening array in bunting draped halls, it revisions bewhisked spectacles of the beards, their class. A born of plenty which has been poured out on the forest tables. Each specimen perfect for the critical eye of competitors and judges, fairly and late, to differentiate respective points and to award accordingly. The cream of the crop of Hastings County.

To others come different viewpoints of fair time. There are the animals whose well groomed hoofs adjusting beautifully built specimens of horse flesh, who champ in their stalls and survey with large eyes the human who congregate around them. There will be the big, stolid and solid draught horses—gentle as kittens, almost human in intelligence, powerful in strength, and dependably good work-horses. There will be the smaller horses, alert and fiery horse horse which will muscle fondly for the bits from the hands of spoiled children fashion. There will be pacers and trotters in between. There will even be gaming little colts, who stare stupidly as they buddle against their dam's legs.

Sheep and Lambs

Other animals will also come under the fond eye of local experts. There will be woolly sheep and lambs with their incessant bleating at their strange surroundings. Sleek fat hogs will grunt contentedly in clean straw; little porkers will squeal in protest as they are occasionally prodded into activity to inhibit little brutes who jostle and fight amongst themselves like puppies. To the casual eye they all resemble nothing less than pigs, but to the eye of those who are acquainted with farm animals, there are many varieties of swine to be found at the local fair. Each type as distinct as the different species of plant life in a well kept garden.

Other farm stock will also be found in abundance. There will be rocky little bantams who ned and peck at the wire front of the cages to get at some of the other birds that crow defiance in shrill tones in the poultry house. There will be solid big roosters whose crow resembles a foghorn at sea; hens in other cages will cluck and scratch busily, conscious that they are on exhibit for the hundreds of eyes which pass their cages every hour. Veterans of the show benches they betray no excitement over the fact they are on view. Only the young pullets of this year's hatching will fuss over the lack of privacy.

Other Attractions

But, while all this is going on, there will be other exhibits in large halls set aside for the purpose. There will be exhibitions of cooking, of knitting, of all the household arts and sciences, handiwork for which this country is famous. There will congregate the feminine critics, who will observe and pick up new pointers on how to make and do things. Tips which will repay the small price of admission which has been charged.

All in all there is variety in plenty to attract attention of those from all walks of life. There is a fascination about a fair hard to define. Not only is it a place to exhibit things but it is also a meeting place for those, who come miles to visit and see for them new ones are made. Belleville will salves. Old friendships are renewed be the centre of the cross roads for four days, commencing August 30, bigger and better than ever.

Buildings, Grounds Invite Large Crowds Improvements Seen

Clean and new and inviting, following a steady grooming at the hands of Parks Board employees who have been at work in the grounds for the past two weeks, Belleville Fair grounds have emerged this year, greener, brighter and cleaner than ever before.

Acres of cool, green, closely trimmed grass make the eye inside the enclosure. New flower beds in the central sections of the park have beautified the grounds and added a brilliance which is unmatched. Even the large fountain at the entrance has been redecorated and painted in two-toned contrasting colors.

On the barns and buildings reserved for livestock, fresh paint and whitewash have given the structures a glistening appearance. "Neat as a pin" has long been symbolized, but "neat as the Belleville Fair Grounds" could also be applied with equal descriptive aptitude. The grounds, the buildings and all other reserved space provides a fitting setting for the annual display of Hastings County resources.

Cattle and other live stock entries are this year said to surpass all other years in number, according to officers of the Fair Board. For cattle especially new sheds of permanent nature have been set up along one side of the grounds. Covered with a metal roof and painted white, the sheds present a very pleasing and sanitary appearance.

Inside the other permanent buildings prize winning displays of various sorts the same sense of order and neatness is observed. Space for different booths has been marked off and already manufacturers and offices of various branches are working setting up their displays.

But while all that improvement has been taking place inside the grounds, attention to the outside sections have not been neglected. From the fast track one of the fastest in the central section of the province, which has been leveled and harrowed and smoothed, to the grandstand and bandstand the same careful grooming has been observed. All in all officers of the Board can be certain that little remains to be done to have the park ready for the opening day on August 30th.

FAIR IS EXPRESSION DISTRICT'S PROGRESS

The efforts of the fair board to provide the countryside and the city with an adequate expression of the contribution of this part of the province to the 127 years of fair and past achievements in the shade is his wish which seems reasonable hope of being achieved.

HEAD OF FAIR IS OPTIMISTIC ON PROSPECT

Warden Robert M. Mitchell Has Reasons For Enthusiasm.

FARMERS' EFFORTS

Cooperation Between County and City to be Given Test

President R. M. Mitchell, Warden, Hastings County, and one of the country's noted agriculturists, looks forward to a triumph at the Belleville Fair next week. He sees on all hands a manifest interest in the work of the fair. His directors have been receiver in their result of everything which will enhance the appeal of the exhibition.

So he says that next week will see the best fair the city has had from various points of the show of stock, the manufactured exhibits, the crowds, the track, and the entertainment.

President Mitchell sees immense gains in three fairs. As he has been indefatigable in his expenditure of energy to help the fair forward, he has a close viewpoint of the possibilities of this year's program.

Farmers are Helping

He is delighted with the way in which the farmers of Hastings and Prince Edward are putting their moulder to the wheel by co-operation with one another and with the citizens to make the show what it ought to be—a district event. What the fair means to the people he knows and from that knowledge comes his opinion that the livestock at the Belleville Fair is not to be excelled.

Mr. Mitchell has been more than a nominal president. He knows the value of the building of agriculture. His long training in the County Council made him an admirable head for the institution. He has seen the 127 years and all past achievements in the shade is his wish which seems reasonable hope of being achieved.

HON. PRESIDENT

Hon. J. R. Cooke, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Power Commission, who is an honorary president of the Belleville Agricultural Society, whose annual fair will be held next week.

MUSIC AT THE FAIR

Musical tone to the Belleville Fair next week will be given by the Belleville Municipal Band who have a fine program of entertainment arranged for the exhibition. Fairs without bands are like a cat without a tail and Belleville exhibition is not in that class. Bandmaster Hinchey and his musicians will give four days and nights of music, plenty of music.

There will be different selections each day of the exhibition, and the band will not be sparing in their numbers.

The other entertainment will be of all classes, calculated to please. There will be the midway, one of the finest which has been secured to offer entertainment, while before the grandstand there will be performances of merit. Motorcycle stunts will also feature the attractions here.

OUR ANCESTORS DELIGHTED IN FAIRS

Fairs date back to earliest times but they blossomed in the Middle Ages. The roots of many modern exhibitions were laid in those days when the world was preparing for the Renaissance period.

Fairs had not only animal exhibitions alone. There have been fowl fairs, and during the robust days of the Middle Ages there were scenes of wrestling, horse-play and all sorts of antics. It seemed natural where large crowds congregated that there should be fun and plenty of it, running riot.

HORSE RACES AS PER USUAL

Fine Card Arranged For Track Events at Belleville Fair

Horse races make up one of the drawing cards of any fair. The noble animal is admired in his stall and he is loved in action on the track.

Today there are great textile fairs and exhibitions of so many other lines of human activity.

The fair is the natural expression of a desire to exhibit the best, to take pride in one's own. That spirit cannot disappear because it is vital to man's outlook upon life.

The board of the Belleville fair this year assures the people of the district that the horses which are to run will please the spectators. Many fine animals are ready for the starter to set them off down the getaway.

The track is in good condition, said to be the best of its kind in this portion of Ontario.

Large crowds filling the grandstands and circling the track fence are expected to see Belleville's annual track events next Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The India Sunday School Union with its 60,000 teachers, reaches approximately one million scholars in Sunday schools and day schools.

Reason constitutes the bond between God and ourselves.

Erection of the Lachine-Caughnawaga bridge over the St. Lawrence river, decided upon by the Quebec Government, will be a $3,000,000 undertaking.

Cattle Entries Largest in History of Belleville Fair

New Sheds to House All Livestock Next Week

NEXT WEEK'S SHOW

The fair which has been for ages the leading place of the products of the district has had many forms, fairs for horses, fairs for cattle, fairs for other live stock, even poultry shows, show, no sign of diminution. Those who have been regular attendants of the small rural fairs find that just when somebody had conceived the sensational thought that they were all but dead and just ready to become a mere name, they developed new life, spurted to new successes and have replaced themselves in the hearts of the people as one of the institutions based upon agriculture and without which agriculture could not progress.

Developments in city fairs have likewise been taking place. There are the large district and provincial fairs which are in a class all by themselves and they are adding to their appeal.

Cattle Branch.

One of the features in the revived Belleville Fair will be seen in the exhibits in cattle which are to surpass all records. New sheds have been erected in place of the temporary sheds which have been put up for the past two fairs and then torn down. The cattle will be housed.

Had such a cattle show taken place many years ago as has been witnessed at Belleville for the past several years and is to be witnessed this year, it would have been thought an amazing success. Of course there are changes — many breeds are exhibited and the dairy cow has in the past few years become a world wide name in connection with the cheese exporting industry. So it is no wonder that one of the classes of the fair must go to "boss" who deserves any ribbon.

The cow has been the basis of much wealth and in exhibiting cattle as they do in the fairs hereabouts, milk producers as well as the producers of beef cattle are demonstrating to the visitors to the fair the place that cattle occupy in the trade which takes place in this district and which is due to the dairy and beef herds.

The horse industry is not dead. Anyone who thinks it is may just go to the fair next week and see for himself. Such fine animals as have been entered are not raised just as sentiment. They play a very important role in the farming economy.

Hogs and sheep and poultry are three other large industries, branches of the livestock trade whose importance cannot be overlooked. The greatest display of these will be seen in the pens at the exhibition next week.

JUNIOR FAIR TO BE MECCA

Thousands Will Look at Exhibits of Young Farmers

A feature of the Belleville Fair on Aug. 30-Sept. 2 will be the Junior Fair or the Junior Farmers' Club of Hastings. Those who saw the demonstration of the young farmers last year want to see this year's demonstration.

For here the young farmers bring their own exhibits. There is no doubt of that. For the best cow a prize of $5 dollars is awarded, for second four dollars, for third two dollars and for fourth one dollar and for fifth one dollar. This is a sample of the incentive to farmer lads who are some day to run this fair.

Nothing finer that the fair develops can be found that this effort to stimulate the interest in ownership and in developing prize winning animals. Young farmers are responding to the appeal. The prize is good but the distinction is more.

Bits of Ancient Fair History Brought to Mind

A walk over the grounds of the agricultural park is one of the surest proofs to anyone that the grounds are not those to which attention was attached in the old days. The old grounds are just across the road, but buildings are all gone and the exhibition idea has become quite foreign to the other grounds now a part of the property of Albert College, where sports are held but no fairs.

Who does not recall the old crystal palace? One has to delve back into the years beyond recall or over the half of time to reconstruct the mammoth building which was the pride of many in a day when the automobile was not even prevalent in parts set aside many years ago. It had its winding stairway into the upstairs and many an adult recalls how the fairs in the nineties filled the building with the fine art, the vegetables, and all the other exhibits which made the oldtime exhibitions a success. The Change Comes.

Well, that old building went—a spark met it one night and it was no more but ashes and smoke. It was never rebuilt. In front of it ran the old racetrack, then a third mile in extent. The decision to make the track a half mile eliminated any chance of the old racers coming back. Some years ago a substitution for the building was put up at the northwest corner of the assistant park but it was not large enough. It lasted until after the old park was discarded and was later disposed of.

Yet under these oldtime conditions the fair was kept alive. During the present century that fair ran into difficulty and at last with grounds in disrepair and with buildings falling down, and nothing as if they were ready to fall over and the fences a perfect fright and an eyesore and not a thing of beauty except the sentiments which the fair kept in the last years of the old exhibition.

The time was ripe for change. It was badly needed. It was felt to be best to start all over again, let the old fair die and let them wait. That was done and the fair phoenix-like did arise from its ashes, one of the best fairs in Eastern Ontario, and a real city and district fair combined. That brings the story up to the present date.

Belleville Fall Fair

August 30—September 2

Belleville's annual fall agricultural exhibition will open on Tuesday next at the park in West Belleville under auspices which hold out good hopes of one of the most successful of fairs. The exhibition which has had such an enviable career since its revival a number of years ago and has resulted in a modern agricultural park with adequate buildings, tracks, and other necessities cannot afford this year to attract less interest than it has heretofore.

The entry list again proves what an appeal to the farmer the exhibition is proving. Marked increases in this branch of the fair's activities are apparent in most classes, in horses and especially in cattle. So great has been the demand for space that permanent quarters are being provided for all the cattle and horses which will this year be brought to the fair. What is true of the livestock branch is also true of many other phases of the exhibition. Attractions will not be lacking.

It has been noted of late that there is a revival of interest in the smaller city fair and in the rural fair. This is one of the healthiest indications of the trend of the day — back to essentials and the basic industry.

Both the farmers are more than loyally supporting the fair. Its institution the loss of which if it were ever intended would mean a loss of interest and prestige and the loss of a showplace for the countryside, the citizens of Belleville and the merchants are co-operating to make the city end of the exhibition what it ought to be.

Four big days next week are to be enjoyed, Tuesday, August 30th., Wednesday, 31st., Thursday, September 1st., and Friday September 2nd. These days are calling for the wholehearted attendance and interest of the people of the Bay of Quinte section. That the directors will succeed in their plan to make this a district institution seems within close range of achievement.

There is no place where one can get so much value for the money as in the entertainment and instruction provided by the annual fall exhibition. The fair is something which comes only once a year and can be timed only with loss to those who neglect to attend.

AT THE FAIR

At a recent meeting of the Fair Board it was decided to lower the price of ordinary seats in the grandstand to twenty-five cents. This is exclusive of box seats.

With the time for opening of the fair steadily drawing closer great interest has been evidenced both by exhibitors and those who will merely "go to look." More entries in the classes of exhibitors have been received this year, according to officers of the fair than for years past. Entries of every nature commonly found at a fair, from articles of home-cooking, household arts have shown a decided upturn.

Ample room and provision for all is promised every exhibitor this year. In the past, especially in the live-stock branch, insufficient room landed to keep down the attendance of exhibitors who would have placed entries if there had been accommodation for them. This year, however, the board promises ample room. New sheds have been built and equipped along the north fence. In them there will be enough room for almost two hundred head of cattle and more than that for smaller stock which may be exhibited.

Plenty of interest among horse lovers has been aroused by the fact that entries in the races which have been promised have been received from all points of the provinces and from United States. Besides filling the racing animals, stolid, beautifully built draught and harness horses will vie with each other for ribbons and badges which will denote their respective prize classes.

There will be a midway for the young and old. There will be base ball games and games of many other descriptions for the afternoons. There will be band music, the shouts of "tarkers" before the sideshow entertainments, the smell of peanuts and popcorn, pink lemonade, games of skill and amusement, and all the noises and other things commonly associated with a fall fair to give youngsters and oldsters to see and enjoy.

It will be a new fair, dressed up in new and better clothes, with the usual attractions of all sorts never seen on the grounds before. Officers of the board are jubilant over the fact that little now in the final arrangements need to be made to have the affair go like clockwork.

It starts on August 30, and will continue until September 2. All are cordially invited and a large turnout is expected.

WORTH WHILE PRIZE LISTS

Comprehensive Lists Are Result of Board's Labor

Prize lists are often said to be the backbone of a fair. There must be some reward for the time taken in bringing show stock to an exhibition as well as some evidence given of the right the producer or exhibitor of good stock has to expect apart as one of the leading men in the agricultural industry.

The prize list of the Belleville fair is a real inducement to this organization. Without it there would not be the incentive to go to the trouble of exhibiting, nor would there be so many cattle and other stock and other exhibits to draw the crowds. So the fair cannot exist without it.

The board has done its best to make the prize list comprehensive and appealing. How well it has succeeded is already told in the statements of the officers in regard to the totality of exhibits, many of the classes surpassing all records.

The planet Jupiter's year is equal to twelve of ours, that is, the earth goes twelve times around the sun, while Jupiter goes once.

HIGHWAY NO. 7

Belleville folk among others have been driving over the Actinolite-Perth section of the new provincial highway No. 7 which was officially opened on Wednesday by Premier Henry in a ceremony at Mountain Grove. Words of praise which motorists have expressed are more than proven as provincial representatives and others saw the roadway on Wednesday. The premier and others saw for themselves what a magnificent road lay before them, one of the finest scenic routes in Ontario as well as a highway which links up the Dominion Capital with the centre of Ontario by an abbreviated route.

Beyond the usual benefits of highways to develop the trade of the country and to improve on the conditions of life in the city and on the farm, this highway will play no small part in attracting the tourist trade. Driving its way over valleys and through fifty foot cuts in the solid granite, and providing a panorama which only the rise and fall of country can afford. During the past few months many a tourist has found his way into this new land and he has been but the forerunner of countless thousands who will find this new area one of the chief attractions of Ontario.

The building of this road was no small task. It was carried out in depressed times and served to employ thousands of men. Indeed labor took half the costs. In explosives alone one fifth of a million dollars was expended, this again returning dollars in a large measure into the hands of labor. In these days this was no mean achievement.

One of the features of this construction is the fact that the counties through which it passed did not have to contribute one cent towards its building. It now serves as a parallel highway to No. 2 highway which skirts the lake and river front.

This highway was constructed with expedition. Starting in December last it was finished about the first of June, one of the most rapid as well as perfect undertakings in the province.

SPREADING GERMS

A baby in Chicago fell ill with what was believed at first to be whooping-cough.

It proved instead to be a rare and dangerous infection with the Egyptian blood-worm, says the author of an article on "How We Get Our Diseases," in The American Weekly (New York). The baby had never been in Egypt. Where did the germs come from? From the snails, it was discovered, in the parlor aquarium with the goldfish.

But this is only one odd way to pick up a germ. We read further:

"Recruits in barracks in the British Navy got what the medical officers believed were too many cases of colds, influenza, and similar diseases. Experts traced this to infected dish-water.

"Women cleaning rabbits have developed a dangerous germ disease which research has shown to be common in rabbits and other animals. A man in California contracted it from a coyote. In the Island of Trinidad a mysterious disease which lately broke out there has been identified as rabies, spread by the bites of blood-sucking bats.

"Tooth-brushes, wash-basins, so-called sanitary drinking-fountains, door-knobs, postage-stamps, golf-balls, paper money, even bullets fired out of a gun, all have been held responsible by recent medical opinion for instances of germ infection. The American Medical Association has condemned the family cat. A Philadelphia hospital has barred daisies, because a certain kind of small, black bug that often is found in the daisy's yellow heart is believed to be able to spread another kind of dangerous germ.

"To help to balance these cases, however, Charles Nicolle, of Paris, discovered a few weeks ago an instance in which human beings proved to be the infecting agents and dogs the victims.

"Another curious and complicated relation between germs, human beings and animals is the fact, pointed out a year or so ago by Dr. C. O. Sappington of Chicago, that the increased used of automobiles has decreased the prevalence of lockjaw.

"Lockjaw is caused by a germ which was accustomed to live in the digestive system of horses, by which it was spread widely through the soil of roads, the dust of streets, and so on. Any slight cut or break in the skin was likely to give this lockjaw germ a chance to enter the body and make trouble. Nowadays, with fewer horses, the germs are much less common."

The red, white and blue, colors of the flag, which are the subject of the national song, "Red, White and blue," and the old phrase, "The Army and Navy Forever, Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue," are being carried out in the color decorations of the memorial hall of the local branch of the Army and Navy League. The new coat of paint and the decorations of the building draw attention to a revival of interest among veterans in the need of organization.

THE BETTER JOB
By Edgar A. Guest

If I were running a factory
I'd stick up a sign for all to see,
I'd print it large and nail it high
On every wall that the men walked by,
And I'd have it carry this sentence clear:
"The Better Job that you want is here!"
It's the common trait of the human race
To pack up and roam from place to place;
Men have done it for ages and do it now,
Seeking to better themselves somehow;
They quit their posts and their tools they drop
For a better job in some other shop.
It may be I'm wrong, but I hold to this—
That maybe or something must be amiss
When a man worth while must move away
For the better job with the better pay;
And something is fine in our renown
When a man can think of a better town.
So if I were running a factory
I'd stick up this sign for all to see,
Which never an eye in the place could miss:
"There isn't a better town than this;
You need not go wandering far or near
The Better Job that you want is here!"

A certain well-known bishop tells many amusing stories of his work among the Indians. On one occasion he was visiting a tribe, and it was arranged that after dinner he and one of the chiefs were to go for a long ride.

"Will it be safe for me to leave my baggage here?" asked the bishop before they started.

"Yes," was the reply of the chief. "There is not a white man within forty miles."

Having boasted in an article that he knew how to make an excellent cup of coffee, G. B. Shaw received a request for the recipe from a country parson. Shaw sent it and added to his letter: "I hope this is a genuine request and not a surreptitious mode of securing my autograph."

This angered the parson, who replied by return mail: "Accept my thanks for the recipe for making coffee. I wrote in good faith, and in order to convince you of that fact, allow me to return what it is obvious you infinitely prize, but which is of no value to me—your autograph."

COMMON COLD IS EXPENSIVE BE CAREFUL

Expert Offers Wholesome Advice as to Over-coming Colds

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Physiology

The "common cold" is as common as its name. In fact, head and chest cold occur so frequently, and so many people suffer one attack after the other regularly every year, that colds are belittled and treated with the indifference.

Yet bronchitis and even more serious chest conditions may develop from chronic colds due to weakening of the system, including tuberculosis. A cold, therefore, is really nothing to be trifled with.

Some persons are more susceptible to "catching cold" than others. With these a draft may provoke a fit of sneezing or exposure after a hot bath may bring on congestion of the mucous membrane lining of the nose and throat. Some remain unaffected even in the presence of a person coughing and sneezing people, while in others there is roughness and temperature and even physical prostration after the slightest provocation.

Colds come from germs that find lodgment in the air passages and mainly, so if one child in a closed room has a cold it can infect the entire class. A case worked in a factory can spread cold to all his fellow workers.

We must therefore try to avoid colds. We must stay away from people who have colds and when colds are spreading germs about, and when we have colds we must stay at home, thereby protecting others.

Perhaps the most precautionary measures do not seem very important. One may think that cold is likely to be over in a few days, therefore why worry so much about it. The fact remains nevertheless, that millions and millions of dollars are lost each year by persons who have lost one or more working days because of cold.

It is always best, when you have a cold, to remain indoors with the room at a uniform temperature. It is still better to remain in bed, even if there is no fever.

For a sore throat, gargling with baking soda is often most beneficial, using a teaspoonful dissolved in a glass of warm water, this should be repeated every two hours.

When the throat gives pain especially on swallowing, dissolving one aspirin tablet in an ordinary tumbler of warm water and using this as a gargle is likely to give prompt relief. Various mouth washes may likewise be used for the same purpose.

Sniffing up a salt solution made of a teaspoonful of fine salt to a pint of sterile water may open up a congested nose and also relieve breathing. The water must be made sterile, however, by boiling, and must not be sniffed up too hard. Otherwise there is danger of forcing germs into the canal behind the nose and into the openings of the Eustachian canals which lead to the middle ear.

In any case of cold and with cough—best expectoration it is always best to consult a doctor, or when fever is high and the patient really feels sick.

Pain in the chest or behind the ear should always be investigated medically, also tenderness and pain over the eyes, which may mean infection of the frontal sinuses.

Be particularly careful when colds hang on and do not yield to treatment. Such colds undermine the system and often lead to more serious disease.

To prevent colds, keep the body at its highest point of efficiency possible. If you catch cold it is because you are not as healthy as you might be!

BURY AUTHOR BY SON'S SIDE

Kenneth Grahame Ceased to Write When Son Met Death

PANGBOURNE, Berkshire, Aug. 25.—The body of the author, Kenneth Grahame, was removed during the night from its temporary grave in the churchyard here to be removed for permanent burial in Holywell Churchyard, Oxford, beside the body of Grahame's only son Alastair.

The young Grahame was killed in a railway accident in 1920 while a student at Oxford.

The author was devotedly fond of the boy, whose death clouded his later years so that he ceased to write. His much desired burial in Holywell had been prevented by difficulties connected with a grave site. They have been overcome by his widow's efforts.

In Japan a judge secures his position by examination.

WHEAT BULGES SHARE MARKET

Leaders Held in Check By Persistent Selling

New York, Aug. 25—The bull movement in stocks received a filling from the share market today. Stocky surged ahead in heavy buying at the start, turned somewhat hesitant, but bulged up again after wheat had rushed up more than 2 cents a bushel. Some of the leaders, however, were held in check by realiz persistent selling whenever they turned upward, especially American Telephone.

Eastman shot up 7 points, apparently on short covering against short, then lost some of its rise. Gas rose more than 1 point. International Business Machines nearly as much. Issues up around 2 to 3 or 5 points. Steel U. S. Steel preferred, National Steel, Allied Chemical and Dye, Gulf Oil and a point or more appeared through-out the list on the upside of the session in a moderate wave of selling in the early afternoon.

The strength in wheat was a particularly welcome development in Wall Street, for somewhat heavy tendency in that market had tended to depress bullish enthusiasm in the securities markets from time to time during the past few weeks.

Rails were sought in some volume, particularly the coalers, while, anticipating the report of the Royal Commission on transportation. Buying of coppers dwindled somewhat, but was fairly active, but made moderate progress. Utilities were inclined to lag during rest of the day.

FIRST MASS 100 YEARS AGO

Commemoration Program at St. Peter's, Trenton Carried Out

Trenton, Aug. 25 (Special)—Commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the dedication of Mass in the parish of Trenton a week's programme has been carried out by the congregation of St. Peter's parish. It was begun on Sunday by the Knights of Columbus who organized a drive to raise funds for a memorial. On Tuesday afternoon a garden party and bridge was held. Card tables were arranged on the spacious lawn of the school and presbytery and forty tables were in play during the afternoon. Flowers and shrubs were used effective with decorations of bunting and in the Papal colors and Vatican flag. Afternoon tea was served in the attractive dining room. The convenors of the affair were Mrs. C. J. Fortune, Mrs. J. A. Mcnab and Miss Winnie Connolly.

Lita G. Chaplin Battles Charlie

Signs Movie Contract For Children, Ex-Husband Opposed

Los Angeles, Aug. 25—Lita Grey Chaplin, divorced wife of Charles Chaplin, film comedian, said today she would oppose efforts of her former husband to prevent their sons from entering films.

"I don't believe any parent has the right to take away the chance that their children may have for success and particularly when it is one which they will follow in the footsteps of their father," said Mrs. Chaplin.

The screen comedian was in possession of a temporary order restraining Mrs. Chaplin from allowing the boys, Charles, Jr., 7, and Sidney, 5, to act in films until a hearing on the order will be held Saturday.

Mrs. Chaplin recently signed a contract for the boys and herself with a film production company.

The petition of Chaplin for the order set forth the charge that Mrs. Chaplin career for the two boys would be a detriment to their future welfare. He also declared that he is fearful the children's minds "will be poisoned" before they will be influenced to follow a profession for which their may not be adapted."

Chaplin also recalled that a trust fund of $100,000 had been provided for each son, and in addition the sum of $1,000 a month for their education, subsistence and support was provided.

CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. Thomas F. Jordan and family wish to thank all who have so manifestly shown their sympathy in their bereavement, and to the various organizations who so signally honoured the late husband and father's memory. They wish also to thank the many military units and societies and numerous friends and citizens for floral offerings. a33-1i

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

At The Belle

BELLE WITH MIRL YED-WHEELER AND WOOLSEY MORE LAUGHS IN
"HOLD 'EM JAIL"

The thought of a prison football team is funny enough to begin the extreme in absurd equations, but the entire prison is given a collegiate atmosphere with bands, cheering sections and the enthusiastic alumni with quaint and original costumes, in the uproarious new gridiron talent, the basic idea really becomes a laugh riot.

Just how funny the whole nonsensical whim can be is demonstrated by the new picture, "Hold 'Em Jail" at the Belle Theatre today and Friday, starring Wheeler and Woolsey, Edna May Oliver and Rosco Ates in the principal roles.

The vehicle is the happiest attempt to date for the comedy team of Wheeler and Woolsey. The picture is delightful nonsense without a plot, and is most ideal for the comics' unique style of fun-making.

Their new star was and never will be a prison like Mistress pemberlary, but Edna May Oliver as Mrs. Woolsey (and when they boast of their school's football prowess) is a tough dive where the "scouts" for Bidermore are looking for talent.

Also, there never was a warden like Rosco Ates, modestly had a sister Edna May Oliver, who had a niece like pretty Betty Grable, who supplies that necessary "love interest" in collaboration with Wheeler.

Wheeler is presented as the world's greatest sissy, stealing the man who becomes all-American football star.

The stuttering Rocco Ates is the Bidermore coach who tries to personally accepts a parole as a critical moment of the game" and then nearly wrecks Bidermore's chances for the 100th Penitentiary Conference Championship.

The action and dialogue of "Hold 'Em Jail" are fascinating from the start of slapstick. By the time the play is built up to the climax of the big game one should reasonably be at steamed up over Bidemore's chances on the gridiron. Actually there never was a football game played like it, and probably never will be.

Wheeler and Woolsey win for Bidemore but not until they have resorted to all manner of the silent gag writer's minds.

Besides the antics of Wheeler Woolsey, Miss Oliver and Ates, Edgar Kennedy helps for plenty of horse play as the little and snippety warden. Warren Hymer as a dumb, dumb convict and Paul Hurst, coach are also in the fun contest.

Many famous all-American football stars appear in the lineups of the prison and Bidemore, but whether they can be recognized made up as "Big Jumbo" is another matter.

4 Variety Units

Jimmie Gleason in "Stellin' Home", Belle Sound News, a funny cartoon, and Golden Scales, another of the popular Fisherman's Paradise stories, will be exhibited on the same program.

At The Capitol

"WINNER TAKE ALL"
and "BEHIND STONE WALLS"

Just as he sprang upon the world in the most authentic of gangster pictures "The Public Enemy" and in "Little Caesar," the most realistic audio racing picture, "Lucky Dogs Roars", so does James Cagney provide the thrills of fighting and of the prize-ring in his latest, Warner Bros. feature "Winner Take All," which comes to the Capitol Theatre Friday and Saturday.

The virile young personality who has taken a step higher with each succeeding picture, has eclipsed all his former successes in "Winner Take All." With a reputation for punch and power in his pictures, Cagney has happily cast as a two-fisted pugilist who can't be punched in fight or love.

The prizefight scenes are masterpieces of realism. Cagney proves that he can not only act but can box like a boxer, but can box with the best of them.

Marion Nixon a new leading lady for James Cagney, makes her initial appearance in this picture, giving a lovely portrayal of the girl who finally wins Jimmy's love. Virginia Bruce acquits herself admirably as the society girl.

BEHIND STONE WALLS

"Behind Stone Walls" is a story of murder, conviction and circumstantial evidence of the son of a distinguished southern family, the release upon the forlhcoming of the true facts in the case.

John Clay's second wife, unfaithful to him, is discarded by her lover, and kills him. Her son, who is trying to shield her from the law takes the blame who had previously shown his standing challenge to fight. Before the scheduled fight, however, the acceptance of the invitation to fight is up in the middle of the street have provided the ons bright spot in the morning's routine of events.

Today the bull dog fought the opposition in a draw. He had picked on a large collie which promptly proved his capabilities of looking after himself in any street fight. But a draw was declared, and threatened to wreck championship honors from the bull dog. However, was broken up by the appearance of the collie's master with the relief to others parted the warring animals. Both dogs had had sufficient.

DRIVER'S LICENSE LIFTED FOR 1 YEAR

Allan Mitchell of this city pleaded guilty to a charge of driving a car while under the influence of liquor in the police court held before Magistrate Mikel Thursday morning.

The case arose out of an automobile accident, which occurred some five miles west of Belleville on Highway No. 2 late Wednesday evening, when the car driven by Mitchell collided with another car driven by a woman resident of Belleville.

Mitchell was given a year's suspension of his driver's license.

Tweed Flower Show

Tweed, Aug. 24.—The annual flower show of the Tweed Horticultural Society was held in Lakeside Park Pavilion on Tuesday. The number of exhibits and quality of bloom compared very favorably with former years. The judges, Mr. J. P. Bradshaw, Mrs. (Dr.) P. Web and Miss Hilary Parlow of Stirling, officiating for the first time at the local show were surprised at the interest manifested by the society members and the general response which they made to the appeal of the directors to show their flowers and to share in the flower show a success. The thanks of the local executive is due those judges for the evident care which they exercised in the placing of the awards and while all the exhibitors probably did not see eye to eye with them in all their decisions, very little exception could be taken to their judgment. The list of prize winners is appended:

CHINOOK WINDS MADE TO ORDER

Manufacture Weather to Test Varieties of Wheat

(By The Canadian Press)

OTTAWA—"Chinooks", the warm dry winds which sweep through the passes of the Rocky Mountains on the prairies, particularly in Southern Alberta, can be made to order now.

They made to order Chinooks will not sweep the Western prairies, however, but in a glassed-in chamber, set at the University of Alberta by experimenters of the National Research Council of Canada. The apparatus, constructed by the research workers, is similar to that used by Dr. V. V. Talanzov, one of the Russian experts engaged to develop the drought-resistant grain plants.

It consists of a glassed-in chamber connected with a heating and cooling apparatus. Fans for wind blasts complement the temperature, and humidity control are placed in the floor.

Plants to be tested are grown in the greenhouse or in pots in the field and brought to the chamber for special chamber where various combinations of heat, wind, sunshine, humidity and soil moisture can be supplied.

In 1928 the University of Alberta received a number of Russian wheat varieties. They were developed for growing in areas with a limited precipitation. The results have been reported to be superior to Canadian grain plants in resistance to drought and in very inferior in certain other agronomic traits, especially quality of grain. Dr. E. S. Hopkins, professor of genetics and plant breeding at the University of Alberta, started a breeding program by making nine crosses between the Russian varieties and local strains which are superior in those characteristics in which the Russian plants are inferior in those characteristics in which the Russian plants are superior. The hybrid material developed in these crosses reached the segregating generations and now an intensive study is about to begin. The field tests are being conducted at Brooks, Alta.

New in Looks—New in Taste... New in What it is!

OUR latest cereal creation, and, after first really all-new cereal in years . . . Crackels. You have never seen or tasted anything remotely like it.

New in looks . . . shaped like tiny pillows, sun-coloured. So light they float on top of milk or cream.

New in taste . . . a flavour you have never tasted before.

New in what it is . . . not just one cereal but a blend of different grains with the most nourishing parts of each.

More delicate, more crisp and crunchy than any other cereal. Your first taste of them will tell you why children love them . . . why little eyes dance when Crackels come to the table. And little bowls are passed for more. Mothers serve Crackels to coax children to take all the healthful milk and cream they need. Others give it between meals by handfuls right from the box.

Crackels are crisp as freshly popped corn. Crunchy as cracker-jack.

Wholesome as any cereal can be. Economical, too, for there are twelve big helpings in every package.

QUAKER CRACKELS

Made in Canada by The Quaker Oats Company, largest cereal millers in the Empire.

GOOD GIRL

By Harry S. Burns

Marther Mathews stood with a frightened look on her face as, with hand extended toward the nob of the kitchen door, she listened to the approaching footsteps of her husband. There was nothing to fear—yet as she repeated this to herself time after time in an attempt to bolster her courage she realized only too well that each night the fear was getting a stronger hold on her.

"Everything will be all right," she tried to convince herself as she prepared for the ordeal.

John Mathews had approached to within ten feet of the door when she opened it. His quick and affectionate embrace held only a trace of anxiety or fear which remained in her mind. He had noticed anything out of the ordinary as he swept her into his arms, he said nothing.

Later as the supper progressed, Marther began to feel a bit easier. John had that boyish and happy grin so much a part of his make-up. Everything seemed all right between John and the world. Yes, she could rest comfortably—till the next evening.

Yet, she knew only too well that some night he would come storming into their apartment and accuse her of harboring—under his roof—her former husband. What difference if he was sick? She had no business or right, to do what she had done.

When she had come across Harry Bacon five weeks before, she saw at a glance that he was at death's door. Without her present husband's knowledge, she had visited the sick ex-husband a number of times. Try as she would, nothing could persuade him to go to a hospital.

"Doctors and nurses," he often repeated, with grim humor, "make me sick."

"Anyhow," he always added, "there was no chance—or hope."

As he was dying she knew she. She knew medical aid and treatment would only prolong the final decision. So she took not let him suffer to the end—alone.

Once she had made up her mind to have him under her care—under her own roof—she booked no opposition. She had decided and no matter what the consequences, that was that.

It was not a hard matter to work it. Soon Marther could return to the city easily enough. Then, while in some it might seem improbable, it is not impossible that the brother would get sick; also that he would meet his sister in front of his home while he was enjoying a few minutes in the fresh air and sunshine. Such things—unfortunately, it is true—but they happen.

So it was that Henry Bacon became a part of the Mathews's household and came under the care of his divorced wife in her husband's home.

Six days previous after four weeks and one day in his new home, Henry Bacon had died. Still the fear of discovery gripped Marther Mathew's heart. It was not what she had done but how she had done it.

It was after the meal, when everything had been put away and they were seated before the fireplace that once again fear was racing through her heart. John turned the discussion on the subject she had always religiously avoided and which, up to now, he had likewise refrained from discussing.

"I saw Johnny Hensdale today".

Marther's heart leaped. Johnny Hensdale—one of her childhood playmates. Always lying dormant, ready to spring to the front, that fear of which she stood in dread surged through her.

He was gazing dreamingly into the fire as he continued. "Had lunch with him. Told him about Henry. Insisted you never had a brother. Funny how some people like to talk. Thought he would never run down."

Then Johnny had spilled everything to him. She rather thought he would. What a job he could do along that line once he got started. How well she knew his reputation for being the first to "tell the tale". The more people and the more he could start, the better he liked it.

Well, she felt suddenly relieved as the thought came to her, she would have to confess everything and take the consequences.

"Bakers and Shaughnessy, my old college classmates, came into the office today. They are getting up a big reunion. Want us two to attend. Told them I'd leave it to you. Won't be for three or four months yet."

Silence followed his abrupt change of the topic. Then:

"You know even after ten years a person retains a lot of love for the old school and college. Just like a grown-up still loves toys. It is true, though a lot of jokes and cartoons are made up about it. In fact, I wouldn't give a darn for anyone, man or woman, who at one time loved anyone or anything and did not hold some of that love years and years later— yes, even unto death."

"Then—" she questioned softly.

He nodded as he moved to pick up his hat and coat.

"Too bad, as an officer of the lodge I have to be at the meeting tonight, but I'll be home early if I have to break up the meeting to get away."

Stepping softly behind her chair he leaned over and kissed her.

"Good girl," he murmured softly.

Good girl! For a long while she sat without moving. Never again would she be afraid to confide in her husband. She smiled happily as she thought of it.

What a lot of meaning in a few words.

TWEED FLOWER SHOW PROVES GREAT SUCCESS

Tweed, Aug. 25 (Special)— The final match in the senior section of the Eastern District Golf Association was played on Mr. W. E. Gordon's clay courts on Saturday afternoon between Peterboro Club and the local club. Owing to the late arrival of the Peterboro players some of the events were unfinished before dark and made it impossible for play to be concluded. Tweed won three of the seven events lost two and divided the remaining two. Each player on the Tweed club has been undefeated in any of his matches. The local club has defeated Peterboro on two occasions and Peterboro on the latter's courts. The match on Saturday had no bearing on the final standing of the league, though it is quite safe to predict that had the events been concluded Tweed would have emerged victorious.

After lunch was served on Mrs. W. S. Gordon's lawn Mr. George Scott of Petrboro, presented to Mr. Milton Patterson, President of Tweed Tennis Club on behalf of the Eastern District Golf Association Ontario Tennis Association. Previous winners of the trophy are Cobourg, 1924; Peterboro, 1925; Oshawa, 1926; Campbellford 1927, 1928, 1929 (no league play-off in 1930); Oshawa, 1930, 1931.

Results played Saturday:

First Men's Singles—Borden Rolling, Tweed, defeated M. Calton, Peterboro, 6-3; 6-4.

Second Men's Singles—E. Arber, Tweed, met by H. A. Wilson, Peterboro, 8-4; 6-4.

Ladies' Singles—Miss D. Bowers, Tweed, vs. Miss I. Davidson, Peterboro, 6-2; 5-7; 6-4; won second set 6-3 (unfinished).

First Men's Doubles—W. McGee and I. D. Corcoran, Tweed vs. G. Scott and H. A. Wilson, Peterboro, lost first set 6-3, won second 6-1 (unfinished).

BABY BOYS TAKE PRIZES AT SHOW

OTTAWA, Aug. 24.—The boys are sitting pretty today and the old fashioned custom for men to be superior to women is still the vogue.

At the Baby Show of the Central Canada Exhibition boys won all the prizes during the first day's judging. There were 56 entries, including several beautiful blonde baby girls, but the boys were the victors.

The judging continues today and the ladies may be turned. Three hundred babies, including 13 sets of twins, are entered in the various classes.

Children enjoy milk and cream on these delicious Corn Flakes

SERVE Quaker Corn Flakes if you want your children to take all the milk and cream they need. The rare flavour of these crisp golden flakes tempts young appetites. Mothers know their children need no coaxing when they offer them this delicious cereal.

More mobile and enticing than other corn flakes is the fact that for the flavour is of higher quality than it is usual to put into a corn flake. Special malt, pure CANE sugar and salt of crystal purity give Quaker Corn Flakes a finer flavour. All the original crispness and flavour are preserved for you by our triple seal and wax wrapper.

Give the children all the Quaker Corn Flakes they want. Rich energy food, light and easily digestible at any time of day. Economical, too, for Quaker Corn Flakes cost less than a cent a serving. MADE IN CANADA.

SUICIDE NOTE MAY BE HOAX

Officials Do Not Take Note Seriously But Investigate

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 24—State Reservation officials were not inclined to take seriously a "suicide" note found today on the bridge leading from the mainland to Goat Island. The note bore the name of George Fran, Akron, Ohio.

"The only way I can find happiness is to go over the Canadian Falls. So I have intended to a long time. When you find this I will be under the American Falls, asleep forever."

Tracy G. Leves, Superintendent of the Reservation police said that he would communicate with Akron, Ohio authorities.

SQUAD MEETS MINERS

Renton, Ill., Aug. 24—Sheriff Robinson sent a squad of his deputies, armed with machine guns, to the county line on the Mt. Vernon Road today, with instructions to turn back striking miners.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself and ma said, Well, I suppose you dreemed sweet dreems last nite about that Mrs. Perry.

That who? pop said, and ma said, You know very well who, you spent hourr last nite at the Hewses testing to be in a corner like a lost tertle dow. What you found attractive in that bedidded scarecrow is completely beyond my human corprehension, she said.

I dident find any attractive fisically, perish the thawt, pop said, Mentally she's a brilliant woman, but I had to carefully term my eyes very while I tavted to her, I gods, she had a complexion made up exclusively of fat freckles intemperced with little freckles, and her eyes dident look the same way and I geut even where they were the same color, and she had a broken nose and a long under lip and a neck like a pipestem, he said.

Well now Willyum, it's not nice to exagerate ma said. Of corse I dident wasn't a raving bewty by any concesrable stretch of the wildest imagination, but still many people would consider a woman of that type good looking to a man. But my goodness what made her so brilliant? I mean what did she say to give you the impression that she had such a marvelous exceptional brainy mind? she said.

Well, her most sparkling remark was to the effect that I was the most intriuing conversationalist she ever listened to, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum Perin you're just trying to get out of the true state of affairs, and the true state of affairs is that you thawt that awful looking creature was the most beutiful woman you ever layed eyes on.

Yes pop said, I'm going to start an over seasin pop said.

Wich it did.

IN DEPTHS of DESPAIR

MRS. MARY JONES lives in New Mexico. Every month was a nightmare to her. Her lower back, she says, "suffered terrible pains through my head, backache and female weakness."

She tried everything. Visited clinics. Nothing helped her. Finally she gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial . . . scarcely hoping it would succeed where more expensive things had failed.

But she was surprised. Through its tonic action, it built up her health . . . lessened her pain. She says, "My backache is completely relieved."

THE Kellogg Company has been making corn flakes for 25 years. During that time, many brands have come and gone. But Kellogg's Corn Flakes have climbed steadily ahead in popularity—simply because Kellogg's have always been the best corn flakes possible to make.

Behind each package of Kellogg's Corn Flakes are the modern plants of the Kellogg Company at London, Ont.—clean, sunlit, sanitary. Behind it is an organization—thousands strong—of loyal, efficient workers. Behind it is the personal guarantee of W. K. Kellogg: "You must be satisfied with every package of Kellogg's Corn Flakes. If you do not think they are more delicious, crisper, fresher—mail the empty package to us and get your money back."

These are policies—these are assurances of quality—that have taken 25 years to build. No wonder Kellogg's Corn Flakes are the standard of value everywhere. When you are offered a substitute for genuine Kellogg's, it is seldom in the spirit of service or profit to you. Insist on the red-and-green package.

Kellogg's are guaranteed the freshest corn flakes you can buy. They are protected by an inside completely sealed WAXTITE bag which brings the flakes to your very table oven-fresh and perfect. It's a patented Kellogg feature.

QUALITY ALWAYS HIGHER THAN PRICE

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"What a lovely night, Kim," she said as she strolled down the steps beside him. "I'm so happy I'm in the world.... Kim, I'm so happy I'm foolish. I've been walking on air all day long. You'll never know how hard it was for me to get down to look long enough to tell the people at the office that I'm leaving.... Kim, I'm going to believe that we're really going to be married in two weeks!"

But she did believe it, of course. For almost a year she had been accustomed by an absolute faith in the happiness that she and Kim were going to find in the first days together. And now that happiness was almost within their reach.... It was as close as the large yellow stars that hung just above Silver Street.

Kim's car, a roadster without a top, stood at the curbstone. He jumped into it and helped Mary Faith in after him. There had been a time when she had hesitated to step into the car first, but that had been a long time back in the first days of Kim's days of their engagement.

"Kim," Mary Faith said as they started off, "what did your mother have to say about our getting married on such short notice?" Even if I saw her note tonight I began to feel a little chary, dear. I don't suppose she's going to try to talk us out of this, do you?"

Kim didn't answer.... In the glow of the dash-light she saw his eyebrows draw together and a muscle in his cheek twitch as his jaw tightened.

And all at once she sensed that there was some change in him. He was not the Kim who had kissed her good night in Mrs. Puckett's parlor the night before.... She looked at him again, trying to pen, strain the secret of his difference. There was something sullen and resentful about him tonight.

CHAPTER III

"Kim, what's the matter? Are you angry with me—" she was beginning when he brought his hand down hard on her, interrupting her.

"Wait, let me tell you about my mother," he said. "She was awake last night, when I got home and I told her that you and I had just about made up our minds to get married on the first—"

"Just about made up our minds!" echoed Mary Faith as she stopped. "Why, Kim, we had made up our minds, haven't we? I thought we settled everything last night."

Surely there had been no ifs-an'-buts about their getting married when they had talked it over the night before. Kim had been very clear and definite about the plans for them.

"They would be married on the first day of October, a Saturday, and leave town on the little roadster for a week's honeymoon. "Just dreaming around the state. Then they would come back to the flat where he and his mother lived and settle down to be Mr. and Mrs. Kimberly Farrell for the rest of their lives.

"Of course, we did settle everything," he said now. "But you asked me what my mother thinks about our getting married, and I'm telling you. She thinks we ought to wait until I'm making more money—enough, to get a flat for her own somewhere. She doesn't to live with us. She says it'll never work."

In the darkness Mary Faith's face flushed. "She's been saying that for almost four years, Kim," she reminded him. "She knows it will be years before you'll be making enough money to keep up two homes. You're twenty-eight and I'm twenty-four and we know we care for each other and that we're old enough to marry and settle down. I'm sure we won't mind facing a little poverty together. I—we have to. Suppose we do have to pinch pennies? Who cares?"

She bent her head and her lips brushed the sleeve of his coat. "I shall love pinching pennies. I shall be the most sting wife under the sun—as well as the happiest one," she added.

"You're sure you won't mind having her live with us?" he asked after a minute or two. "I never could stand listening to two women bickering every night when I came home let me tell you."

His voice was harsh and his eyes were straight ahead of him on the lamplit road. He took his hand from hers and laid it on the steering wheel.

"Kim please don't say things like that to me. Haven't I always been nice to your mother? she asked him. "And you know I won't care who lives with us or where we live—so long as you and I are together."

Kim and his mother lived on the ground floor of an old-fashioned apartment in Wilton street.

Mary Faith always enjoyed her visits there because it was like a home; but it was a depressing sort of place.

The living room was crowded with upholstered furniture. All of the chairs had little lace doilies on their backs. A big brown couch filled with patterns stood in the front of the fireplace. On a shelf above it stood a cupid clock made of silver gilt. The cupid was much too fat, and he smirked.

Over the whole flat hung the smell of dusty carpets, coffee and meals cooked in grease long ago.

Mrs. Farrell was sitting beside the window, reading the evening paper, when Mary Faith and Kim walked into the room at fifteen minutes after seven. She glanced up at the cupid and Mary Faith saw that he was seven o'clock.

"I had dinner ready forty-five minutes ago," she said, getting slowly to her feet. "I made a cheese souffle. It'll ruined by this time, but if you don't care, I'll get you some. Would you like to put your things in my room, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith followed her down the dark hall to Kim's bed room. She took off her hat and coat, and smoothed her hair back from her forehead.

Mrs. Farrell stood watching her second set of dishes, with reddened eyes. Then she fluttered something about the gas stove and began hurrying out of the room. She bumped against the door as she went. She was the awkward kind of stout woman who is always bumping into doors or dropping dishes.

Mary Faith hurried after her. "Can't I help you with dinner?" she asked. "You know what a treat it is to me to help around a kitchen."

She had always had a mortal longing for a kitchen of her own. A bright new little kitchen, all colors of blue and white, with pretty dotted curtains with sunshine and wind coming through them.

Mrs. Farrell hesitated quite a lot about cooking when I took that position as Mr. Bennett's secretary. Club last winter" she went on, lying quite calmly for an apron. "What can I do to help?"

Kim's mother didn't answer her question. A senile flushed in her plump face for an instant. A tight, lipped smile.

"I guess you didn't learn to keep house in your boarding house," she said. "There are eggs in the icebox. How would you like to fry some in the way you learned to fry them at your wonderful woman's club last winter? There's dripping in that bowl on the stove and trying pan's hanging under the sink."

She began to scrape souffle into a bowl on the dirtin board.

"This is the sort of thing you'll have to learn to expect when you're married to Kimberley" she said presently. "Ideals spoiled because he's here, to eat them on time! Whole dinners put away untouched sometimes because he doesn't show up at all! But I suppose I should not complain, because it's all my fault. I've spoiled him all his life. I've made a rod for my own back!"

There was bitterness in her voice and in her face. Bitterness that narrowed her eyes and drew down the corners of her mouth. And yet it was apparent that she had once been very handsome. There was still a kind of beauty in her straight features and in the mass of her head with its bright brown hair.

"What time did he go to your place tonight?" she asked suddenly. "Around seven."

"Did he ask him where he had been until that time?" Kim's mouth, as he was lighting the gas ring under the coffee pot now.

"He said he had been delayed at the office."

"Did you see him last Sunday?" Mrs. Farrell asked next.

"I saw him last Sunday night. He spent the whole evening with me", said Mary Faith turning to look at her with puzzled eyes. "What is Kim's mother getting at anyway, she wondered.

CHAPTER IV

"Well, he was gone all day, Mary Faith. He got up early in the morning, and drove the car out of the yard before I was really awake. Why don't you ask him where he was all day and who was with him? I'm only his mother, of course; but you have a right to know what he does with his time."

Mary Faith shook her head.

She had a fine contempt for women who did not trust the men they loved—women like Mrs. Dan Bassett whose husband was shipping clerk at Nesbit's.... Dan Bassett never looked twice at any of the girls who worked in the building, but Mrs. Bassett gave him no peace. She was always popping in unexpectedly to see what he was doing and she kept the telephone wires hot on the nights when he worked late.

"I'll be no Mrs. Dan Bassett!" thought Mary Faith firmly.

"I wouldn't want Kim to think I didn't trust him. Mrs. Farrell," she said, "and that's just what he would think if I started to cross-question him about things like that. I know he wants to marry me, and that's enough for me."

Mrs. Farrell blew out the match she held, and tossed it under the stove where were a dozen or so burnt matches. It flared up and she set her foot on it.

"He hasn't any business wanting to marry you or any other girl just yet!" she said violently. "He owes me a little consider. Here we are struggling to get along on what he makes down in that law office—and he's old and bedridden and says he's going to get married in two weeks! Oh well, I'll let you know! On what?"

"On what, Mrs. Farrell?" Mary Faith replied, breaking eggs into the sizzling pan. "Sixty dollars a week is plenty of money for three people to live on comfortably. You and I can do every bit of work around in this flat. We won't even send the laundry out—"

"I don't know why he wants to get married anyway." Kim's mother went on, ignoring the interruption in her. "I'm sure I don't."

"Everybody wants to get married sooner or later, I suppose." Mary Faith spoke as gently as she could. "You want to, you mean! Mrs. Farrell turned on her suddenly, her plump face full of color. "Kimberley doesn't want to get married. He knows he isn't making enough money to keep up two homes and he knows I won't be happy when he brings you here to live. Besides that, he's running around—"

She stopped talking as Kim pushed the door open and stepped into the kitchen. He had changed his coat for a brown velveteen smoking jacket and a pipe was gripped between his teeth.

"What's all the row about?" he asked mildly. "And how about a little chow for a hungry man instead of all this talk?"

His mother took a pitcher of cream from the top of the icebox and thrust it into Mary Faith's hands.

"Put that on the table. I'll watch the eggs, Mary Faith. And pour the water. The pitchers on the side, board."

Mary Faith carried the pitcher into the dining room where a drop, light with a yellow glass shade hung over the table. She set it down on a German silver tray that was flanked by a cut-glass vinegar cruet and a bottle of meat sauce.

"People can't call themselves poor who live as comfortably as this," she thought, glancing around the room. "Sixty dollars a week is a lot of money. If I properly handled it—"

A German silver pitcher of water stood on the sideboard. When she picked it up she saw that it left a wet white ring on the polished wood. There were other faint white rings near it. No one could call Kim's mother a careful housekeeper. She found herself thinking as she began to fill the water glasses.

Suddenly there was a crash and a loud scream from the kitchen. After that there was a second of dead silence. And then Kim's voice calling her: Mary Faith! Come here—hurry!"

Somehow his mother had man, aged to knock the coffee pot off the stove while she was taking the fried eggs from the pan. Stream of pale brown liquid were running down her arms and the front of her gray [illegible] dress when Mary Faith opened the kitchen door.

The coffee pot lay on its side on the floor.

"My arms—oh, my poor arms," she was sobbing hysterically. "Oh, my arms—" She began to moan, rolling her large head from side to side.

HIS WEIGHT WENT UP AND UP

Now He's Reducing Over 1 lb. a Week

More Active and Less Tired

All big men—and big women, too, for that matter—should read what this stout man has to tell them.

"I am only a smallish man, that is in height, but big the other way. I did not notice it much at first, but eventually it got that I was a great deal too heavy, for myself, and so much heavier that I was tired by the time I walked 100 yards. I took advice and was told what to eat and what not to eat, leave this and that out, and although I followed the advice as closely as possible, I only got heavier.

"One day I saw a paper something about the new discovery Kruschen was doing for stout people. I bought some, followed instructions, and am pleased to say that I have reduced 9 lbs. in 4 weeks. I am more active and less tired—it has really done me good. If this letter is any good to you, you have my full permission to use same. I shall recommend Kruschen to everyone inclined to stoutness."

—J. H. B.

Unlike most salts, Kruschen is not merely a laxative. It is a combination of six salts which have a tonic influence upon every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of your body. Kruschen Salts clear the system free from encumbering waste matter. The extra wastage is regularly expelled, it will give rise to rheumatic and other body poisons. And Nature is liable to take the defensive measure of storing this poison-breeding material out of the way in the form of fatty tissue. Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 40c. and 75c. per bottle.

AUG 25 MR. AND MRS.— JOE AND VI STAY OUT OVERNIGHT

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 13 (Metropolitan Newspapper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The witch-doctor lay waiting, resigned to whatever horrible fate awaited him at the hands of this supposed demon of the woods. "Why do you not kill me?" he asked in quavering tones. "I would save you if I could," replied Tarzan, "but Numa has mortally wounded you." For a moment the old man was silent. "Often I saw you, years ago," he said, "when you lived with the hairy apes, near the village of Mbonga. Tell me before I die—are you man or devil?"

Tarzan laughed. "I am a man," he said. The old fellow sighed and shook his head. "You have tried to save me from Numa," he murmured. "For that I shall reward you. I am a great witch-doctor. Listen to me, while mani I see bad days ahead of you. A god greater even than you will rise up and strike you down. Turn back before it is too late. I see——" He paused and gasped for breath, then crumpled into a heap and died. Tarzan wondered what else he had seen.

It was very late when the ape-man re-entered the huts and lay down among his black warriors. None had seen him go and none saw his return. He thought about the warning of the old witch-doctor; but he did not turn back for he was unafraid. But had he known what lay in store for one he loved most of all in the world, he would have flown through the trees to her side and allowed the gold of Opar to remain forever hidden in its forgotten storehouse.

Behind Tarzan that morning another white man also pondered something he had heard during the night and very nearly did he give up his project and turn back upon his trail. It was Werper, the gunbearer, who in the dead of night had heard far away a sound that filled his soul with terror. It had been Tarzan's own cry of victory, so frightful a sound that Werper trembled as he remembered it next day. But he stood in greater fear, of Achmet Zek, and dared not return.

"Yammy" Jamieson, Hurling Ace of Ponies Knocked from Rubber as Nationals Win 7-6

Stage Real Comeback After Being Down Four Runs

ALL PLAY WELL

Led by "Peeney" Mills Nationals Clout Ball Hard

Coming back after being 4 runs down to tie the game and then going out in front by a three run margin only to see it "will to a one run lead when Kingston staged a belated rally in the ninth innings to score two runs after choking the base-ratlers, Belleville nationals gave the patrons of the game the thrill of their lives when they took the fast Kingston Ponies into camp and defeated them by the score of 7 to 6 at the local Pair Grounds on Wednesday afternoon.

One of the largest crowds of the season was on hand to see the optimistic "Yammy" Jamieson subdued and then knocked out of the pitcher's box by the National swatmiths. He pounced upon the offerings of the Ponies' ace hurler and drove him to the showers in the eighth frame.

The win was one of the most spectacular ever seen on a local ball field and places the Nationals within striking distance of the leading Ponies. Tommy Pointer was Manager Gerrie's choice for hurling duty and with the exception of the final frame, when he did his share to fill the base, he donated left-handed delivery showed the Pony sluggers down like chaff before the wind, having ten strikeouts to their credit. Yammy elected his ace, "Yammy" Jamieson to hurl for the Ponies and he made in mind of ending the series with three straight wins. Jamieson was no pumsie to the local batters when they opposed him and forded itself, as they clouted his offerings high up and far away when his mates' rallies. Needless hurling an excellent game Tommy Pointer's single in the ninth frame was the hit that put the locals in a tie. To Peeney Mills, Belleville's star swan receiver, goes the lion's share of the victory, he caught one of the smaller games of the year carved and added to his laurels by collecting five hits out of four official times at bat. The fifth time he faced the opposing pitcher he was purposely passed.

A Fairly Start

After a rather faulty start the Nationals straightened away and looked head and shoulders above their Kingston rivals, who once they were into their stride showed as only a front running ball team does when they meet tough opposition. All of the youthful Nats are to be congratulated on the fine type game which they played in the face of defeat when the Ponies garnered four runs to tie the count in the fourth inning. Each and every National player rose to the occasion when the situation demanded, with the ultimate result that they literally trod on their rivals and then rubbed it in by playing with them in the final frame. "Yimmy" McQuade was the only threat on the entire local team that failed to get collected three hits for his club, one which made the Pocket Pistol in hitting rally.

The youthful Nationals all collected at least one hit each, except Hartrage, when Peeney Mills led the parade with three. Weir, Cooke, Chambers and Pointer each had two while, Scarlett, Morris and Cress-ey had one apiece. The Nationals also out-errored their fellow five to one with the result that some of the locals misplays scored runs to their Kingston rivals.

First 3 Frames Scoreless

For the first three frames the teams went scoreless, but in the fourth frame the Ponies opened up when McQuade, the first batter, doubled, Stone was safe when Cressey dropped Cooke's throw and McQuade crossed the plate. Pointer singled and both he and Stone scored on Jamieson's two base drive. Jamieson then scampered home when Hartrage threw Quinn out at first instead of cutting off the run at the plate. That made the count 4-0 for the Ponies. In the fifth Chambers singled and reached home on Alex Weir's long double to left centre. In the sixth Belleville added three more, much to the delight of the paid customers, who demonstrated this in no uncertain manner. Peeney Mills opened the inning with a hard drive to right field that went for a double. It was clever base running on Mills' part, Morris singled and stole second, Mills going to third on the play, scoring on Cressey's infield out. Cooke was hit by a pitched ball and Chambers hit filling the bases. Tommy Pointer then strutted to bat and cracked the second pitched ball high up and far away for a single that scored Mills and Cooke. Alex Weir then got hold of one but Scrutton raced miles to run down at a sure double when he caught the ball for the third out. Belleville added another in the seventh when Mills singled, as did Cressey and Cooke singled scoring the catcher. In the eighth Pointer was safe when Catcher Armiel muffed the third strike. Alex Weir then slashed a triple to deep centre field scoring Pointer and scoring when Mills got his third hit of the day, a double. The Ponies threatened in the ninth when Armiel, the first batter got a walk. Elliott singled as did McQuade. Armiel scoring. Stone was hit filling the bases and Compeau hit to Chambers who forced Elliott at the plate, one out. Jerry Armiel then scored on a who threw home forcing McQuade. Pointer then struck out, retiring the side and Stone crossed the plate. Pointer was relieved by Hartrage, the great Jamieson the previous inning ended the agony by rolling to Cressey. Final score, Belleville 7; Kingston 6.

At a meeting after the game the Nationals agreed to replay the 4 to 4 game in Kingston tonight and providing they win the fifth game will be played in Belleville next evening's tilt. Alex Weir will no doubt start on the hillock for the locals while goodness knows who will assume the mound duties of the ailing Ponies.

NOT OUT YET

Kingston Ponies Still Have Chance to Win Pennant

Although they dropped a double header to the Belleville Nationals by the scores of 7 to 6 and 5 to 4 in the local Pair Grounds on Wednesday afternoon, the Kingston Ponies still have a chance to win the Intermediate "A" pennant. The Ponies are now in second place, one game behind the Nationals, and if they can win the fifth game of the series, which will be played in Belleville on Thursday evening, they will be tied with the locals for first place. The fifth game will be played in Belleville on Thursday evening, and if Belleville wins they will lose to see where the fifth game is to be played, on Friday. Manager Gerow announced at the meeting that he would start Alex Weir in the hilltop this evening while the Ponies will depend on either Howitt Smith in the first game or Jamieson and Fournier are out of the question. Babe Sheppard and Joe Gowin of Toronto have been secured by Frederal K. F. Calling, at the officials of the day.

Congratulations are due the Victorias, Belleville's entry in the sate O.B.A.A. entry. They won the junior provincial play-down series from Delcon, winners of the front Valley League, in two straight games. The first game was played last Saturday in Belleville when the Vics won 13 to 7. At Delcon yesterday the Vics behind the combined pitching of Ralph Grey and Ed. Hutton, won the second game of the series by the score of 8 to 5 and thus annexed the Belleville Intermediate winner of the present Gibbard Athletic Commission series is decided. This game is scheduled for Friday or Saturday and will be played in Kingston. It should be quite a thriller affair. It teams two ace hurlers, Dovey for Gannaway and Fraser for the Athletics, book-ing.

What a surprised crowd went seen in Kingston following the defeat of the Kingston Frontenacs' girls' team at the hands of the Belleville Pruit Queens on Tuesday night. The local girls were all set and the third and deciding game will be played in Belleville on Friday night. But here's the sticker—we hear that the local winners, of the girls' loop, are considering taking the game to the Pair rounds. The move does not sound at all fair to the constant followers of girls' softball in Belleville. On the other hand, however, we cannot blame the management of the Belleville Fruit club for their hope as the collections at the Pair Grounds leave of late do not warrant playing there any more as they lose money each night that they operate.

For the following paragraph we are indebted to the sports editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard:—"And right here, with the C.O.B.I. practically finished for 1932, we must say that they don't make many players any better than one name "Peeney" Mills. Year after year Mills has been the backbone of the Belleville team, a born fighter, a player with unbounded stamina and the man who has held the locals together. Jerry Gerow might have been a great batter but it was Mills who made him so. "Peeney" is a hard loser, for he always goes to win and while there are many who call him a poor loser they do so because they don't know him. Today, after many years of campaigning Mills has the undoubted distinction of having led the league in driving in runs."

"It looks as though the reign of the spectacular "Tommy" Jamieson has ended Kingston's cocky little pitching wrecker, who has had the "Indian" sign on the Nationals for the past two seasons is at "Done" as far as the Nationals are concerned. In the last start against the Nats in Kingston the Ponies were lucky to get out with a 4 all tie, and yesterday when the Nationals turned on his deliveries they found the big right up and far away, he was derricked in favor of Charlie Fournier and the reign of Jamieson was over.

The Kingston press shouted long and loud in favour of neutral umpires and the result last day or two time this rule was observed the locals read of the Nats and the youthful Nationals. When Umpire Perry made Jamieson put on clean shirt of his uniform and also toe the rubber, the Ponies did not look hot." The great Mickey Compeau is slowly coming into his own this year. He has come on by slightest trace of what looked like a last pathetic. In the verbal argument between "Peeney" Mills and Bella Prull Queens on Tuesday night. COBOURG ALL-STARS TAKE CIACO BY 15-6

Completely outplaying their rivals Cobourg All-stars stepped into town and gave the CIACO girls' softball team, one of the finest lessons in how to play softball, that was even seen on a local lot this year, when they defeated Corby-ville lassies 15 to 6 in their own park on Wednesday evening.

F. Slater was on the hilltop for the visiting Cobourg team and she was right at home, allowing but a hand as a matter of fact, when the occasion arose, she turned the Ciaco nine back with ease. Seven hits were pounded for the losers and her self-control was also a feature of the day.

The visiting Cobourg nine presented a well balanced team of girl softballers and will they proved their victory as they out-played the Ciaco rivals both offensively and defensively.

The line-ups—Cobourg —Austin, Slater, Mitchell, Blaster, Hogan, Turpin Orena, Hoskins and Pellow. Belleville—Donohue, Morgan, Howie, Thompson, Day, McNiel, Canning and Brey.

VICTORIAS NOW IN 2ND ROUND

Defeat Deloro 8-7 in Straight Games to Advance

Continuing their winning streak the Belleville Victorias advanced into the semi-finals of the O.B.A.A. intermediate O.R.A.A. play-downs when they defeated the Deloro "Miners" by the score of 8 to 7 at Deloro on Wednesday afternoon.

This is the first time in many years, that a Belleville intermediate baseball team has advanced thus far in the provincial intermediate series. Manager "Mickey" Gerow elected Ralph Dey, singular to start on the hillock for the locals, and although he was wild at times, he managed to weather the storm of the day, when he handed all chances perfectly and pitched a good game throughout.

The Vics collected a run in the second, three in the fourth, one in the fifth, two in the sixth and wound up the day with another county in the ninth. The Smeltermen helped themselves to three runs in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the seventh. The homesters pressed in the ninth but were subdued by Dey and Hutton.

In Second Round.

The Vics now advance into the second round of the O.B.A.A. playdowns and will await the ultimate winner of the Napanee-Gananoque series.

The line-ups:

Belleville — Kerr ss; Ross cf; Flagler 2b; Palmer rf; Blaker 1b; Darrah 3rd; Latchford lf; Dey p; or Day; Hutton c.

Deloro — M. Callery, Regan, Brown, Hennessy, P. Callery, Morrison Stewart, V. Callery and McCrodan.

Score by innings:

Belleville .... 01001300—7	10	2
Deloro .... 00030100—7	10	2

Summaries—Kerr and Leal of Deloro.

BOB SHRODER AGAIN WINNER

Bide-a-Wee Bay Swim Attracts Number of Contestants

For the second year in succession Robert Shroder splashed his way to victory in the annual Bide-A-Wee scrub-to-be held on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Harry Ketcheson, genial proprietor of the Bide-A-Wee camp owns four miles west of Belleville on highway No. 2, annually stages this sporting event which is enjoyed by all the lovers of aquatic sporting events. The course which the swimmers were asked to cover this year was a little different from that of previous years as it was not of the across-the-bay nature, but was out and down the bay parallel with the shore, some twenty feet out from the shore line. The course was about one and one half miles in length and considering the warmth of the water and the heat of the day the swimmers made rather good time.

Seven starters faced the barrier when Mr. Ketcheson gave the word "go." The ultimate winner, Bob Shroder, immediately went into the lead and was closely followed by a number of the swimmers. Shroder set a terrific pace with the result that before the course had been half covered by the swimmers some had dropped out. Turning into the last lap saw but four swimmers left in the race and Shroder being pressed hard by B. Miles, also of Belleville. The finish was quite thrilling as Shroder had barely beat his local rival to the finishing line by the barest margin of time, exactly five seconds.

By virtue of winning the fine large silver trophy given by Mr. Ketcheson for the event Shroder will permanently own the cup.

9 IDLE MARRIED MEN PICK OUT FARMS

Toronto, Aug. 25—Tonight nine unemployed married men from New Toronto hr-r" for Northern Ontario to carve out a home in the bush under the Provincial Government's back-to-the-land scheme. Unable to secure employment, the men are seeking a "break," gambling on the chance of winning a living from the north country. They will pick out homesteads in Hearst township, 10 miles from New Liskeard.

Piles Go Quick

No Salve—No Cutting

Thousands who have itching, bleeding or protruding piles have not yet learned that quick and lasting relief can only be accomplished with an internal medicine. Neither salves nor suppositories remove the cause.

Bad circulation of blood in the lower rectum causes piles. The hemorrhoidal veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts almost lack tone. Pile-Ne-Do is an internal medicine must be used to stimulate the circulation, drive out the thick impure blood, heal and restore the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, after years of study, found a real internal Pile remedy. He called his discovery HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1000 patients with success in over 900 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer, no matter how stubborn their case, might by his prescription with a money back guarantee.

HEM-ROID tablets have such a wonderful record of success in this city that Hall & McKown and all good druggists invite you try HEM-ROID and guarantee money refunded if it does not end your Pile misery.

RELIEF BOARDS FOR MUNICIPALITIES FAVORED

Ravior Leading 100 Yards at End of Second Lap in C. N. E. Marathon

CONFERENCE IS CROWN OF YEAR'S LABOR

Statement Issued on Arrival Home of British Statesmen

MACDONALD'S RACE

Boats Train Half Minute on Arrival by Air From Scotland

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Canadian Press)—On arrival at Waterloo Station barely one minute before the train steamed in, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Sir John Simon today greeted returning delegates to the Imperial conference after an air journey from Inside, Dovith.

Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin and Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, first to descend from the train, shook hands warmly with Mr. MacDonald and Sir John Simon.

Agiong members of the Government present on the platform were Sir Samuel Hoare the Secretary for India, Lord Hailsham, Sir Henry Betson Sir Boyd Merriman and Ernest Brown.

The Prime Minister shook hands with each returning delegate after which Sir John Simon and his colleagues added their greetings. The party then moved on to be welcomed by by groups of personal friends.

Crowds Cheer

Mrs. Baldwin carrying a bouquet of red and white carnations, was greeted by a large number of her friends.

As delegates reached the end of the platform Waterloo Station resounded to the cheers of welcoming crowds while hundreds of cameras clicked. Mr. Baldwin and Mr. MacDonald posed for special photographs, each smiling broadly.

Southampton, Eng., Aug. 26 (CP) —"We proceed in the fullest confidence that a good commercial result will form a fitting conclusion and will be a solid and substantial aid for a year of solid and substantial advance" declares an official statement issued by the United Kingdom delegates to the Imperial Economic conference on their arrival here today.

Speaking to the mayor and councillors of the city on board the Mauretania of Britain before he disembarked, Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin said he hoped and believed the Imperial Conference had done its useful bit of work. The conference was successful from every viewpoint, declared Hon. J. H. Thomas.

Mr. Thomas frankly admitted that under the guise of card parties he had engaged in conversations with the delegation of the Irish Free State almost every day. He was sure much information had done good. He had not deviated from his attitude toward the unfortunate dispute but he had taken care not to close the door to any avenue of economic peace between the Free State and the United Kingdom.

Flags Dipped

Flags dipped in salute and hundreds of sirens boomed out the welcome as the Empress of Britain steamed up Southampton water to dock shortly before noon. Cabinet ministers, led by Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord Sankey, and civic officials headed by the Mayor of Southampton, were on hand to greet and extended a welcome to the party returning from Ottawa.

In the meantime Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and his foreign secretary, Sir John Simon, were racing by motor car from London northward toward London, hoping to reach Edward Drive in time to greet the delegation at Waterloo Station. The Secretary of State for Air was also winging his way southward from his home in Northern Ireland.

Arrangements made at Ottawa for a degree of success far beyond anything ever expected here by the delegates left England, says the statement released today by Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin.

Confident Trade Increased

"We are confident the arrangements made will lead to increased trade between the several parts of the Empire and increased prosperity which cannot fail to react to confidence far beyond the borders of the Empire itself. No previous Imperial conference," says the statement, "achieved such a degree of success as will out upon record for the future."

The statement points out the international significance of the conference and its influence on future conference. "It is obvious that it we had failed to show as Ottawa that the British Commonwealth is able to progress towards the solution of its own economic problems, our ability and influence at the World Economic Conference would be weakened if not destroyed.

No Cash to be Paid in Direct Relief Public Welfare Board Recommended In Administration of Direct Relief

Unemployed to be Encouraged to Seek Work. No Deductions to be Made in Allowances Until Earnings Exceed Food Cost

$1.50 PER WEEK FIRST ADULT

Provision to Allow Food Not on Standard List Not to Exceed Ten Per Cent of Total Food Order

Toronto Ont., Aug. 26—Organization of a public welfare board for each municipality to administer direct relief is recommended in the report of the advisory committee on direct relief to the Ontario Government, and announced today by Hon. Mr. J. D. Monteith, Minister of Public Works and Labor. Where possible, it is also suggested that an association or league of organization interested in public welfare should be organized to act in an advisory capacity and to arrange for the conduct of campaigns in connection with the raising of funds, etc.

Care should be paid to recipients of direct relief, it is suggested, that in the case of families with children who are unable to share in expenditures, which are to remain on the former basis of one-third from each of the Federal, Provincial Governments and the Municipalities. The Board is to consist of three members appointed by the Provincial Government, which will have control over local activities. Municipalities which find they are unable to undertake one as have their cases reviewed by the Ontario

Municipal Board to set the variation of distribution of cost.

Food, Clothing, Shelter.

The report also deals with the requirements of families and single persons in connection with food, clothing, fuelier including light and water, fuel and medical attention. It is suggested that the allowance for shelter be not more than one and one-half times the taxes on the home with a maximum allowance of $10.00 per month. That detailed information be provided for Municipalities in connection with the purchase of clothing, food, etc., that medical service be provided at not more than one-half of the standard rates. In order to encourage the unemployed to seek work, it is suggested that no deductions be made in the relief allowance until the earnings exceed the cost of food relief which should be 50 per cent of the total.

In forwarding the reports to the Municipalities Hon. Dr. Monteith points out that the government

FIRE THREAT AT ROCKLAND

Early Loss is Set at Ten Thousand Dollars

Rockland, Ont., Aug. 26— (By The Canadian Press)—Fanned by a high wind, fire this afternoon has threatening destruction of the west-end of Rockland. Already damage is estimated at $10,000.

Starting in a cedar bough arch, built as a decoration for Imperial Conference, delegates, the flames spread to the old Pine Grove Cheese building and to the old dwelling of James Duncan. It is also feared that the Separate School is startle started a fire in the arch.

The Pine Grove Cheese Factory building, which had never been used for the purpose for which it was built, was occupied as a residence by Mr. and Mrs. Victor Robert. It was soon a roaring mass of flames, and the fire quickly spread to the adjoining barns and horses. The high wind was carrying the sparks directly over the flood Water Supply.

Rockland, situated in 22 miles east of Ottawa, on the banks of the Ottawa River, has a good water system, and a population of about 2,000 inhabitants.

SLAP FOR SLAP ENDS CASE IN POLICE COURT

NEW YORK) Aug. 26.— A slap-for-slap drama enlived Broadway's police court. Lola Genovese denied slapping Frank Brown, 27, in the face. "I'll prove, show me how he did it," said Magistrate Overton. Frank implanted a healthy smack on Genovese's face.

"Now," said the Magistrate, "I guess you're even Frank, and I'll suspend sentence."

Fire Breaks Out While Threshers Work in Barn of John Cronk

On Wednesday at six-thirty in the evening when the threshers were at work in the barn of John Cronk's farm Halloway, fire broke out in some unaccountable way. The barn and contents of hay and grain were completely destroyed. Neighbours from Foxboro, Plainfield and the surrounding countryside came to aid of Mr. Cronk and succeeded in saving the other farm buildings. For a time the property of Harold Beatty and Herbert Casey was threatened but the fire was soon under control.

The threshing machine belonging to Wesley Wannamaker was removed undamaged from the fire and all the livestock in the barn was rescued.

BABY INJURED WHEN HURLED FROM BUGGY

WOODSTOCK Ont., Aug. 26— Billy Harper, two, was in the hospital here today critically injured when he was thrown from a buggy harnessed to a runaway horse. Ethelwyn Dawson, six, aunt, suffered severe cuts and bruises. The horse bolted as Mrs. Harper was stitching.

DEATH WAVES BEAT EARTH'S ATMOSPHERE

But Atmospheric Balance Prevents Reception

DEATH SPECTRUM

Slight Upset in Balance of Atmosphere Fatal to Earth Life

Washington, Aug. 26.— A "death spectrum" has been produced at the Smithsonian Institution in experiments on the effects of various light wave lengths on living organisms.

Scientists of the division of radiation and organisms said they found considerable interest in the results of laboratory investigations announced today. Because of information gleaned above the distribution of the death-dealing wave lengths in the sun's light spectrum.

Dr. Florence E. Meier, Smithsonian biologist, covered glass plates with ultraviolet rays from a quartz Green microscopic one-celled plants. She exposed these plates, for varying periods, to different wave lengths lying just beyond the range of visible light.

Results of Experiments

Some wave lengths left the Algae unharmed. Others killed them leaving white lines across the plate marking the area of exposure. The lowance was made for the light intensity of the different wave lengths.

The experiment indicated to the [illegible] light experts what dire effects to life on earth might result from a slight upset in the upper atmosphere's present balance which screens most wave lengths get through. Since the lethal wave lengths of the sunst spectrum all lay beyond wave lengths received by living things on the earth's surface.

FIRST INTO EXHIBITION

TORONTO, Aug. 26.—By the Canadian Press— A 24-hour visit, undaunted by the heat and threatened showers and the imagined terrors of the air, rewarded 11-year-old, Burnett Heard today, when he was the combined effort to be first into the Canadian National Exhibition Grounds early today.

Late Wire Messages

Kitchener, Ont.—Albert N. Nett, optometrist, 70, was dead here today after prophesying his own death a few hours before he was stricken by angina pectoris. Yesterday he said he thought he was going to die before the day was over. He suffered a seizure within two hours but was revived. A second seizure during the night killed him.

FARMERS IN FULL CONTROL OF TRAFFIC

55 of Their Number in Jail Freed by Sheriff

BLOCK ROADS

Situation Has Taken on a Serious Aspect in Illinois

Council Bluffs, Ia, Aug. 26 — Striking farmers consolidated their positions today in their renewed attempt to boost up Council Bluffs, gateway to the Important Omaha, Neb., market, encouraged by a victory in gaining freedom under bond of 55 of their highway pickets.

Reinforced by comrades from Northwestern Iowa, 3,000 of them, it was estimated by officials, were massed in blockades along the principal highways, according to Council Bluffs, apparently in full control of traffic.

Capitulating to the demands of about 1,000 of the striking agricultural tourists, who threatened ot storm the jail and release the 55 prisoners if they were not freed, Sheriff P. A. Lainson withdrew his deputies and made no attempt during the night to keep the highways open.

For a time the situation took on a serious aspect. About 300 deputies augmented by 200 special, all which bristled with sub-machine guns and sawed-off shotguns, while the invading farmers from the northwest poured into the city and gathered around the bastile.

A conference between county officials and leaders of the farmers, who seek to keep produce from the markets until prices are higher was arranged and an agreement reached whereby 43 of the prisoners, arrested on charges of unlawful assemblage, were released in bonds of $500 each. The other 12 have been sentenced to 30 days in jail but were liberated on appeal bonds.

Although it was conceded that the freeing of the pickets by Sheriff Lainson had eased the situation temporarily, the activity of the farmers in re-establishing their blockade indicated their determination to prevent movement of farm produce.

Lamp said that if necessary, 5,000 pickets could be placed on the highways.

SIGNIFICANT STATEMENT BY MUSSOLINI

PERUGIA, Italy, Aug. 26.— Inaugurating an aqueduct and hydro-electric plant here today Premier Benito Mussolini described the significance of the ceremony thus:

"Water and welfare for the people who work, and the Nation for the enemies of the regime."

The crowd cheered enthusiastically.

FARMERS' Fair Must Succeed and Now Crowds are the Chief Factor Officers Urge Attendance

When Mayor George O. Tice raises the flag-at the Belleville Agricultural Society's annual fall exhibition on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 30th., he will set in motion the four day-fair under the most auspicious circumstances. By the time of opening it is confidently expected that thousands of citizens of the district and of Belleville will have already entered the spacious and beautiful grounds of Exhibition Park. The fair will be in full swing at that time and from then until Friday evening there will be a continual round of sightseeing, program and entertainment.

Mayor Tice this year will have the honor of ushering in the exhibition with which comes at the appropriate time of the turn for the better, which has given every sign of its arrival-from 'around the corner.' The general improvement and the indefatigable work of the president of the society, Warden Robert M. Mitchell of Thurlow create the highest hopes for the most successful event in agricultural history.

The ceremonial of opening will be brief. The chief magistrate is too experienced in worldly knowledge and versed in human psychology to speak at any great length for he knows that everything and everybody is just waiting to leap into activity as soon as he says the word. But he will point to the place the fairs hold in history and to its place in the economy of the civic and national life.

Best of all he will be able to tell the people that the livestock exhibits are alert, that the entries in all classes excel those of any other year and that the fair is built upon solid foundations of worth and experience.

Co-operation with those who have worked for this year's success is urged upon all residents of this region, city and .country dwellers alike, so that the fair may achieve not only financial but agricultural, mercantile, and industrial success.

The presidents of the Fair Board and the Parks Board urge the attendance of the people. The fair must succeed and attendance is the chief element in success.

Champion of Two Swims Leads Women's Classic

Evelyn Armstrong in Second Position With Good Lead on Third

RILEY THIRD

Waterfront, Toronto, Aug. 26 (CP) —Eating up the miles with long, steady regularity, Margaret Ravior, sturdy Philadelphian, rounded the first lap of the second lap of the Canadian National Exhibition's 40-mile women's marathon swim today fully 100 yards in front of Evelyn Armstrong, Detroit.

Miss Ravior had taken the lead at the start and held fair to retain it. She it was, she had won in 1930 and 1931, Miss Armstrong was another 100 yards in front with Riley third.

Both the leading swimmers were making steady progress and swimming in perfect style. Close behind was Leah Riley, Keansburg, N.J., was in third place, barely in front of Ethel Looney, Toledo, Ohio, and Ruth Tower Corson, Toronto, was following closely behind.

So far, not a single swimmer had left the course. Two have called some were tiring from the terrific strokes. But these swimmers were far behind at the first turn.

The weather, however, for the swim were Miss Edele, Marjorie Royer, Daytyer Ky.; Matilda Yonkers, Terri Haule, Ind.; Doris Beresford, Toronto; Helen Miller, Toronto; Maj. Holden, Springfield, Mass.; and Miss W. S. Reminger, Forest; Miss Hill.

Water Warm

The warm water favored the speedier of the swimmers, while the stronger, slower swimmers dropping back early. Miss Ravior's time for the event last year was 4.56.44.

Buddy Cowan-nda, brother of the 17 year old Lisa Indian entry from Sturgeon Falls was following the cister in a canoe. This was the only man on the course permitted waiving their rule because Philip entered to could paddle a canoe better than he could row a boat. There was little ceremony to the start. Unlike usual swims, most of the entries stayed right into the end of the first lap. None of them were taken out immediately.

Buying Hits N.Y. Market Late Friday

New York, Aug. 26—A new wave of buying swept over the stock market in late trading today, giving an almost a recovery from a morning sag.

During the earlier hours of the session, prominent issues had lost $1 to $4 a share. The buying movement not only cancelled these losses but swept many of the leaders from $1 to $3 a share above yesterday's final prices. The last hour was the best of the entire day.

Commodities also inforved. Cotton, after an early sag, recovered to levels somewhat above those of yesterday's prices. Wheat sold off about a cent a bushel at one time, but closed with loss of only 1-4 to 3-8 of a cent at Chicago.

SHARING JOB HOOVER'S WAY TO PROGRESS

Plan to Put Men And Money to Work Revealed

SPREAD OF CREDIT

Shortening of Hours May be Necessary to Meet Invention

Washington, Aug. 26—President Hoover today recommended to a National gathering of outstanding business men plans for sharing jobs now available so as to decrease unemployment, as the step which would do most at this time for lessening the load.

Standing before more than 200 members of the business and industrial committees created in each industry by his order and summoned to the national capital by him, the President listed his suggestions, and invited suggestions for "a better distribution of credit."

The chief executive set as the aim of the National Conference a coordination of governmental and private activities, so as to enable a directed attack against depression and securing along the entire economic front. Out of executive meetings have come business leaders and administration chieftains here yesterday, there emerged a proposal for today's conference looking toward creation of a central contact group to coordinate private and governmental activities.

Ferocious Suggestion

In a speech delivered at the session opening by the President Franklin W. Fry chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, announced the National Bank reserves had been instructed to suspend foreclosure proceedings for 60 days.

In his plea for spreading available jobs, the President, who presided over the meeting, said:

"As a matter of national policy, the shortening of the hours of industry not alone to seed of the moment, but it may be necessary to take up the slack in the future from the vast and sudden advance in labor and machine.

"Credit is available", he said, "but in two sections it is flowing in directions which would stimulate construction and employment. It needs resolution to use our banking and governmental machinery and coordination to make them effective."

Seven Program

A six-point programme of business, industrial and agricultural endeavors was outlined by Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury, as follows:

"1. The problem of making industry more efficiently and usefully to business;

"2. To increase employment by the railroads and stimulation of industry through increased maintenance of equipment and purchase of new equipment in cooperation with the International Commerce Commission and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"3. Increased employment through sharing work movement;

"4. The stimulation of the repair and improvement of home movement;

"5. Assistance to home owners with maturing mortgages;

"6. Co-operation of all ranking and industrial committees with the governments boards.

River Pollution Causes Death Of Hundreds of Fish at London

London, Ont., Aug. 25—(By The Canadian Press)—Hundreds of dead fish today floated on the surface of the Thames River here, killed, fisheries officers said, by pollution of the stream occurring within the city limits.

Dead fish began to appear yesterday and increased rapidly in number during the night until today many hundreds were seen on top of the water along the shore of the river.

City and District News

GASOLINE TAKEN FROM CAR TANKS

Stealing gasoline from parked motor cars seems to be growing more prevalent about town of late. The local police received a call down to the foot of the Belle Theatre about 8.30 p.m. Thursday evening, where Mr. Leon Turner, 65 Glenn St., reported that his gasoline tank had been drained. When the police arrived Mr. Turner explained to them, that he had parked his car about two hours previously and the gas tank was about one half filled. Upon returning to the car the tank was empty, he said. The police are investigating a number of these cases, which have been reported lately.

SHOWER HELD FOR BRIDE TO BE

On Tuesday evening, about thirty members of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church held a delightful miscellaneous shower for Miss Ethel Harley, popular bride-to-be. It was held at the home of Mrs. E. A. Hogle, St. Catherine Street.

When Miss Harley entered the room, she was met by a under a huge bell, from which streamers stretched to the floor. At the end of each streamer was a present wrapped in white paper and white ribbon.

Miss Harley was taken completely by surprise and after opening the gifts, thanked her friends for their best wishes.

A jolly sing-song was enjoyed by all, after which refreshments were served.

HALF FEE AFTER SEPTEMBER FIRST

George H. Ketcheson, in charge of motor license sales stated today that he has received a circular from the Department of Highways containing the information that half fees for passenger cars, commercial trucks, two purpose cars, motor cycles and trailers would prevail on September 1st. This is a policy that has been followed by the Department for some years. Mr. Ketcheson also stated that the average fee for passenger cars out of the Belleville office was $9.21 and it was anticipated that the average fee for this office by the Department would be somewhat reduced.

BOWLING CLUB HONORS MEMBERS

A presentation of a silver tea service on the eve of their departure to Belleville where Mr. Davidson has accepted a position on the banking staff of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, was made by members of the Cobourg Lawn Bowling Club to Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Davidson at the clubhouse in Cobourg on Thursday evening. Both Mr. and Mrs. Davidson are ardent bowlers and were undoubtedly members of the Cobourg Club, where Mr. Davidson for many years has resigned his position as principal of the Cobourg Collegiate to accept the Belleville office.

GOOD PROGRESS ON TWEED ROAD

Good progress has been reported made by workers on the Tweed highway who have been contending their past month's activities on the section of road, near O'Brien's Bridge, and at the location of Thrasher's Corners, where road widening and deep cuts through some of the hills are being made. Men, teams with scrapers, dinky type locomotive engines hauling long trains of dirt dumping cars and other mechanical equipment all busy give the place an air of activity. Only a few short detours have so far been made on the road while the traffic so pass unhindered.

PART OF ROAD NOW COMPLETED

Steady work by the contractors north of Foxboro for the past few weeks has resulted in a considerable stretch of the Madoc-Foxboro highway being completed north and east of that village. The detour which had been set up at the junction of the Stirling road and Frederick Street, delouring all traffic to the Stirling road for some distance, has been taken down and traffic is now permitted to pass over the completed new stretch of road for some distance.

FIRE BREAKS OUT IN TOOL SHED

A mysterious blaze which broke out at 11 o'clock Thursday evening in an unused tool shack belonging to the Godson Construction Company of Toronto, near the asphalt plant just south of the city limits camp, gutted the interior of the small building, destroyed a quantity of bedding, ropes and other equipment and charred the woodwork of the shed considerably before it was extinguished by firemen. The shack which was of a portable nature, was practically torn down before the fire was extinguished.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell Was Conference Chairman in 1894

Ideals For Which Belleville Man Stood Are Gathering Fruit

HIS VISION

In these days when the subject of conservation on the lips of everybody, is the recent Imperial Conference, it is profoundly interesting to know that this widely discussed gathering or its forerunner the Colonial Conference met in the city of Ottawa in 1894 when a Belleville, the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell was elected chairman of what was then known as the "Colonial Conference." The first Colonial Conference was held in London in 1887.

In connection of the family of Sir Mackenzie Bowell is a large picture with portraits of the several delegates from the Colonies and Great Britain, surrounding a fine likeness of Sir Mackenzie, who at the time was Prime Minister of the Dominion.

It is interesting to note that from a historic point of view the principal incident of the gathering was an appeal to Great Britain to revoke her fiscal policies and join in a confederation to be formed to achieve tariff preferences within the empire. This was urged by the chairman, and the new doctrine was asserted in the following resolution unanimously adopted by the gathering: "That this Conference records its belief in the advisability of a customs arrangement between Great Britain and her Colonies by which trade within the Empire may be placed upon a more favourable footing than that which is carried on with foreign countries."

With this policy Canadian Liberal leaders were in accord as they were to prove on the occasion of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee in 1897 when the Government of Canada at the instance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Finance Minister, Hon. W. S. Fielding, established the system of preferences in British goods. Events moved slowly, and it was not until 1903 that a Colonial Conference was held in London, convened by the late Joseph Chamberlain. On this occasion the same doctrine was again embodied in a resolution. Then in 1907 the Imperial Conference re-affirmed the principles when Mr. Asquith, then Prime Minister of Great Britain, said His Majesty's Government was being asked to consider "Whether we shall treat the foreigners and the colonists as if were differently, and that we conceive we are not able to do." This attitude persisted until 1911 when Britain at last accepted the doctrine of the 1902 resolution. Since 1911 Imperial Conference have been held periodically, but none have been called to consider trade relations specifically until this year, and the National Conference at Great Britain refused to even start conversations with the countries until after the Ottawa Conference.

Belleville citizens should feel proud of this statesmanship and memory of a former townsman who spent so many years in the public service of this country.

L.O.B.A. HOLD FINE PICNIC

Journey to 12 O'clock Point For Annual Outing

The L.O.B.A. picnic at 12 o'Clock Point, Wednesday, August 24th was well attended. The Rawson boat line furnished transportation along with private car. It being an ideal day a goodly crowd was in attendance. After the children's frolic in the water, the programme of races made their afternoon most enjoyable. The result of the afternoon's sports follows:

Girls, 5 to 7 years—Betty Hoist; Patsy Cory; Isobel Armitage.

Boys, 5 to 8—Robert Armitage; Walter Turner.

Girls, 8 to 12—Emily McKenna; Margaret Worrell; Muriel Turner.

Boys, 9 to 11—Douglas Post, Jas. Cathcart; Bob Armitage.

Boys Race—Helen Thompson.

Basin Race—Mildred Armitage; Francis Thompson.

Coal Scuttle, Madge Chapman; Man, Doug. Post.

Obstacle Race—Jas. Turner.

Officers Slow Race—Mrs. Frank Cochrane.

Bean Guessing Contest was won by Mrs. O. Holst.

After another frolic in the water all sat down to the good things provided by the ladies. During the afternoon's festivities the children, as well as adults, were treated to an ice cream cone. At 8 o'clock the boys returned to take the tired but happy picnickers back to their various homes.

SISTER SEEKS TWO BROTHERS

Last Met Them Fifty Years Ago. Once Lived Here

Mrs. Frank Ransford of Flint, Michigan, is endeavouring to locate her missing brothers. Belleville is the place where she saw them.

Her story is that about half a century ago her brothers, William and Kelly and herself were placed as different homes and that their names were Cole. Her first name is Beatrice. According to the chief of police at Flint, Michigan, they once lived in Belleville.

It is thought that some of the older residents of Belleville might remember them and that some of the family are residing hereabouts.

Chief Alex Reid of Belleville, has tried to locate relatives here without success so far and efforts are being made to find if they live in Prince Edward County.

Anyone having information should get in touch with Chief Kidd at once; and he will forward the information to the police at Flint.

Rat Hunt Over City Hall Floor
A rat ambled across the main floor of the city hall this morning. It wasn't a very large rat, but it created more excitement than has occurred in the building since the last civic election.
Doors flew open. Heads stuck out. The tramp of feet mingled with the shouts of advice on best ways to catch rats, which was freely given. Every one deserted their posts to go on a real rat hunt.
Back and forth across the hall raced the rat and the contingent of rat-chasers. At times it was hard to say whether the rat was chasing the men, or the men chasing the rat. When the rat made sudden dives in different directions those in its path gave it a wide berth. When it retreated into a corner the hunters attacked en masse.
Around the hall, back of the stage and sometimes into the corridors, continued the hunt. Several times only by luck and fractions of an inch, the rat missed sudden death. Finally it was winged by one of a number of men who had been carrying back into the hall chairs which had been loaned to Memorial Hall last evening. He had ambushed the hired creature at the end of a row of seats. Other men helped in the final slaughter. The fight was over and official business once more continued.

GEN. SAN JURJO STARTS TERM

Communists Protest Against Leniency Shown

Madrid, Aug. 26—The ranking General of Spain, Jose San Jurjo, was imprisoned en route by automobile today to El Dueso penitentiary in Santander, province to serve out a life sentence for rebellion against the republic.

Although authorities declined to comment, it was understood a secret transfer from Madrid had been suddenly ordered in the hope of averting further disorder.

Nevertheless manifestations and disorders had already occurred in various parts of the nation, and there were reports a cabinet reshuffle might not be beyond the range of possibilities.

The disturbances were provoked by the Supreme Court's sentence of death against the general Wednesday, and later commuted by the government.

Protest Against Leniency

Communists at Bilbao and nearby Galleata protested against the government's leniency. In an ensuing clash with civil guards one Communist was killed and several injured.

Madrid was greatly excited and many groups of agitators were dispersed by police especially near the prison where the general and fellow officers were confined to await the government's decision.

General San Jurjo and two companions were found guilty of leading the rebellion of Seville early this month, which cost 300 lives and injured, and caused much bloodshed. The life-long sentence of the arch-General Herrana, was sentenced to 30 years, and Colonel Lledo, to twenty. Maglio received 12 years. The general's son, Justo San Jurjo, was freed.

The government's commutation of the General's death sentence to life imprisonment.

Surrounded by friends, General San Jurjo showed his soldier spirit philosophically, but declared he was grieved by decision. A farewell fasting squad composed of the boys he used to command.

FOUR CANINES TO ENTER HALL OF FAME

TORONTO, Aug. 26.—Four dogs, whose heroic achievements have earned them the right to enter the canine hall of fame, will receive engraved collars and the humane society medal for bravery at the Canadian National Exhibition Dog Show.

Humane society records show 30 lives were saved by dogs in Toronto alone during the past two years. Details of the exploits will be recorded and placed above the kennel of each dog which has saved a human life.

Dogs rewarded are those which left a man's side only of their own accord to bring a human life from water, fire or similar danger.

MUST UNDERGO INSPECTION

Ottawa, Aug. 26—All canned salmon imported into Canada in future must undergo an inspection similar to that now required in the case of salmon packed in British Columbia, and no fresh consignments may be released until it has been so inspected, J. Tuck, chief supervisor of salmon canning, announced.

20 YEARS OF ILL HEALTH

Then Mrs. Duke Discovered Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Of her own accord, Mrs. Duke sat down and wrote us a glowing tribute to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN:

"I have been constipated all my life, which has been about 20 years, up until last year, when I started eating your ALL-BRAN. Since I have been eating it I feel well as I am looking better, and I am sure that I feel a great deal better."—Mrs. L. W. Duke (address upon request).

Constipation is usually caused by lack of the things in the diet that "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help give them tone. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides both of these dietary necessities, as well as iron for the blood.

Within the body, the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of waste.

Now much more natural it is to enjoy this delicious cereal than to risk taking pills and drugs — so often harmful.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily — serious cases with every meal — for most types of constipation. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Sold in the red-and-green packages. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

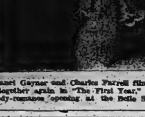
Where the River Plays With the Bays



By Wallace Havelock Robb, of Abbey Dawn

With the increasing number of American tourists entering Canada every summer this year, also many among Canadian cities, towns and villages, a keen competition for this highly lucrative trade. Quebec and Montreal, because they figured so prominently in the early history of Canada, have been veritable Meccas for money spending Americans. But touring Americans are not confined to Montreal and Quebec and come back with a keen eye and ears there all over again. They ask what else is there in Canada to see. And, for the little or no effort being made to attract them to other places for the simple reason that Canadians were not awake to their opportunities. Few towns have much about their own histories and cared less. This is all changed in the present state of change. Every town in Ontario is hastening to dig up and dust off the historical attraction for the tourist. There is nothing like a little rash competition to make townsfolk proud of their historical assets. This consciousness and thustasm for historical attraction to the tourists has not awakened Belleville, yet, as far as I can see for Kingston, as important historically as it is, does or can not make a little of anything in that neighborhood to speak of. Belleville is proud of its "Q. E. Boulevard" history, which, there all, is only a hundred years or so ago, but it seems to dig up and dust off an historical legend connecting the city with historical incidents never thought connected ages ago and with no mean authority for believing the Indians "Had The Say" discovered, during my research in Canadian history and historical Indian lore, in connection with my appointment by the Indians of their poet to do honour to the memory of Tecumseh, that Belleville had been the Champlain's first Champlain saw it, and that this site, where Belleville now is, at the mouth of the river, was a definite objective point in the early commerce of the time, and, as such, was not only noticed by Champlain in his tour down the river, but knew that it is practically certain that he landed at this point and did not stop making activities. From this we are inclined to believe that Champlain's present site of Belleville was not only marked on that first, crude Indian map made by Champlain's field regardless of whether he left it out on that page or not, but that he gave it a name, which is very probable, by the Indians, we know that the Indians gave place names to important points of which they made regular use or by which travel was guided and directed. Take the Carrying Place as an example of an English meaning applied to the original Indian name for the place. We know, also, how the Indian Champlain had of making records of everything he noticed, that he recorded the Saganaska River. It is also practically certain that he would be unable to decide how to spell the Indian sound and would turn to his Algonquin guide for the meaning of pecks, No sparings, no sickliness, no bad color. mock on Belleville's site in 1615, as far as we know. If Champlain landed to greet the place, as was his habit, he would have camped, surely. But it is a certainty that Belleville, Sagonaska, The Place Where The River Plays With the Bays, was a well known point on the map many a long day before Champlain first noted it. Unquestionably Belleville has grown out of the ashes of Indian antiquity.

In this day of publicity and keen desire to give age and dignity and historical romance to Canadian towns for the attraction of those things have to tourists, I believe, if I were the owner of a Belleville merchant or hotel man, I should want the Chamber of Commerce to make the most of this wealth of historical record in changing the site of the name Sagonaska. Instead of calling the lower bridge "The Lower Bridge," why not put the name Sagonaska Bridge on it in large bronze letters? Also a bronze plate showing the Indian pointing out the site to Champlain written in the notes could be placed on the bridge or elsewhere to complete the legend. Belleville would then have something to send out on a local postcard worthy of a tourist's attention.

HOPE FLIERS NEARING GOAL

No Word Has Been Heard Since They Hopped Off

Harbor Grace, Nfld., Aug. 26 — From the west coast came the latest word today of "Green Mountain Boy" but there was confidence the big plane bearing Clyde Lee of Oshkosh, Wis., and John Boland of Plymouth, near Cleo, Norway, is loyal.

When the fliers hopped off yesterday morning at 5.03 (Eastern Standard Time) on an ocean hop of their journey from Barre, Vt., toward the land of their forefathers, they hoped to make it in 30 hours. That would put them in Oslo shortly after 3 p.m. today.

Some slight anxiety was felt because no word reported sighting the plane, although it was presumably flying in the path of ships. Still, but it was believed possible the fliers might have decided to fly low because the altimeters they expected to meet 500 miles off Newfoundland and Nova Scotia did not arrive.

Flying at night over Ireland, Lee and Boolond would not have much chance of being sighted. Several ships reported sighting the Lee-Boland flight on the Atlantic crossing at night and have been surprised when they did not arrive.

Had Plenty of Gas

The airmen had started with a comfortable margin for safety in their 1,000 horsepower Wasp motored monoplane, which is equipped for 37 hours flying. They were also prepared to see Lee Richmond, the plane's donors were sealed to make room for extra gas tanks, which were cut through the roof as an emergency exit. In the event of such an emergency, it was planned to cut the motor away so the empty tanks could float, the fliers said.

Lee is 24 years old and has had considerable experience as a stormer. Boolkon is 30 and a former member of the Norwegian Flying Corps.

BRITISH RACE DRIVER MOBBED BY FRIENDS

Windsor, Aug. 26—Kaye Don, British speed boat master, was mobbed here last night.

But it was a friendly mob, seeking autographs or handshakes as he was leaving a hotel following a banquet tendered him.

Don was interested in his boat Miss England III, and the builders and that the Harrowwork would be ready for the Detroit race, which begins briefly to the racing craft.

Reference was made to the unofficial record of speed attained on the Detroit River, Daily. Don said that the speed was 131 kilometres and not miles as had been reported.

EMPLOYMENT DECLINES IN ALL PROVINCES

Ottawa, Aug. 26—Employment at the beginning of August showed a downward movement, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics announced yesterday. Reports from 7,628 firms employed 782,849 persons compared with 812,871 on July 1.

Employment declined in all provinces, firms in Ontario releasing the greatest number of workers. Manufacturing reported a large reduction, partly due to the usual midsummer shutdown in factories.

TWO BOYS DROWNED

PORT ERIE, Ont., Aug. 26—Two youngsters, Wesley Cudney 10, of Port Erie and Harold Fisher 12, of Buffalo lost their lives in drowning tragedies in this district yesterday.

Wading beyond his depth young Cudney was drowned in the Niagara River when the current swept him into the deep water.

At Pleasant Beach, on Lake Erie, a heavy undertow was blamed for the drowning of Harold Fisher. He disappeared while bathing.

What Do Local Girls Think Of Chance to Go Into Movies?

Some Feel Thrill at Thought of Opportunity

Kiely lights. "Plus fours. Megaphones. Stage settings. Stage hands and carpenters. Makeup. Props and scenery. Cameras, sound equipment and Stars. Trented is going Hollywoodian! What do Belleville girls think of it?

A waitress in a downtown restaurant, set down her tray in answer: "Would I like to go into the movies? Now I ask you. I'm just thrilled to death if I get a chance to show some of them how it could act. But of course there won't be much chance of us girls getting there. They tell me you have to win a beauty prize or something first. Why doesn't some one in Belleville put on a beauty contest ..... or a ball in the back kitchen ..... cut off further reference to movies and beauty contests.

A girl clerk in a department store surveyed the questioner intently. "The movies! And here I had any experience at acting! Why—you—you. You are for a long time I was in almost every play our school put on. I know I could succeed if I had to make a small part. It would be just something to work up up with. I wouldn't be at all afraid of the acting part but I know there is very little chance of any local girls getting into it."

The local girl who serves us across the notions counter of another store met the interrogation: "Movies? I would rather quit entirely being made part of the cast than to have a large part. I know just about how they make pictures, and what goes on in Canada. Because I subscribe regularly to some of the better class magazines. Acting wouldn't faze me a bit. I know all the ins and outs of the studio. I know what to do and in a big way if I ever get the chance. I think it would be all perfectly thrilling", volunteered a little office worker. "I would very much enjoy long enough to dream about my name in big lights in front of the place on Broadway or Belleville. Just think of being able to work with Clara Bow, or Ruth Roye, or some of them. Wouldn't it be just wonderful. Remember, you've got to help them out a lot. Not that I'm bragging myself up or anything. I know I can act, and I've been told my girls as good as any of them."

And (no room)

Bunk! Bosh! Piffle. Belleville's girls have been no particular desire to stand in front of casting office windows in the hope that minor parts and bits in some play which might lead them on to stardom. Not a bit of it. In the first place they doubt very much if the talkies would be in any way kind. In the second place they are a bit afraid of the mike in front of both camera and microphone for tests. And in the third place they have no illusions left concerning the movie favorites, and the work attendant on them and the high heights of glory so few have attained.

In the words of the majority who were interviewed: "Movies? Careers! Let the girls do all the acting they want in Hollywood. We are good as it, anyhow. Too good."

OPEN SEASON

TORONTO, Aug. 26.— Definite announcement of an open partridge season throughout Ontario was made yesterday by Hon. George Henry, provincial Secretary and Minister of Game and Fisheries on his return from a tour of the province.

It is many years since there has been an open season in Ontario but the minister stated that partridge would be plentiful enough for open season would be of benefit.

BOISE, IDAHO GIRL LOOKING UP RELATIVES

Evelyn B. Davidson Gives Names of Relatives Near Here

Mr. W. H. Ireland M.P.P., has been asked by Premier George S. Henry aid in the search for relatives of a young lady in Boise, Idaho. Mr. Ireland has forwarded to the Ontario Intelligencer the letter from Mr. Henry and also a letter to him by the Secretary of State's Department, Ottawa.

Mr. Henry's letter to Mr. Ireland says—

"I enclose herewith a letter from Thomas Blaurko, Boise, Idaho, regarding a young lady of that city having a number of relatives in touch with some of her relatives who are residents of Belleville.

"I wondered if you could be of any assistance. If you do not know them probably a news item in the local newspapers might get some results."

The other letter follows:

"Department of Public Inquiry, "On behalf of the Government of "The Dominion of Canada, "Ottawa, Canada.

"Gentlemen—

"There is a young lady here in Boise who has not heard from her father or any of her relatives for eighteen years. The name of the young lady is Miss Evelyn B. David, and she resides at 1518 North 10th street, Miss Davidson is now twenty years of age and has very kindly desirous of getting in touch with some of her relatives. Should you can remember, the following are some of her relatives in your territory of Canada, particularly in Ontario, at Belleville.

"Her first cousin, Edith Barton (a that of plumber and steam fitter).

"Her grandfather, James David-

"Her grandmother, Ellen or Helen Davidson.

"Uncle David and Bert Davison. "Aunt Mary Davidson Thacker, as was private secretary to the secretary of the Interior about 1903, 1907).

"In addition to these names, Miss Davidson would like to locate court of wills and estates might be in touch with some of these people; even the army service record might be of use.

"The young lady is extremely anxious of locating any of her rela. Davidson.

The letter is signed by Theo Blaurko, 624 Bannock street.

MAN TURNS ON BENEFACTOR

Arrested And Charged With Assault of Woman

BARRIE, Ont., Aug. 26.—Frank Murphy 36, of no fixed address is under arrest today on a charge of criminal assault following a brief attack on Mrs. Mervyn Pratikel of Minesing 10 miles from Barrie, yesterday.

According to Mrs. Pratikel Murphy came to her door early last night and asked for a meal. She gave him the meal and he gave a dime and three apples.

As Murphy was about to leave he suddenly turned on the woman and it was only after a stirring struggle that Mrs. Pratikel escaped to her self and run to a neighbor's home. Murphy, when the constabulary resulted in Murphy's arrest.

MAN AND WIFE WILL RECOVER

Moncton, N. B., Aug. 26—Murray Collins and his wife today were recovering from bullet wounds at the hands of Collins' brother, who rounded last night following the shooting in their home which stated both would recover.

Domestic troubles led to the family row, according to information secured by police. Collins, a local millwright, is charged with attempting to murder his wife, who had two bullets in her head when she was taken to the hospital.

His arrest followed. Police believe to have been self inflicted, is not serious. A bullet truck him behind the left ear, but did not penetrate the skull.

HOW TO FEED DOGS

To the Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—Was not that incident reported in the paper Wednesday, re the poor dog found in his frantic endeavour to get the crust of bread offered him by a child and also the way he had to dodge the cars and finally run over by a motor car, one of the most pathetic incidents ever recorded. I hope the people in the neighborhood will see that he is properly fed in the future.

A few years ago passing a home I noticed a boy starved Irish Terrier tied to entertain two little girls by playing with them. He was a fine weak he would collapse and fall down, but struggled to his feet again and try again. I went to the house and interviewed the lady who owned him and she said she fed him once a day as some man told her a dog should only be fed that often. She said with great assurance, since she took a slice of bread and a cup of milk in a bowl and gave it him every morning. She said she did not feed him any of the scraps as that she thought might be too rich. I hastened home and returned with two or three pounds of meal scraps and filled him up and the moment he smelled it his natural food he went crazy and I could not cut it up enough. I called two days later and she lady smiled two days later and she lady in great glee took me to the back of the house to show me him frantically endeavouring to get crust of bread that some one had set off two big shank bones. I told her he could not eat these big bones and she sent them to Toronto, where they grind them up for the biscuit. I then told her she was to properly feed the pup. Go to the butchers twice a week and get meat scraps and small pork and mutton chop bones and put them in a pot with a quart or two of water and a loaf of stale bread and a few potatoes and a few carrots and make an Irish stew, the cost would be about five cents, stale bread 3c, potatoes 3c. This with what came from the table would feed him well and grow a big husky dog they would be proud of say some day might be the means of defending or rescuing the children should occasion arise. Now dear sir and all dog owners can afford 5 or 10c per week to feed their dog and if not the pup or dog should be taken from them and mercifully put out of his misery. Since the garbage collections there is little for the dogs as it goes to the dump while formerly the housewife went to the back door or verandah and scraped off the plates for the dogs. The poor little pup suffers most as he is not old enough to leave home and forage for what he might get.

I go to the butchers five days a week leaving out Saturday and carry home from 10 to 20 pounds of meat scraps and bones and I have two big pots and two big pans and cook it up with bread and potatoes and throw it out in the backyard and the dogs come from all directions and clean it up in a few hours.

Yours truly,

D. H. Ackrill, V.S.

FACTS SHOWN IN CENSUS

Of the total population of Canada of 10,376,786, the number of British born is 2,254,088, of whom 8,069,258 were born in Canada, 2,394,718 are natives of Ontario, 2,696,210 of Quebec. Natives of the British Isles were 1,138,943, of whom 823,364 come from England, 107,646 from Ireland, and 289,762 from Scotland. From British possessions there are 45,166.

The sexes are well balanced as to numbers among the native born, 4,075,999 males and 3,998,259 females. The percentage of females to males from the British Isles is a little smaller.

It is among the foreign born that the greatest difference in numbers of sex appears. Of the 1,122,698, there are 687,130 males and 455,568 females. As expected it is among the Asiatics that the smallest percentage of women is to be found. 8,452 females and 52,175 males. Chinese females in Canada have the lowest of all percentage to the foreign population, there being but 3,482 females while the males total 40,675.

The urban population total 5,873,798 rural, 4,302,988. Native Canadians are slightly more urban than rural 4,192,164 to 3,257,920. Natives of the British Isles who dwell in the towns and cities are more than double of the British natives who live in the country, 769,024 to 369,919. The percentage of Irish living in the cities is greater than that of English living in cities. The same holds true of the Scots native. Those from British possessions are nearly three times and a half in the cities to those who dwell in the rural sections.

It might seem strange but it is true that the division of rural and urban is almost equal among the foreign born. Of course the Greeks preponderate in the cities and only 448 live in the country. The same holds of the Italians. Others are fairly evenly balanced. Finns, French, Hungarians, Rumanians, Poles, Russians, The Austrains, Belgians, Danes, Galicians, Germans, Dutch, Icelanders, Norwegians, Swedes and Ukrainians on the land and in the villages, outnumber the urban dwellers of these racial origins. The greatest block of foreign born comes from Poland, 167,970, next come the Russians, 114,407, then Italians, Germans, and Australians in order.

In 1931 the native born constituted 77.76 per cent of the total population as against 77.75 in 1921. The United States element dwindled from 374,022 in 1921 to 344,674 in 1931.

ART OF SILENCE

Most milkmen have learned the finest art—of working in quiet. Their pre-dawn visits are regular, they go silently about and do not disturb the lightest sleeper with the rattle of bottles. These men win the favor of their customers.

But there is always a black sheep whose coming is a noise followed by an irritated household. It simply cannot be quiet when others are. He plays a jazz anthem among bottles. He should take a lesson from the silent majority of his craft.

But the world of sleepers owes a debt to the great majority of the silently moving milk distributors who know their business. They are so beneficial, bringers of the choicest food, while their silence does not disturb the restorer sleep.

TAKING GLARE FROM LIGHTS

Not by doing anything to the lights themselves, but by interposing a set of revolving blades between them and the eyes of a driver in the way. The blades are on the driver's own car and they reduce the glare from the other car's lights almost as smoked glass would go. But they do not interfere with the driver's vision or his judgment of distance or color.

Says John T. Brady, writing in the Boston Post:

The chief reason why attempts to solve the problem have failed is because they have been concentrated on the wrong end of the trouble, or upon the headlights.

"They do not cause the glare as is generally supposed. It is really caused by the eye adapting itself to contrasts," declares Dr. Ralph E. Eaves, Boston optometrist.

Dr. Eaves says:

As we meet an approaching car, our eyes have adapted themselves from an illumination of practically nothing to the high illumination of headlights. And as soon as we have passed the approaching car our eyes have to again adapt themselves to the low illumination inside our own vehicle.

This continued process causes a great amount of nervous energy to be expended. We have all noticed that if we drive some distance against heavy traffic at night, fatigue is much greater than if we had driven the same distance against similar traffic in the daytime.

There is still another serious road hazard with which we must cope. When we are driving against the sun we have a situation to which the human eyes can not adapt themselves.

IN DAYS TO COME
By Aline Michaelis

In days to come, that wait far out
Beyond the limits of our sight,
Beyond the tumult and the doubt,
Our lives will all be glad and bright.

All shadowless, all sweet, serene
Will be the hours of those days,
And in each new, auspicious scene
We shall find only peace and praise.

Oh, after troubled years like these,
Whose joy is brief as wave-tossed foam,
How sweet will be those harmonies
And hopes-made-true of days to come!

Yet from these dim, dark days that are
We weave the glory and the glow
Of that fair future like a star,
That lovelier realm which we shall know.

From this dull moment in our hands
We fashion all—the bluer dome,
The clearer air, the brighter lands
That we shall gain in days to come!

SIGHTS AND SCENES on Front Street, Belleville, are varied and interesting, more so than the much-vaunted canyon called Broadway, or that windswept arroyo in downtown Toronto where hats have a fashion of going skyhooting if not tied down. Wednesday night as patrons were leaving the Belle theatre after the final show, they were treated to an impromptu race which was thrilling and amusing, nothing more or less than an exile from the Celestial Kingdom transported to, as China, chasing a chicken which dodged in and about the automobiles parked along the curb and scurried across the open spaces at a speed which tried all the resources of the Chinese citizen, wind and otherwise. Finally, after receiving help from spectators the chicken was captured and restored to the coop of a Chinese restaurant nearby to await its turn to be chief actor in a potpie. In short the chicken had escaped and the Chinaman was chasing it.

FOUR BOYS from various parts of the United States were presented with University courses valued at $5,000 each at a gathering recently held in Detroit, being winners of an international contest sponsored by the Fisher Body Guild and General Motors in the building of replicas of Napoleon's famous royal coach which he had constructed in the first flush of his triumphal progress as Emperor of the French. Thousands of boys took part and thousands of coaches were built. Belleville district was well represented by Jack Lill, Jr., of Corbyville, whose master workmanship produced a miniature royal coach which was awarded two prizes for craftmanship and finish. Emperor Napoleon, in his proudest moments of riding in the finest coach in Europe never felt any prouder than those who worked on these miniature Napoleon coaches for months and completed them as a labor of love and a work of art.

KEEP EYES ON FUTURE, THIS REALLY COUNTS

Discouragements of Past Should Not Crush One

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

No matter what you are, no matter what your past may have been, you undoubtedly have felt often enough that you have borne all you possibly could stand and that you had no particular desire to go on any longer. We all get that way at times. Getting upset in a spot or a jiff, with an immediate prospect of escape, may occur not often enough in the course of a lifetime.

There are so many disappointments, so many thwartings of desire, so much routine, so much monotony, so much unhappiness, even, that no one entirely escapes boredom or depression.

Youth will tell you, despite its energy and enthusiasm, that if only its love life were gratified it wouldn't worry about anything else. Middle-age is concerned about the children and their futures, debts that still must be wrestled with and what not. Old age complains of illness, of not being wanted, perhaps.

Naturally we always think the other fellow is better off than we are! We sometimes like to call others lucky and they believe that life has dealt exceedingly gently with them. They seem to us to worry less and to have more. Likewise we belittle the misfortunes we hear about, for we do not hear them all. We magnify, too, and often we contemplate with envy whatever good news comes to our ears concerning others.

Let those others take you into their confidence, however, and tell you of their pitfalls and failures, and their bad luck, and you are disabled to learn that you got off rather well by comparison.

But we are seldom in possession of such information, because people generally are very reticent about divulging their deepest feelings. When a thing hurts keenly one doesn't like to talk about it.

One doesn't mind talking about superficial discomforts. Women actually like to brag about their troubles with domestic help, for instance, and gossip feeds on such values; but when it comes to real and genuine disaster that cuts to the very soul, we experience only that the less said the better.

Such a state is complete and absolute one hundred per cent happiness does not exist, and probably it is a good thing that it does not. A little sadness now and again increases the value of happiness by contrast. If life always were kind we would shrink out of it, the same as we do of rich food.

What we all must do is keep our eyes on the future. Let the past always be but a training ground for better things to come. Above all let us realize, everyone of us, no matter where our path lies, that it means to achieve happiness really is within ourselves.

We must learn to understand ourselves, our assets as well as our handicaps. Such understanding and it must be complete—breeds mental power. It must also make tolerant envy, petty jealousies, the "phone" and all such factors that fasten your attention upon others instead of upon yourself—then and then only will you be unhampered and able to take the bit in your own mouth and run your race.

After all, what does it matter what the past has been? It is really the future that counts! A good running horse looks back.

That is how you should be, except insofar as you make use of the mistakes of the past, to spur you on to greater achievement and happiness. In the last analysis the important thing is not who starts first, but who gets there first.

Never give up and allow discouragement to get the best of you. Remember that saying about every cloud having a silver lining. It has a lot of truth in it.

FLYING HUTCHISONS WAIT FOR WEATHER

Port Menier, Anticosti Island, Que., Aug. 26.—Encouraging weather prospects are lengthening the stay of the "Flying Hutchisons," who reached here Wednesday on their way to Europe by the northern route. Already behind schedule, owing to a mishap to a motion picture camera, they had hoped to get away for Labrador yesterday morning, but weather conditions may cause them to wait even longer. Until weather reports are favorable, George Hutchison, head of the flight, will not continue. The whole project is intended to show the advantage of avoid the "stunt" type of flight and Hutchinson refuses to take chances.

PACKING

your mother is gravelly the best packer in the house and is proud of it, which makes packing generally the worst and thinks it's funny, thus keeping everybody satisfied and providing it's a good sistem.

Sometimes it makes your father sad and guilty to see your mother doing all the packing that he has to go out and earn the jam to make him feel better.

When your family goes away on a vacation your mother has to pack up big trunks and about 10 suitcases and is still expected to know where everything is in each one, and every part pack his own grip does. But it is dangerous to let your father even pack his own suitcase because he is libel to leave his pajamas in his other one and all sways at the bottom and even then you don't know where it is.

The worst time to ask your mother foolish questions is when she is all worn out through packing. But on the other hand it's the best time to ask her for help. Some help in case you have a ambition to send useful without actually taking any risks.

If everything falls out of a suitcase when you open it, it was probably packed by a man.

Nothing like Fruit-a-tives

"I was in a very bad way with constipation. My stomach was upset and I had a bad headache, sometimes for days. I had severe indigestion and was always tired. I had been told by Dr. Hall to take Fruit-a-tives and the real effect was very depressing. Indeed, I felt so wretched that I was about to give up hope. Today my health is splendid. Alex Weir Hurled Masterful Ball, Nationals Pound Ball To Even Series With Ponies

Third Game to be Played in Kingston on Friday

SCORE 11-6

Every Man on Team Contributes to Great Win

Fighting with their backs to the wall the Belleville Nationals belated the superb hurling of Alex Weir, who did not allow a single hit after the third inning and only one man reached first base in that time evened the play-off series with the Kingston Ponies when they stopped here Tuesday night and before a very hostile crowd turned the Ponies back by the score of 11 to 6 Thursday evening.

The series is now tied, each team having won two games and the fifth and deciding game necessary to determine the ultimate winner of the O.B.N.L. Following the game Captain Jimmy Arnlel and Captain W. Mills called the toss of the coin to decide the grounds on which the fifth and final game was to be played and Jimmy Arnlel captain won the toss with the result that the fifth and deciding game of the O.B.N.L. for 1932 will be played at Kingston this (Friday) afternoon.

Alex is Men

Although all of the Nationals played inspired ball during the pastime, the lion's share of the victory goes to Alex Weir, Manager Gerow's choice to stop the slugging Ponies on their own home lot. Alex rose to the occasion and not only pitched one his greatest ball games but added to his laurels by hitting the ball in the pinches. He helped himself to a single, a double and in the eighth inning of the game on two wide ones clouted the ball far into deep centre field for a home run. His double in the fifth frame when the Nationals scored six runs accounted for two of the runs scored in that inning as the Nationals batted their way to a lead they never relinquished. Mills was again very much to the fore, catching a perfect game and leading the youthful Nationals in all of their spells at the stick. Mills' double in the initial frame started the day's fun, and his single in the fifth started the ride on a batting rally that eventually won the game. Harry Morgan came into his own during the fracas by playing a perfect game in the field despite a badly wrenched ankle, besides helping Weir out to two nice singles when they were needed. As a matter of fact the Nationals played heads-up ball throughout the entire game, although they drew a somewhat short-handed having to use Tommy Pointer in right field due to the injury of Herbie Morris. The left-hander excelled himself in the chucking line, as he so far and wide to make two spectacular catches and performed gallantly at the bat. Art Scarlett made the best of unaccustomed play when he raced well over into short centre field to take J. Arnlel's fly to open the second inning. The rest of the Nationals including Barrage, Cooke, Fowler and Cretney all came through at the opportune time to help the cause along and put them in the running once again for the Central League honours. The kids are to be congratulated on their stand before a very hostile crowd that almost completely subdued after the defeat.

How Runs Scored

The locals opened the game by scoring two runs in the opening frame. Scarlett singled, went to third on Mills' double and scored on a passed ball, Mills scoring on an infield out. The Nationals added another in the third when Morgan singled, stole to second on Weir's single and both moved advanced on Art Scarlett's perfect bunt. Mills then crashed one to centre right field and after the catch Morgan had scored home. In the fifth the locals added another counter when Chambers walked, went to second on Pointer's single and to third on Morgan's second hit of the game. Pointer then scored on Weir flew to Arnlel who failed to throw home fast enough to catch the speedy Chambers. Arnlel added sixth proved to be the big frame for the Nationals as they collected six runs across the plate on three singles by Morrow and Fowler and they had the upper hand and were making Morrow walk the entire way to the plate. Mills opened the inning with a single, Cretney duplicated this feat and Cooke walked, filling the bases. With the count of three balls and no strikes on Chambers, Morrow was derricked in favor of Fournier, a left-hander, who walked Chambers, forcing in Mills, Barrage worked Pointer for a walk forcing in Cretney and Pollker was hit with a pitched ball, pushing Cooke across the plate. Morgan filed to left and Alex Weir added to his glory by crashing a double to left centre scoring Chambers and Barrage. Pointer pulling up at third later to score when Scarlett was thrown out at first. Mills batting the second time this inning caught one on the handle of his bat and sent it out at third on a pop fly. Six runs in one inning for the Nationals and they were leading 10 to 4. The only other counter to be added up for the locals was Alex Weir's crashing home run to deep centre field in the eighth frame. His city is handing out medals, or what not, they do not want to forget Alex Weir.

We are not trying to make a hero out of one player as all the Nationals excelled themselves and each and every one is to be congratulated on the spirit of gameness shown under fire. Even when the Ponies were leading 10 to 4 in the fourth third innings the morale of the team was never shaken and they put their backs to the wall and fought back to ultimately win the game.

Following the game Captain "Feeney" Mills and Jimmy Arnlel called the toss of the coin, Jimmy called tail and sure enough when he flipped the coin it was a tail showing skywards. But there is an old proverb—"win the toss and lose the ball game." We hope that for once this tradition comes to the front this afternoon. After all every the Ponies were still sitting pretty with a 10 to 6 lead in the third inning the morale of the players of Ketcheson, Victoria Avenue. Mrs. F. Thompson poured tea. Miss Ruth Hinchcliffe and Miss Marian Thompson assisted in the serving. Mrs. Kells was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

A charmingly arranged miscellaneous shower was held last evening by Miss Helen Thomas at her home on Bleecker Avenue for Mrs. Percy Townsend (nee Marion Mould). When the many lovely bones had been opened and the gifts admired Mrs. Townsley thanked the donors in a few well chosen words after which bridge was played, the lucky winners being Mrs. George Under, hay and Miss Stella Ford. A very dainty lunch was then served, tea being poured by Mrs. Jimmie Varley and the assistants were Miss Mary Stevens and Miss Margaret Symons.

Slightly rotund maidens who would silver down the waist line by conform with the fashions of the hour will find rhythmic dancing of benefit. It not only reduces the circumference but lengthens the waist, creating a trim round line. Rhythmic dancing is more strenuous than strolling over the dance floor; it requires muscle control, and that's why fat cells evaporate and three tighten.

One cannot dance beautifully unless the head goes up, the backbone extends its full length, shoulders fall naturally. This pose brings perfect posture, flat abdomen, the thrown back, chest inflated. The same pose becomes a habit. Walking, standing, sitting the erstal column carries itself splendidly. The step becomes elastic. There is ever present an agility of muscles and grace of movement.

Dancing increases circulation, brings large muscle groups into action, exercises the lungs, creates a sense of exhilaration "and bouyancy. It is good fun. And fun is what we all need after these lean years of misery and worry.

Women who find that they are lagging on the job, that the old routine is making them feel scary and dumpy, will freshen physically and mentally by going in for rhythmic dancing. More benefits there are even than those of exhilaration. Digestive organs function better, the complexion takes on a clearer healthier, rosier color, sleep is normal.

Every woman needs some form of play. That adage about all work and no nonsense is just as good today as it was when somebody first said it. Break away from the treadmill and do the light fantastic.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Dancing is Highest Form of Physical Culture

Few women are interested in gymnastics. It isn't that they are musically lazy, but the routine exercise doesn't appeal to them. There's a lot written about calesthenics that is wasted on the phrial set. True but sad. Athletic sports are claiming the attention of the dear-hearts more and more, yet the gals who bat tennis balls, trail over the golf links form only a small percentage of the sisterhood. Dancing does appeal. And it is the one form of exercise that promotes grace, that harmonizes movements of the body, produces an ease of manner, perfect rhythm.

Dancing stirs up a sense of well-being, bouyancy of spirit. There is no drudgery about it, as is the case with calesthenics. Every girl child should take dancing lessons, either athletic, social or gymnastic. For the good that it will do her busy frame-work, her muscularory system and mentality. Dancing is the highest and most beautiful form of physical culture.

The trained dancer is never cursed with short, angular, jerky movements; even when not dancing her body takes on naturally the ease and grace of perfect balance. Sustained effort extends the chest walls, tightens up the muscles of the lower back, thighs, the abdomen. Flabby women are going in for tap dancing, which is an effective method of knocking fat cells from the figure. Takes courage to make a start, so they fancy. When they join a tap class they find other beavyweights there. Nothing to bother about.

ENTERTAINING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am employed in a small town where I am practically a stranger and recently I was invited by one of the business girls here to her apartment to a club bridge party. The club is a charity organization and each of us paid a stated sum to cover the expense of the entertainment and of course, I was invited as a prospective member of the club.

I am living in a tiny apartment and I would like to know if I should invite this girl to for an evening of bridge. I would from necessity have to invite other girls of her set, none of them friends of mine, merely acquaintances. The girls and especially the one to whose home I was invited, have shown themselves very friendly and that is the first invitation I have had to associate with them. I do not want to appear over-anxious to get in on their affairs, but it would be well to meet them at least half way, as I think they are a group I would like very much.

B.

Please, please, I urge you! to take gracious advantage of this fortunate opportunity to take your social place in the community of life. This business wouldn't have asked you to come, even to a club meeting of this general kind, if she hadn't intended to show her wish to be hospitable. Especially when you were to be considered as a prospective member of the club.

Glorify your tiny home by making the very most of its opportunities for lovely entertaining or charitable hospitality with you. I am, of course, not at all suggesting that you push your way in.... I'm just urging, in a most friendly way, that you quite naturally "extend your hospitality" and plan return entertainments.

I think that your idea for first giving an evening of bridge is a perfect one, say and delightful to plan for, can be fairly simple detail planned for.... your apartment in perfect order, and with a delightful smile of welcome on shining face and too have your refreshments as original and delicious as you can. There is nothing so stimulating to the hostess as to have "everything ready".

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—A socially prominent man who lived in the city for years married an out of town girl, bringing his bride to live here. No entertainments or entertainments of any kind are given for her and this seems very unusual to me, considering the groom's popularity.) Please tell me whose fault it is that his social friends of the groom have given entertainments for the bride—should the couple have sent out "At Home" cards?

2.—While working in the office of a firm, one of their salesmen very well known to me, became engaged to a young lady employed in the same office. Should I present Mr. Smith?" Wasn't this too formal or the same as if we, please give me the correct form.

J.

1—I too would think that it is most unusual that the friends of the groom have not planned dinners and other affairs in honor of the compliment to this couple and to the wife. It would seem such a natural thing for them to do, to say nothing of a gracious and hospitable thing for them to do and especially since the groom is such a popular young man.

Yes, it is quite correct for this couple to send out cards "At Home" but of course this party is in a quite different category.

2.—The form of introduction that this stenographer used was in excellent taste. Of course, if you have used the more casual form of mentioning only the name, "Miss Jones Mr. Smith".... and still she would have been correct. But I do very much like the much more the form of introduction she used, and she gracious the introduction by using this form.

FUNERAL COUTSOM

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should one be asked when as to whether or not men relatives of the deceased ought to wear their hats in church at the funeral service? A says they should remove their hats while in church and also at the grave. B says they should keep them on all the time church service, also and at the grave.

Unless the denomination to which the deceased belongs makes this the custom, the men do not wear hats in church at the funeral service, and they remove their hats at the grave, out of respect to the deceased and in the (Oral) Prof. Smith.

GIVING THE BRIDE IN MARRIAGE

Dear Miss Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise me as to the correct procedure, as a wedding which is to be formal if the bride's father is living, and holds the bride and he are home, but the father refuses to give the bride away? The bride has one sister who is about one year younger and we are wondering if it would be in order if he escorted her to the altar? There will be two bridesmaids and two ushers.

For the bride to have her brother give her in marriage is a perfect solution of this problem. She is fortunate to have this brother, so near her age, to be her gallant escort to the altar and to present her in marriage. And I am sure that the brother will rise to this import, ant distinction, with great credit to himself to his sister, and to all concerned.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Weddings

HEATH—DANFORD

Miss. Gladys Irene Danford, daughter of Mrs. James Danford of Belleville, was united in marriage to Mr. Fred A. Heath, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Heath of Bonarlaw at eleven o'clock on Wednesday morning, August 24th.

The ceremony took place on the lawn and was conducted by Rev. J. D. P. Knox, of Belleville. The bride wore a simple but becoming white gown and was attended by Miss Mabel Mason, while Mr. Kenneth Danford, brother of the bride supported the groom.

The wedding march was played by Miss Leatha Hoover.

After the ceremony all motored to the Dickens' Tea Rooms, where a delicious wedding luncheon was served after which Mr. and Mrs. A. Heath left on a motor trip through Eastern Ontario.

They will reside at Bonarlaw.

CARD—CARSWELL

A very pretty wedding was quietly solemnized at Bancroft on Wednesday, August 17th, 1932 by the Rev. J. M. Fraser, minister of St. Paul's United Church. Mrs. Fraser played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin after which Miss Audrey Isabel Carswell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Carswell of Maypooth, was united in marriage to Mr. Lloyd Clayton Card son of Mr. and Mrs. Darius King Card of Porterville, Ont.

The bride was attired in a georgette silk dress of powder blue, with picture hat and carried a bouquet of yellow mums, roses and maiden hair fern. She was attended by Miss Stella Murdock who wore a dress of blue lace and carried a bouquet of pink roses and maiden hair fern.

The groom was supported by Mr. Wellington Dudley of Porterville, Ont. The groom's gifts were, a belt to the best man; pendant with to-pas setting to the bridesmaid and pearl ring with amethyst setting to the bride.

After the beautiful ceremony the party returned by motor to the home of the bride's parents where they, and a number of relatives, partook of a delicious wedding dinner.

The party, followed by friends and relatives, then motored to the home of the groom's parents, where a very dainty and tasty evening meal was served. Later in the evening a large concourse of friends gathered at the Blue Water Pavilion, where, until the wee small hours everyone seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves.

The happy couple who will reside in Porterville received a wealth of useful gifts accompanied with the sincere good wishes of the donors for a long and happy married life.

Fashion Flashes

Why not "two-decker hats? With a lovely gray and cherry red ensemble is worn a double hat. There is a silver lame brim and a cluster of cherry red velvet flowers and over this is placed a carefwel brim in silver lace. The brim is discarded when the wearer is dancing.

Back again we go to the era of picturesque garden. For evening, an English designer is showing an evening gown over a princess slip made of black circus satin. There is a yellow neck ruching made of three hundred yards of tulle. With this is worn a tiny cap of yellow satin.

The country calls in early autumn and there are some lovely clothes for semi-sports wear, more formal in character than the same type of thing made for summer use. A new sports ensemble is of black basket weave velvet. It has a sleeveless jacket with extended shoulders, a high-built skirt and a highwaisted sweater-blouse with stripes of black red blue and green on the wide sleeves.

You will like the new evening ensembles done in fine brodcloth. A new autumn model done in black brodcloth has an interesting dolman. The back is of the brodcloth, while the front is of white ermine. Two small ruffles of the brodcloth accentuate each shoulder.

Nice and comfy are the new knit capelets and jackets made to go with new Autumn dresses. A frock of black sheer wool has a wrapped skirt and bright embroideries on the bodice. It is worn with a fitted little jacket of black carcul that is finished with a scarf of bright red crepe.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

PRICE LOSSES ARE NARROW

Mild Reaction is Noted in The Early Trading

Toronto, Aug. 26.—A mild reaction was experienced in the Toronto Stock Exchange today when the losses last followed the declines in Wall Street. Losses in the active leaders failed to top a second point, however, and the majority of issues offered stubborn resistance in the down trend. Volume fell off on the reaction.

International Nickel, C.P.R. Dominion Stores and Brazilian Traction were best slightly lower. Consolidated Smelters, a weak spot, dipped 9¼ points.

Extreme losses were experienced by Canada Cement preferred, which sold down 8 points on news that the dividend for the quarter was deferred. Laurie, Price, Steel of Canada, Royal Bank 2.

Oils were heavily traded and all down fractions. In the distillery group, Walker's was the leader of losers of for slight declines.

Toronto General Trusts featured the side of the market with a gain of ten points and Dominion Bank by up 3.

GENERAL LIST REMAINS FIRM

Interlisted Issues Turned Easy in Sympathy with Industrials

Toronto, Aug. 26.—Taking their cue from trend of industrial boards the interlisted stocks on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Curb market in the forenoon today. General list remained firm, however, with several new issues showing moderate lower-priced features.

Horsehoe Foundry preferred resiling and was down 80 to $20.50 taken at noon. International Petroleum off slight 12 to $14.50. Falconbridge, Hudson Bay and Coast Copper were lower. Beatty Bros. preferred was up a couple at 43. Eldorado remained in dull position without noticeable change in the Great Bear group.

Continued accumulation carried several of the cheaper issues to new peaks for the year. Sylvanite gained three cents to 84, San-Antonio 5 cents to 74 and 3 each to 84, 46 and 17 respectively.

SHARE PRICES DRIFT LOWER

Wall Street Leaders How-ever Meet Support in Afternoon

New York, Aug. 26.—The stock market drifted substantially lower in the earlier hours of trading today, although a number of the leaders met support during the early afternoon.

Traders were inclined to stand aside pending developments at the economic conference in Washington. Furthermore, appointment of receivers for Interborough Rapid Transit had a somewhat disheartening effect upon bullish sentiment. An early drive to turn the tide upward with a short squeeze in Auburn, which up 7 points, was abandoned after the Interborough announcement.

Losses of about 1½ points in American Telephone and U. S. Steel were recorded in the early trade. Union Pacific dropped virtually all its gains, but rails were generally lower, presumably reflecting the setback in grains. Chrysler, however, became issue losing 1 to 2 points. Motors were generally included. Santa Fe, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio, Pennsylvania, Westinghouse, Sears, Woolworth, Standard of N.J., American Can, Allied Chemical, National Biscuit and others. Commodities generally declined, then recovered somewhat.

Bulls were encouraged by the allowing up of trading on the decline. A little profit taking from abroad was reported by houses with London and other foreign connection, but in the main the covered buyers who accumulated stocks in this market during the past several weeks were said to be maintaining their holdings intact.

The weekly mercantile reviews reported further gains in lighter lines of industry, and in rental trade.

BARN BURNS ON 6TH SIDNEY

Owned by Merritt Carr And Loss Sustained is Heavy

A large and commodious barn situated on the old Carr's Lodge Lot, Sidney, in the occupation of Dudley; fire miles east of Frankford, and now owned by Merritt Carr, was destroyed by fire early today from an unknown cause. Five loads of grain were burned besides several pieces of machinery. No livestock was perished. The loss will be considerable and is only partially covered by insurance.

The first considerable settlement at Saint John, N.B. was made when 8,000 United States Loyalists landed there in 1783.

SCREEN ATTRACTIONS

Present and Prospective

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

At The Belle

"THE FIRST YEAR" IS CROWDED WITH LAUGHS

That the romantic troubles of young love during the first year are mostly fleeting is the dramatic finding of Frank Craven, director and Charles Farrell comedy drama, "The First Year," coming to the Belle Theatre Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday, matinee daily.

Adapted from the Frank Craven stage play of the same name, it presents Jane and Charlie as two entirely understandable youngsters of the present day.

Director William K. Howard is said to have followed closely the unique camera technique which has paced dramatic technique that have marked his recent successes, notably "Transatlantic" and "The Trial of Vivienne Ware." As a result of the film's smooth flow, the team are said to contribute the finest performances of their short careers.

Irene Gaynor, as the charming marriageable young daughter of average American parents in an average American home, is said to combine her characteristic wistfulness, charm and sincerity in her dramatic values. Charles Farrell in her lover again, but this time he marries her and starts an era of housekeeping.

Eyetta, taking the stars to the two typical American cities in the Middle West and putting them through the usual difficulties of two young people madly in love with each other, quickly come to a climax. There's Jane's first dinner party, business given up for the sake of the young wife, a first quarrel, a deal, a spat, a parting and a reconciliation. The actual action of their differences is said to be one of the most humorous episodes in Hollywood's comedy history.

The cast in support of the two stars is said to be excellent, including as it does Minna Gombell, Leila Bennett, Ilka Chase and others.

Wheeler & Woolsey

The screen's Ace Comedians, Wheeler and Woolsey, with such favorites as Dorothy Lee, Mary Oliver, Roscoe Ates and Edgar Kennedy in the supporting cast, Belle tonight for the last time in "Hold 'Em Jail," a rip-roaring collegiate comedy. Belle News, a funny cartoon and clever Novelette are being exhibited on the same program.

WILL INSPECT CORONA ONLY

English Observers Only Interested in This Phase of Eclipse

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—Science hopes to find out more about the nature of atoms through a study of the Corona which is composed of atomic fineness that surround the sun during the eclipse.

This was revealed Dr. F. W. Aston, professor at Trinity College, Cambridge England and winner of the Nobel prize in chemistry for 1922, who arrived here last night with a party of 17 members of the Royal Astronomical Society of London, en route to Eastern North America to observe the eclipse August 31st.

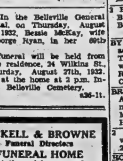
"We plan to centre our attention on the Corona," Dr. Aston said, "the green corcuium line (in the spectrum) previously has been considered an element. We hope to determine during this solar eclipse if atom composes that line, and thus learn more about the structure of the atom. The observations will also help us to calculate how fast the sun's mass is falling.

The party planned a visit to Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis.

POLICE DOUBT MAN'S STORY

Oakville, Ont., Aug. 26—Police doubt the story of Mike Cherbil, 40-year-old Greek restaurant man reported yesterday he had discovered $3 sticks of dynamite wired and set under a bridge near here, ready for the coming of a New York-Toronto flyer.

Cherbil carried the dynamite to the Canadian National Railways station here and dumped 15 sticks before a startled station agent. Another stor, telling how he had watched two men lay the charge, then fled the tracks on the bridge. When police took him to the spot he broke down and wept under their questioning. They indicated several inconsistencies in his story.



Police say Cherbil's story alters in each telling. They also point out that two-thirds of a volt would not have fired the dynamite, "the strongest current with the "block" signal utilized by the unknown dynamiters, would have fired the charge when the train was still 550 yards away, giving ample time to apply the brakes. The evidence is, they declare, that it was an amateurish job.

At The Capitol

DOUBLE-BILL TODAY "WINNER TAKE ALL"

It is easy to predict a vast addition to the army of James Cagney fans after seeing his latest Warner Brothers picture, "Winner Take All" which opened today at the Capitol Theatre.

He has climbed steadily in power and forceful-ness since he and now gives us the finest work of his entire screen career as the hard - hitting, pencil - sniffing fighter in "Winner Take All."

The picture leaves no doubt with the fill in health, striving for a comeback and now desert sanatorium. He meets a girl, falls in love with her. She adds his rest — and-also his nose and chin — to fighting to raise enough money she needs. He leaves her with a promise of reunion and marriage in re-enter the ring and win New York. Once there he forget her for a dancing girl who is deserted by him only as an oddity.

The crude boxer goes high-hat for the society girl's sake. He has his broken nose and cauliflower ear fixed up by a Park Avenue doctor and is getting culture in a big way. His popularity draws offers from the same "powder puff" boxer in order to keep his new name. This alternation provides splendid comedy, drama and human interest. It is only in the middle of the biggest fight of his career that the truth dawns on him. What ensues forms one of the most gripping climaxes that the screen has given us.

Cagney is as fine and convincing a character as he is as a fighter and his much to what we believe is the year's best comedy. The picture is robust, full of laughs and thrills and includes the other woman is given by Virginia Bruce, a beautiful newcomer to the screen who acquits herself ably.

Guy Kibbee, Dickie Moore, Clarence Muse, Alice Mahoney, Esther Howard, Clarence Wilson, Ralf Harolde, John Roche and Allen Lane are members of the splendid cast.

"Winner Take All" is the best boxing picture to date! It runs 1 mins 51 mins.

Behind Stone Walls.

"Behind Stone Walls" is one of the most tragic tales ever witnessed on the silver screen. It is a moving story of a lawyer father forced to prosecute his son for the murder of the lawyer's wife's lover. This story presented all manner of opportunities to show the outstanding tear-jerker, and Frank Strayer, the director, did not miss out on any of them.

The producers of "Behind Stone Walls," Action Pictures, are reached creditably judgment in selecting the principal players with the result that every character portrayal is thoroughly convincing.

Robert Elliott, who plays the role of the lawyer-father, is capable in giving up a consistent string of successful character roles, both on the New York legitimate stage and on the screen. Eddie Nugent, in the role of the lawyer's son, is also fine as he takes to make an attractive juvenile. Virginia Hammond brings a fine performance as the lawyer's wife.

"Winner Take All" and "Behind Stone Walls" are shown at the complete performances at 2.45, 7.00 and 8.30.

NO CASH TO BE PAID

has endorsed it and recommends the adoption of its requirements and procedure. The government will assist Municipalities and in arranging for the organization of the special committee of the cabinet likely to be appointed to advise relief for the review of special cases by the Ontario Municipal Board.

Establish Residence

It is also urged that uniform residence requirements be established throughout the province and that every person seeking relief be required to register and establish residence in some municipality. And it is suggested that a three-months period be sufficient to establish residence and that a complete registration be made of persons who have employed single men and married men who do not reside with their families.

In dealing with maximum food allowances, the report, which is by general standard as follows: For one adult yer week $1.50, for second adult 50c; for third member of family 90 cents, and all additional members five cents down for each to 15 cents for the fourth member of the family. The scale runs from $1.50 for a family of one to $6.35 for a family of ten, per week.

Voucher Required

As to avenues of distribution, the report suggests that distribution must take into account conditions and attitudes in each municipality. The Provincial department is to encourage municipalities to use the method which promises to obtain the most satisfactory results from both economy and social attitudes. It is suggested that the partial application of the commissary or coupon system may be considered, with regard to certain non-perishable local products be encouraged and in all cases where feasible. It is believed that in many municipalities the setting up of a small committee of persons familiar with the local conditions to whom the duty of municipal public welfare board would prove economical.

In dealing with a type of order voucher, the report recommends for general adoption the second form, which sets out a substantial list for which the recipients may exercise the right of choice.

It is also recommended that where the recipient may wish to obtain certain foods which are not named in the voucher list, he may be permitted to do so up to an amount not exceeding 10 cents per cent. of the total food order.

Garmente

In dealing with clothing and footwear, it is recommended there be a range of garments adapted to the needs of each person which are made available for direct purchase by the municipality from wholesale clothing manufacturers, and suggest that lists be prepared of such clothing by municipal authorities and that they be obtained and terms of purchase arranged by agency of the local authority for the year. Medical services. The report suggests that municipal authorities enter into a contract with an arrangement with resident doctors to undertake the care of indigent cases and that the local hospital should be utilized as the source of medical supplies.

Dealing with unemployed persons now receiving relief, the report points out that these persons come within the scope of the Unemployment Act, and that attention of the Dominion Government be drawn to this matter with a view to relieving municipal and provincial and federal governments to the fullest extent possible.

The report also urged a more permanent structure through which provincial responsibility for relief may be discharged. It urges the establishment of a more permanent provision through which the Ontario Government's relationship with municipalities in social welfare and relief matters may find expression.

Tribute Paid by Army and Navy Men to Late R.S.M. Jordan

In a quiet, personal talk to the largest attendance of ex-service men to gather in this city for some time, Capt. F. O. Gilman, M.C., Chief Petitions Adjuster of the Headquarters Staff of the Army and Navy Veterans' Association, outlined the aims, ideals and traditions of the newest body to pack old Memorial Hall, Thursday evening.

He was assisted by officers of the local branch: No. 301 of the Army and Navy Veterans' Association in Canada, and by Major Geo. O. Tice, who took the occasion to welcome the visiting members, and all ex-service men to the hall. The Reverend A. L. Geen acted as chairman during the evening.

Deep appreciation of the help Belleville has so far given the organization was expressed by Capt. Gilman in his opening remarks. "It is now a challenge for this unit to do its part, and to live up to the faith and trust that has been shown it. You have seen one thing, that is needed to make it one of the most successful units of the association in the Dominion. It is one of the most important centres enjoyed by any district headquarters, and only hard work and capable leaders is needed to put it across." "We have very many units scattered throughout the country," decaring Captain Gilman, "and each unit has shown a willingness to help themselves. That is the spirit of each one. Behind each one of those units stands the parent body, ready to help, to aid, to give not only of time, but only when needed."

Co-operative willingness to help each other, and a spirit of fraternity was urged by the speaker as being necessary for the well-being and the existence of the organization.

Can't Stand Alone

"On the battlefields of France and Belgium and wherever else soldiers fought, there was no need for any man to stand alone and depend on his own efforts to get him through, there was an esprit de corps, which carried him over any obstacle and through any trouble. We are not fighting a great battle as we was fought on battlefields, we are fighting for the existence of each other. Maimed, shell-shocked men, who dragged home from the war exhausted, broken in minds and bodies, are being cared for by the organization, but it needs your help individually to carry through the greatest battle of their lives."

Humorous and pathetic cases were cited by the speaker, who has been helped recently by the organization. Many more cases are being handled daily. One case, that of an ex-service man from New Zealand, who had come all the way to Canada to enjoy the best life of the organization in his fight for recognized disability but was unconditionally admitted to petition.

"We are passing through one of the greatest depressions that the world has ever seen," declared Captain Gilman. "Yet there is a glimmering of light now far off. Undeniably we sense now a pickup in the general scheme of things. Let us not be the last to grasp that to keep us from working harder than ever to help each other. The motto of the organization has always been 'every man incapable stand shoulder to shoulder.' It is every individual's duty to do the most, not the association."

Paid Secretary

A suggestion that a permanent paid secretary be placed in the local branch of the organization to work full time, at a living wage, was made by Major Geo. O. Tice in closing remarks who stressed the need of such a step. Such an organization was meant not only for members of the local unit, but was available for any man, who needed help, and any unit that was in danger in which officers and men could assist.

Reeve Mayor Geo. O Tice, on behalf of all citizens and the city welcomed the new unit to the organization to the city Fitting tribute to the memory of the late "Tim" Jordan was paid by the Reeve, who referred to his devotion to the district at large, and my hearty sympathy goes out to all former comrades and ex-service men, who have felt the loss of one of the most brilliant soldiers recently." As the years go by, more and more will be found to look over there die, and are mourned by few remainders, but even while they live there is much to be done to aid many of them," declared the Mayor. "The work of all the local branches is capable of performing incalculable good to those, who so often need help in a battle which is less grand and glorious, but none the less dangerous."

Reference to the hall and the manner in which it was acquired by the present unit was made by the speaker. Only after an exhaustive investigation into the organization, conducted by the Mayor and other trustees, was the donation of this historic building granted, stated Mayor Tice, "the city is behind the unit and will stand to finish it."

Chairman Speaks

"With unity such as this organization is capable of, there is an irresistible force for good that can surmount any obstacle," declared the Reverend A. L. Geen, Chairman of the meeting, who introduced the speakers. An exhibition for all ranks was given to stand together for the good of the organization by the representatives of individuals was made by him.

"It is the misguided life, and one that has no little effect on the natures of those who try, has at any time in history has there been such a great need for help. Others as exists at the present time. Only when the necessities and grievances have no place such an organization as this can be pleased the speaker, and should be carefully weeded out as they crop up. "I am sure the best remedies that man can have," stated Mr. Geen, "is doing good and to find plenty of occasions for cheer with which to surround others."

A short talk by Mr. S. Hampson, member of the Provincial branch of the association illuminated the fact, that a great good was being accomplished by the unit in the Tweed district. Co-operation is absolutely to help each other, abolishment of petty differences, and to help each other by and work, was cited by the speaker as being necessary for the existence of any unit.

Before the meeting broke up, community singing led by Mr. Harold Birrell, assisted by Mr. Clifford Mortimore, pianist at the Belle Theatre, who accompanied on the piano, was enjoyed by the members of the organization, their friends and a goodly percentage of wives and their friends, who were present.

Simple Remedy For Bad Stomach Gives Swift Relief

No Need of Strong Medicines or Disturbed Stomachs After a Meal Keeps Stomach in Fine Condition

If you are a victim of Stomach Troubles —Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating— you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice.

Don't take strong medicines, artificial digestants or dope. Don't overload your stomach after meals. Don't eat what you like but only what your stomach tells you it wants and what it thinks will help or paralyze the work of digestion.

And the best and easiest way to do this is to take your meal with a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless, tasteless, alkaline formula that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean.

A week's trial of Bisurated Magnesia, which any good druggist can supply at trifling cost, should quickly convince you that 90 per cent of ordinary stomach distress is absolutely unnecessary.

FARMER EMBITTERED SAYS LADY MEMBER

Orillia, Ont., Aug. 26— "There is bitterness in the heart of the farmer, declared Miss Agnes McPhail M.P. in addressing the Canadian institute on economic and international affairs here also to the resentment of the farmer against those who are supposed to lead him in the right things."

The value of Canadian field crops for 1932 was less than in 1928, "yet the farmer's overhead remained the same, she continued. "If he could meet his debt with potatoes and hogs and chickens and cream the depression would be as good as three years ago, but he can't. He must have money and into dollars he finds his overhead two or three times what it was three years ago."

SCREAM CALLS NEIGHBORS TO FLAMING FORM

Found Lying on Floor of Home Badly Burned

WANTS DRINK

Blood Transfusions Are Given But Girl Will Not Recover

Toronto, Aug. 26—Give me a drink—I'm burning up inside."

Screaming that agonizing request as she entered the door of their home, her paralyzed form a mass of flames, 16-year-old Gertrude Cassey, crippled daughter of Sam Cassey, last night called the blood of residents near her home at 191 Kane Avenue.

Her clothing, which of clothing burned from her painstacked 191 Kane, she had crawled from the kitchen of her home where she had been curling her hair by the gas range, and when only 15 minutes she had lain slowly burning, it is feared she will die.

Gertrude was alone in the house. A close neighbor of the family, Mrs. Alice Hamilton, who was sitting on her verandah across the street at 162 Kane Avenue, raced across the street, her husband alongside.

Folds Coat Around Her

Picking up the girl in his arms, Mr. Hamilton carried her into the house and sat her in a chair in the front room, while his wife grabbed a coat hanging nearby and folded it around her.

But the flames had burned virtually all of Gertrude from her back and there was little left for another.

Mrs. Margaret Maguire rushed around to find some oil to sooth the burned girl's body. Husband telephoned for medical aid and an ambulance.

Late last night after the blood of the girl's father had been used in a transfusion, the body of the life-long paralyzed body, physician said, the hospital for Sick Children, reported there was small hope for her recovery.

Four York Township officers today failed in their attempts to give a second transfusion of her condition is very better this morning, but her body is badly burned as the lay helpless on the floor of her home that it was not expected their help would be needed.

JUDGES HAVE WORK CUT OUT

Possible to Lap Entry Before First Lap Finished

Toronto, Aug. 26 (CP)—Believe it or not, it is possible for a lagging entry in the 10-mile Women's Canadian National Exhibition swim today to be lapped before the first lap is finished. The six-lap layout in the outdoor pool at the exhibition water makes possible this apparent exception to the ordinary-in-lap course competition.

The explanation is the entrants in all swim will start at one minute water seven times, each only six minutes apart. And in the first lap are included only the first two westward trips. Thus it is possible some speedsters can lap the others—or lap—their less active opponents in the second westward trip of the first lap, before the first lap is finished.

NATIONALIZE INDUSTRIES

Scheme Now Advanced By Chancellor Von Papen

Berlin, Aug. 26—Nationalization of several industries, coupled with heavy taxation of German capital to finance a huge public labor creation scheme were discussed today in a conference between Chancellor Franz Von Papen's government.

Aroused by these reports, leading industrialists called on the Chancellor, it was learned today, to talk over his forthcoming economic policy, which will be disclosed in a speech at Munster Sunday.

It has been stated that plans are afoot for "systematized economy," which might mean nationalization of industries, or strict economic purposes.

In the political field, meanwhile, negotiations for a coalition between the Centrists of former Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Adolf Hitler's Nazis appeared to have failed definitely.

There were some reports the government hoped for a deadlock when the new Reichstag convenes next Tuesday, thereby permitting a dictatorial decree that would leave the government in the position of practical dictatorship.

DOUKHOBORS SECRETLY MEET

With Leader in Jail Future of Community is Discussed

Prince Albert, Sask., Aug. 26— (CP)—Although the Orthodox Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, otherwise known as the Doukhobors, are meeting here today in a secret conference. No word of the proceedings will be out but it is known they are discussing the future of the community with their leader in jail. A question brought to a head by the tendered resignation of Peter Verigin, the President, J. P. Bulkin, Vice-President and W. P. Reibin, Secretary-Treasurer.

The resignations have not been accepted by the executive of the Community and there is a growing feeling they will not be. Verigin, although serving an 18 months fall term here, is still head of the community and has offices in Petersburg, Gentsay, Coonenagen, Berlin, London and Paris.

Although harassed by internal dissension, the imprisonment of Verigin and the prosecution of hundreds of its members for parading in the nude, The Communistic is financially sound, it has been stated, through its business, and under pressure of creditors are described as "sabured".

AGREEMENT REACHED TO FINANCE CROP

Ottawa, Aug. 26—An agreement it is understood, has been reached on the financing of the marketing of Canada's 1932 wheat crop.

While no official announcement has been made three governments, the Doukhobors, are meeting here today in a secret conference. No word of the proceedings will be out but it is known they are discussing the future of the community with their leader in jail. History of St. Peters in Chains Closely Linked With Town

Centennial Celebration Has Been Decided Success

Trenton, Aug. 26 (Special) —One hundred years ago St. Peters-in-Chains was born, and Trenton received the first mass of this parish. In that first mass was conducted by the Rev. Alexander Macdonell, who is held at the private residence of Mr. D. Murphy, which was made by the erection of a church and work was begun shortly afterward and the church was completed in 1833. Incidentally the first church service was in the southeast corner of the church grounds facing Dundas street, which was the property of any denomination to be built in Trenton. The first church built on Point as Trenton was known in 1832 consisted of a log building and several stores and some 73 dwellings, with a total population of about one hundred and fifty people.

Where the O.N.R. station now stands was the home of Mr. Parley Parley was at that time conversed with woods as the principal where the Trent Theatre is now. Mr. Parley was also the first settler where the post office is at the present time Bridge and Dundas and was composed of several cottages which outlined the loggers who were engaged in the timber squared timber down the Trent River. Prior to the first mass the arrival at Trent Port made up into the Trent River as these consisted of about twenty cribs, they then by a boat by chambers down to Quebec and thence to the Old Country.

Incorporated in 1833

In 1833 the town was incorporated as a village and was named Trenton with a population of about 1000. A year before this in 1832, the Gilmour Company built a large mill and Trenton became an active lumbering centre. The mill was enlarged as time went on and ran successfully for many years. The church which had been built service advancement of the town until 1870 when the present church was built. The parish at first embraced Brighton, Codrington, Frankford and Trenton and in 1841 to 1883 when the diocese of Peterboro was carved out of the Kingston diocese that the Trenton parish emerged from the town.

The Catholic church and school buildings have been modernized step by step with the growth of the town.

In 1880 the old school was built to meet the increased demand of the younger generation for education. The old school served until 1913 when the present school was built. The present school is a modern building with all the latest equipment and modern building was erected on the parish grounds and now stands as a monument to the faithful work of the priests who have served in the Trenton parishes and the help of the parishioners, who have helped to make things easier for the coming generation.

Convent Started in 1825

The Convent was started in 1825 and the Rev. Mother Mary of the Congregation De Notre Dame and Mary Ann Lynch and Mary Ann were taken over by the House of Providence of Kingston. In 1880 the village had a town and had grown to then about 2500 people and has grown standard with a present day population of 6500. The Trenton Catholic parish at present has 1,000 and the history of Trenton is closely linked with St. Peter-in-Chains.

This week celebrates the ordination Sunday on Sunday when the Most Rev. Archbishop O'Brien of Kingston will offer 8 o'clock mass and will deliver the centennial sermon at 10 o'clock high mass. A reception in honor of the dead will be said at Mount Calvary cemetery and at 7.30 p.m. benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Defeat Shamrocks in Exhibition Tilt 10-8

Trenton, Aug. 26 (Special) — The C.P.R. won over the Shamrocks 10 to 8 in an exhibition game played here on Wednesday night, the proceeds to go to the Relief Fund. The C.P.R. started out in the first inning getting runs on ball by Greenbury, Bowler, then a homer by Towle scoring Greenbury. The Shamrocks came right back in their half and scored two. Alexander got on second on an error and on a double by Smith, both runners scoring on a homer by McCue. The game went into the fourth frame before the C.P.R. was able to score again, when the C.P.R. added three more to their total. Bernard, the first man up, was fanned, Richmond following hit a two base drive to centre and Bowler and Smith, the next two batters, both laid down nice bunts which was fanned. "MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Kim was trying to roll her sleeves back from her wrists.

"Here, you do it yourself," he said, "with that red hot stuff——"

"It wasn't red-hot," Sharm good-naturedly. "I'm sorry, but I had it on the fire just two min-utes ago. It couldn't have been very hot. I was afraid she'd burn herself with it, but she wouldn't put it on. That would have been terrible. I'll get some baking soda. There's nothing like it for burns."

She flung open the door of the pantry and began to search for the soda. When she found the soda and several around with the little blue box in her hands, Mrs. Farrell was try-ing to push Kim away from her.

"No, you don't have to do anything for me!" she was telling him, her voice shrill and unnatural to Sharm. "You've heard what she said about me! You don't want to believe her! You think I scream-ed! I just began talking, that's all of you!"

She flattened both her hands against his chest and pushed him from him.

"I want you to let me alone!" she cried, pushing past him on her way to the kitchen door.

She stopped there an instant, look-ing back at him with streaming eyes.

"This is the way things will al-ways be now in this place—mis-erable, wretched misery! I tell you I won't stand it. I won't! I'll go away! I'll go down to Lucy's and live there——Her words were lost in a storm of loud sobs.

She slammed the door of the kitchen as she went out, then came in a half minute they heard the door of her bedroom slam.

Her face scarlet, Mary Faith bent over and picked up the coffee pot.

"Kim, you can feel it yourself," she said, holding it out to him. "It's warm, that's all. But I'm sorry I said anything about it. Only I was glad she wasn't badly burned. It's fun think it would help matters if I went into her room and apolo-gized to her?"

Kim shook his head. "Better let her alone," he said shortly.

He stood, leaning against the wall and watched Mary Faith wipe up the puddle of cold coffee from the floor with a damp gray rag that she found on a nail under the sink.

When she had finished she came over to him and took one of his hands in hers. She held it tight, twisting his big fingers around her slender ones.

"Kim...when we're married and we're living in the city, I don't want to down at them, "things like this won't happen. I won't let them happen. I'll make your mother like me."

Kim gave a mirthless laugh.

"You'll have your troubles," he said, and then he added: "How'd he last like that with any girl I wanted to marry. It isn't you she dislikes ...She just doesn't want me to get married."

Mary Faith knew that what he said was true.

Kim's mother had divorced his father when Kim was a little boy. With her alimony she had brought him up and educated him for the law. He had been, and still was, her whole life.

When Kim was twenty-four his father died and the alimony stopped but by that time he had a position in the law offices of McIntyre and Westover in the City Bank Building downtown and was earning enough money to keep himself and his mother.

He was still with McIntyre and Westover and was making twice the salary that he had made when he started to work for them.

His mother was very proud of him. She didn't want to give him up.

She made no secret of the fact that she did not want Kim to marry for several years. She was ambi-tious for him and his career. Once or twice, in Mary Faith's presence, she had reminded him that "he travels the farthest who travels alone."

"Isn't it a funny thing that when two women love a man they almost always hate each other?" Mary Faith asked now, her hands on Kim's shoulders. "Not that I hate your mother. I could love her, be-cause she's your mother, if she'd let me.—But she hasn't me, doesn't she?"

For answer he shrugged his shoul-ders. Then he turned away, emptied his tobacco into the sink strainer and dropped his pipe into his jack-et pocket.

"My appetite's gone," he an-nounced sullenly, "but I'll take you somewhere for a bit if you're hun-gry. There's the barbecue over on Fifth Street and the tearoom down at the corner. Where do you want to go?"

"I don't want to eat if you don't," Mary Faith said quietly, shaking her head. "Please let me go and cook —they're in your mother's room. Hurry and I'll get them. You stay here with her."

"No. I'll take you home."

They finally wound up the two of them by going back to Mrs. Puckett's and having their dinner there.

It was eight o'clock by the time they got there and the dining room was almost empty. It seemed very cosy and peaceful with a coal fire burning in the grate and the hum of voices coming in to them from the parlor on the other side of the hall.

CHAPTER 3

"Mary Faith, I've been thinking over something that you said a while ago." Kim remarked over the pot roast and browned potatoes that Agnes, the red-headed wait-ress, set before him.

She looked at him as he spoke. "You said that you wo-men who care for the same man usually hate each other.... Well, I think there's a lot of truth in that. There's a girl at the office—just a kid—really I've driven her home in my car once or twice—who cares for me.

Mary Faith laid down her fork. Her eyes, steady and brilliant, searched his face.

"And tonight you drove her home," she said. "That's why you were late, wasn't it?"

Kim nodded, helping himself to the currant jelly.

"She lives out this way," he ex-plained. "Well, anyway, I told her that I was thinking about getting married and —gosh, but I certainly was surprised at her reaction to it—" He stopped again, struggling to find words for what he was try-ing to tell her.

Mary Faith was struggling and came to his help.

"I can imagine how she took it," she said with the peculiar second sight of the woman who is in love. A marble-topped table in the middle of the room. "But her young man has died without stopping by to wait for our congratulations!"

Mrs. Puckett has been telling us some wonderful news about you and Mr. Farrell, Miss Fenton," said Allie, who was the elder of the two Brock girls. Her hands were clasp-ed around her knees and she was sitting at the very edge of the sofa so that everything about her looked expectant.

"Yes indeedy!" It was old Mr. McClintock who spoke up next. "We hear that this lad girl of ours is going to get married and leave us all!" His mild watery eyes smiled at Mary Faith. He turned his cha-ir his cigar smoke.

"I've been telling these dear good people that you're going to leave us in less than two weeks, Mary Faith," Mrs. Puckett began to pour the cider into little cups as she talked. "The first of October—that's the date isn't it?"

It was not the date. There was no longer any date for the wedding, and Mary Faith did her best to say so with a cheerful, natural air.

She must be cheerful and offhand about this, she kept telling herself. She must not let these people, or anybody, know how she felt about the postponement of the wedding. There were certain things that you owed to your pride no matter what happened to you!

"We've decided not to be married on the first' she said, and there was not a quiver in her voice. "On the sound of her light, hurrying steps he got up and came out into the hall.

It was Kim. Before he reached her he began to speak.

"I want to talk to you, Mary Faith," he said quickly and instead. "Is there any place where we can be alone?"

long life and happiness of your two young people, Miss Fenton," he said to Mary Faith in his courteous, old-fashioned way. "The bridegroom-to-be isn't here but let us drink the health just as if he were! The wed-ding is postponed, but that means we shall keep our girl here with us a little longer."

Mary Faith heard them all with a little smile that did not hide the unhappiness in her eyes.

"Drink your cider, Mary Faith," Mrs. Puckett said when she herself had had three cups of it. "It's very refreshing."

Mary Faith tried to drink it. It tasted bitter....Life itself had a bitter taste to her that night.

"Tomorrow," she thought when she was lying in bed an hour later. "Tomorrow I'll have to go through all this again at the office! explain-ing everything to everybody."

Tomorrow dawned cold and gray with raindrops that looked like tears running down the window panes in her room. The trees in Hasbrouck Park were hidden in a mist and Mary Faith bathed and dressed by electric light.

There was a light burning in the lower hall, too, she saw as she came down the stairs at eight o'clock.

A man was sitting just inside the curtained door of the lobby. At the

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 14

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

And so Tarzan of the Apes forged steadily ahead toward Opar's ruined ramparts and behind him stalked the ape-man's party and hidden through the day among the rough boulders of the mountain top, among stealthy slunk Werper, jackal-like, and only Pate knew what lay in store for each. At the edge of the desolate valley overlooking the golden domes and minarets of Opar, Tarzan halted. By night he would go alone to the treasure vault, reconnoitering, for he had determined that caution should mark his every move on this expedition.

With the coming of night he set forth, and Werper, who had scaled the cliffs alone behind the ape-Werper, clawing fearfully during the perilous ascent, sweating in terror, almost palsied by fear, but spurred on by stanice, followed upward, until at last he stood upon the summit of the rocky hill. Tarzan was nowhere in sight. Searching cautiously, Werper found the narrow entrance and advanced along the well-worn, granite steps leading downward; but in the dark mouth of the tunnel he halted, fearing to enter, lest he meet Tarzan.

The ape-man, far ahead of him, groped his way along the rocky passage, until he came to the ancient door. A moment later he stood within the treasure chamber, where ages since, long-dead hands had ranged the lofty rows of precious metal ingots for the rulers of their race. No sound broke the stillness of the subterranean vault. There was no evidence that another had discovered the forgotten wealth since last the ape-man had visited its hiding place.

Greatest Industrial Dispute Since 1926 General Strike May Result From Weavers' Strike in G. Britain

Negotiations Wrecked Not Over Wages But Over Reinstatement of 8,000 Workers Who Are Already on Strike at Lancashire Mills

150,000 OUT OF WORK BY MONDAY

Many Cases of Distress Handled in Lancashire—Several Organizations Distribute Food Parcels—Problem of Relief to be Augmented

Manchester, Eng., Aug. 27. — At noon today factory whistles throughout Lancashire called 200,000 cotton workers out on a strike which threatens to become the greatest industrial dispute Great Britain has experienced since the nation-wide general strike of 1926.

How far the strike call will be obeyed by the weavers, who are the first affected, will not be known until Monday morning when the mills reopen their doors. Only a small response to the call is expected in some districts because of temporary working agreements already operative. In other districts the stoppage will be complete.

A tragic aspect of the struggle is that the negotiations for peace were wrecked not on the main issue of wages, but the reinstatement of about 3,000 workers already on strike. On Monday at least 150,000 or fifty times the number whose reinstatement was demanded, will be out of work. In their present mood, only the law of attrition seems likely to bring the employers and the operatives together for renewed negotiations.

Many cases of distress were being handled today by Lancashire several organizations were distributing food parcels, but the problem of relief will be greatly augmented next week.

There was no sign that the government would intervene at the present stage. The cabinet held a session in London in the forenoon and its main attention was directed toward the results of the Ottawa Imperial Conference.

Prize Winners, Time Made in The Big Swim

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—The six prize winners in the ten mile women's marathon swim yesterday, with their times and the amount of their prizes, are as follows:

1—Margaret Carter, Philadelphia, 3.22.18, $3,000.

2—Evelyn Armstrong, Detroit, Mich., 3.27.05, $1,500.

3—May Looney, Warren, Ohio, 3.42.29, $700.

4—Dorothy Nalevaike, Glen Cove, N.Y., 3.50.29, $500.

5—Peggy Dwyer-Cook, Toronto, 6.03.21, $300.

6—Ruth Downing, Toronto, 6.06.29, $100.

CAPITOL LEVY IS EXPECTED

German Bankers Uneasy Over Projected Undertaking

Berlin, Aug. 27 (AP)—Bankers were concerned today with rumors the government, in co-operation with the Reichsbank, intended to expand credits for carrying out the proposed nonodox scheme, by imposing a three per cent capital levy, thus averting inflation and avoiding possible departure from the gold standard.

Reports received plan is this: All persons possessing fortunes above a certain stipulated amount must surrender three per cent as a patriotic duty. The yield so gained is expected to be about two billion marks ($500,000,000).

Thousands of Germans now possess only frozen assets, the government having blocked 70 per cent but will accept instead promissory notes which Dr. Schacht is ready to discount on the ground that the government stands behind the new issue.

With the ready cash thus obtained, the government will be able to carry out its vast programme of creating work.

REAL VETS HOME

Gubernatorial Candidate Says Reds Infested Bonus Camp

New York, Aug. 27.—P. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War and Republican Gubernatorial aspirant, charged before the New York State Convention of the American Legion in Brooklyn today that the discharge papers presented by a large percentage of bonus army members in Washington were produced in the "Communist-owned Pilgrims Mills."

"Nearly all of the real veterans went home after they were adjourned," he said. "Less than 2,000 remained for the final curtain now dovetailed in among them was a polyglot mob of Communists and Bolshevists, plus a generous sprinkling of Communist agitators from New York and Philadelphia."

He said service of many "discharge certificates" was a printing press located in a large eastern city and it was surrounded by rich evidence that it had been used for printing false credentials for synthetic service men.

"In other words," said Mr. Davison, "the organization of these various bonus camps who insisted that the veterans must show their discharge papers were hoodwinked by fakers who brought discredit on the uniform that you men wore in 1917 and 1918."

PLANE SEEN PASSING OVER CAPE BRETON

Halifax, Aug. 27.—A plane was seen passing over El. Paul's Island, at the tip of Cape Breton, at 11.30, Atlantic Daylight Time, east coast shipping service reports. It was believed to be the amphibian carrying Pilot R. D. Waldron and two companions to Harbor Grace to inspect Captain J. A. Mollison's plane, which arrived there from Ireland, and for the eastward Atlantic crossing.

The amphibian had taken off from Port Hawkesbury about two hours earlier.

BODY OF MISSING WOMAN DISCOVERED

SUDBURY, Ont., Aug. 27.—The body of a woman, found in the bush near Frood Mine yesterday was today identified as Mrs. Hilda Nora, Sudbury, three years of age and a widow, Mrs. Nora left home seven days ago, police are informed, after selling her household effects. She told neighbors she contemplated a trip.

Mrs. Nora evidently had been dead for five days. There were no marks of violence on the body, and police are working on the theory that she took her own life. Her husband has been employed before Magistrate Thomas Stoddart, of Copper Cliff.

New York, Aug. 27.—The Canadian dollar again improved on local foreign exchange today, gaining at 98⅞, a gain of a quarter cent from last night. The pound sterling hovered around $4.86⅛ after last night's advance to 3.46⅛.

4 KILLED 20 INJURED WHEN TRUCK UPSETS

Truck Pulls to Side to Let Motorcar Pass by NARROW ROAD

Soft Earth Gives Way And Truck Carries Men to Death

Pittsburgh, Aug. 27 — Four men were killed and a score injured today as the truck in which they were being taken to work toppled over an embankment near Frankfort Springs, Pa.

The dead were taken to a morgue at Hookston. Some of the injured were treated by physicians who hurried to the scene. Others were removed to a hospital at East Liverpool, Ohio.

The men were riding on a sand company truck. They were on their way to a highway improvement to be paved.

The truck pulled to one side of the road to allow another car to pass. The road was narrow and the heavily loaded truck sank in the embankment of soft earth and overturned.

The dead: Mike Borsick, of Allquippa, Pa.; Mike Natich, of Allquippa; Anchilovich, brother of Rankin, Pa., and Otis Tucker, negro, of Rankin.

Of the injured, six were hurt seriously.

TRADE UNDER BRITISH FLAG

Premier Bennett Appeals to People to Accept Responsibility

Toronto, Aug. 27 (CP)—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett yesterday called on the people of Canada to take full advantage of their opportunities in trade under the British flag and to accept the responsibilities of their new place in the Empire.

"If Canada is to maintain her proud position as fifth trading nation of the world," said the Prime Minister, "her people must exert every effort to satisfy the new conditions of trade within the Empire. "He wished to remind his hearers that agreements concluded at Ottawa were the first step ever brought with them not only advantages but also responsibilities, which must be discharged with characteristic Canadian vigor and resou cefulness.

In opening the 54th annual Canadian National exhibition Prime Minister Bennett said it typified the remarkable progress of Canada in 54 short years. No other country, he believed, he declared, could boast such a rapid growth as this Dominion among the foremost nations of the world. The Prime Minister declared the authorities in continuing to make progress was in his view an example to be followed by all Canada.

President of Chamber of Commerce Predicts Record for Belleville Fair Sees Fine Spirit of Cooperation

Mr. H. E. Fairfield, president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, when interviewed by the Ontario Intelligencer this morning, expressed the utmost confidence and optimism because of the encouraging outlook for Belleville's Greater Fair at the annual exhibition to be held from Tuesday Aug. 30 to Friday, Sept. 2nd.

Mr. Fairfield was one of the most active among that band of progressive citizens who laid the foundation for the bigger fair of to-day, brought about the establishment of the new Agricultural Park with its splendid buildings and commodious buildings.

He sees in Belleville Fair a fine expression of that spirit of cooperation that should carry every interest in Hastings not only between the City and the County, but also between the two county municipalities of Hastings and Prince Edward.

The board of directors is in itself an expression of the same spirit, because they come from all of the surrounding municipalities as well as from the City and represent all classes and interests.

In special and extremely interesting attractions this year's exhibition will certainly establish a new record. Most of these have already been mentioned in the announcements made from day to day in the paper, but Mr. Fairfield would call particular attention to the ball-ball tournament at which eight high-class teams will compete for a silver trophy.

Mr. Fairfield suggests that business men along Front Street decorate their premises in honor of the event and have the flags in full display on the sidewalk. Private citizens can also greatly assist by a plentiful display of flags and bunting at their homes, especially on the route to the exhibition grounds. It creates a fine impression upon visitors to our city.

ALLEGE MAN DRIVES POLICE OFF WITH GUN

Nelson Miller of Hallowell Said to Have Fired at O. P. P.

ESCAPES IN DARK

Police at Time Were Investigating Family Trouble

Firing it is alleged at the Provincial Police car, as it headed off when they were about to investigate a domestic quarrel, Nelson Miller of Hallowell Township, Prince Edward County drove the police back and escaped under the cover of darkness, late Sunday night.

The provincial police of Belleville and Picton were notified that there had been a domestic quarrel in the home of Mr. Miller and he had ordered his wife from their home. Mrs. Miller was somewhat intoxicated, he had been, it is said, maltreated by her husband before she left their home. Later the neighbours informed the police.

When the provincial police arrived at the Miller home they were greeted by Mr. Miller who was carrying a shotgun. On the order of the officers from his premises it is claimed, threatening to shoot them if they failed to do so. As Mr. Miller is a man of great age the police tried to humour him with the result that he fired point blank at the officers as they say. Fortunately the shot went astray but in the excitement the elderly man escaped and completely disappeared.

The provincial police are still on the trail of the man and hope to get to find him some time this Saturday in the woods adjoining the Miller farm.

Magnetic Storm Forecast For Sun's Eclipse Aug. 31

Bell Telephone Laboratory Announces Disturbances

TIME UNCERTAIN

New York, Aug. 27.—One of nature's rarities a "magnetic storm" is predicted for the total eclipse in Quebec and New England next week, but it won't interfere a bit with seeing.

The prediction is an example of a new kind of scientific forecasting, possibly the first time when advance notice of a magnetic storm has been important to a large number of people.

Magnetic storms are electrical disturbances coming from the sun. Scientists think they are caused both by the invisible ultra-violet rays and by corpuscular streams, theatrical "electrical particles" shot out from the sun.

The forecast for the eclipse is made by A. B. Skeliett of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York. It is issued for information of the scientists who will use the long twilight of the eclipse, and its momentary darkness, to learn more about the reasons for radio fading and differences between day and night transmission.

"This magnetic storm, said Mr. Skellett, is likely to strike a day or two after the eclipse.

The last previous storm when this spot faced the earth, says Mr. Skellett, was August 1 and 2. The "black light" streaming from the spot is due to the rotation of the earth's face again August 28 or 29. Based on previous experience with this spot, Mr. Skellett predicts that "magnetic disturbance is likely to be "disturbed at least moderately and possibly severely." Northwoods ice storm might last until after the eclipse.

ECLIPSE AGAIN IN 54 YEARS

Rochester, N. H., Aug. 27.—Dr. Edwin Brant Frost, blind astronomer, claims to 54 years and 32 days from August 31, 1932, there will be another total eclipse of the sun visible in Eastern Canada and United States.

Dr. Frost, who has been blind ten years, is here to view the eclipse through the eyes of his son. He urges amateurs to make photographs and persons who can sketch the corona during totality.

GERMAN DEBTS OF OVER TWENTY BILLIONS

Berlin, Aug. 27.—The government's search for funds to finance its projected employment program may culminate in increased interest rates on German's domestic debt.

Government circles seemed agreed additional taxation, increased compulsory loan and an increase in the inheritance tax from three to 30 per cent would be likely to cause hardships unless industry and business were relieved of some burdens, some interest charges.

German industry and business are stagnation with debts totalling 20,000,000,000 marks, more than 20 billion dollars. The annual interest charge is 6,200,000,000 marks of which 3,000,000,000 marks is payable in Germany.

Hereditary Character of Cancer Is Claimed by Genetic Experts

Ithaca, N.Y., Aug. 27—Dr. Madgesinpichent cancer.

Macklin, London. Ont., today told the Sixth International Congress of Genetics, meeting at Cornell University, that cancer sometimes is shown by statistical study to be hereditary.

Medical men, Dr. Macklin said, have considered for some time that cancer was hereditary in some animals but were distributed to believe the same could be applied to human beings.

Statistical study, she held, showed convincingly that the same types of cancer sometimes occur in members of a single family in a manner which can not be attributed to chance.

Failure in many instances to trace the hereditary nature of cancer she said, was due in part to lack of knowledge of the inheritance and/or to occurrence of death from other causes among parents afflicted with canc- succeeding one.

She urged that persons whose ancestors were known to have suffered from cancerous diseases should submit to periodic examinations at the hands of competent physicians.

Dr. Macklin said, necessarily limited her investigations to the records of clinics in order that possible hereditary tendencies of the disease might be checked in its early stages.

Dr. Macklin insisted, however, that the same tendency could be found in all children of persons afflicted with cancer which is essentially inherit the disease. Other factors than the disease itself, she said, entered into communication of the disease through hereditary and to many instances these other factors did not favor perpetuation of the ailment through succeeding generations. even though, under the right conditions, the disease might skip a generation to crop out again in

FOG AND RAIN HALT FLIGHT

Flying Hutchinsons Waiting For Favorable Weather to Proceed

Port Menier, Anticosti Island, Que., Aug. 27—(By The Canadian Press)—Fog and rain throughout the lower St. Lawrence River area today lengthened the enforced stay here of the "Flying Hutchinsons."

The city of Richmond, powerful amphibian flown here on Wednesday from Saint John, N.B., by George Hutchison, still rode at anchor in the harbor with the chief members of the party patiently awaited for clear weather.

Late Wire Messages

St. John's Nfld.,—Thor Solberg and Carl Peterson, their hopes of a trans-Atlantic flight to Norway crumbled in the wreckage of the big red and yellow-sesquiplane which crashed in Paradise Sound Tuesday night, were on the way to St. John's today.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—A heavy driving, chilly rain that swept this area today sent many Iowa farm holiday association pickets scurrying home and after the rain had ceased the number of men picketing the four main highways into this city had dwindled to approximately 100.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Thirteen of the 23 pilots who took off from Roosevelt Field, Long Island, early today in the Leeds-Lawrence air derby to Cleveland, landed at the Harrisburg Airport on account of fog.

"Green Mountain Boy" Believed Lost Only Hope is Rescue by Passing Ship

London, Aug. 27—Europe assumed today the trans-Atlantic plane, "Green Mountain Boy," long unreported out of Harbor Grace, Nfld., bound for Oslo, Norway, was down in the Atlantic, and the only hope was rescue by a passing ship.

A second day came without any news of Clyde Lee and Alden Bochkon since they took off at 5:00 A.M., (2.30 Thursday Eastern Standard time) last night.

Norway, kept their lights going all through last night as did Croydon and several other fields along the fliers' route to Oslo. None of the regular fields had any hope to offer.

It was generally assumed that even if the United States pair had weathered Atlantic storm, they may have encountered, they must have been compelled long since to alight on the sea for want of gasoline. Their endurance was exhausted long before nightfall, Oslo time, last night.

Fishing Reveals Character Tale of Wanton Destruction

Sportsman Tells of Waste by Those Who Catch And Throw Away

HOGGING FISH

"Nothing will reveal a man's character any more than a day's good fishing," commented a local prominent sportsman, who has been noted for his uncanny ability with other men, for his gentleness of character, and a general propensity to shoot square with man or fish.

He was in a ruminative mood. "Ah that it would be a funny world if everybody acted alike in it, but something always crops up to help drawing comparisons. Take that case the other day. For a long time a certain chap in town here has been after me to go with him down the river a bit. Last week we did get set and pulled out last Wednesday. Some of the lads around town claimed him to be some shucks when it came to handling a pole. Well, I hadn't been out ten minutes, when I knew that he had fished before, but he wasn't a expert by any means. I'd seen too many before that.

"Along about The Gap, near Massassaga, we had a little taste of fishing with pinnows so we threw out a couple of lines. The little outboard kicked along fine. Down past the point we got the first strike. The hauls that he got aboard over hand, with a nice sized pike on. He then had him in close him over the head with a club and threw him in the bottom of the boat. He didn't even stop to look at the fish, and soon had it still again.

"From then on, till we go to Big Island, I guess we got over a dozen strikes of all kinds of fish, and one of them T—— would haul in aboard and club it. The little fish got off them getting the hooks out, but the pike he would simply knock down in the boat. I got disgusted. Of six or seven fish I got only two one. The rest I treated as easy as I could with wet hands, unhooked them and let them go back to their tiniest fungs.

"Finally I got to get a strike that I a strike. I knew he'd snagged somebody's line and was going to have been a good fight there if T—— had not hauled in. He got a big pike, but he just hauls it in like the others. He gets him to the boat, clubs him mercilessly and "smashes" it. He was the nicest fish I'd seen in some time. I picked the old fellow up and just enjoyed looking at him. He was a beauty, solid and deep, and I feted over with the nicest markings you ever saw. I knew there was any time for such foolishness at lunch, however, he just kept trolling away. I'm not the sort to go around say about a dozen fish of all kinds and sizes, and "muskie" in. He had over the limit then.

"Finally I told him he'd better be getting back." He looks at me. "Oh, I hadn't been right. "What! Quit now since they're just started to bite!" I'd pulled in my bottle some time ago though and finally he starts to squirm and then he says:

"Have some of those fish," he remarks, pointing to the bottom of the boat. I didn't want any of them. Two of them was enough for me. Anyhow I didn't have any place to keep them until I wanted to eat them. I answered that I didn't. "Well, give them to the dog, then" he says. Then after he saw that I wouldn't take any, he starts collecting them up, keeps four or five of the biggest ones and before I knew it he had started throwing the smallest dead back into the bay. They'd only spoil if I took them home, he says easily!

The local prominent sportsman shifted his position and glanced at the circle who had been listening to him. "I think that little outboard motor was the slowest thing I had ever ridden in front of on the way back home from anywhere —even if it was turned on as fast as she could kick——" The I.P.A. started to move away.

"I'd heard of fishermen like that before, but in all the years I've kicked around the bay and lake was the first time I'd ever seen one of them in action. They say fishing is getting poor in the Bay of Quinte, and I was with one actually one of the chief killers complaining about tourists coming here to fish. They are out to put fish in a rain barrel for him—and then give him a shovel to scoop them out!"

HELEN ZOMBRO BEST DRIVER

Horse Owned by S. P. Hagerman Judged Best at Picton Fair

Mr. S. P. Hagerman, West Bridge Street, Belleville, has not had his love for a good horse and who yearly visits the city with a couple of good ores, has returned from Picton Fair where he took down three major awards and a third with his two horses. Helen Zombro and Ada Bonanza. Mr. Hagerman purchased the Zombro mare from Frank Harris at the Toronto horse show. Mr. Weaver of Kilcheer and Allan Mann of Peterboro showed against Mr. Hagerman in the harness turnout, and took first and in all three classes. Helen Zombro has the red ribbon pinned to the bridle. A third was received for its hackney in his class. This is a commendable showing and those horses will be seen at the Belleville Fair, which opens on Tuesday next.

Cold or Warm Drinks Which?

Ancient Controversy is Revived in Belleville

A controversy has arisen within the city. Two warring camps have taken opposite sides and threaten to remain in a state of perpetual deadlock until the question is settled once and for all.

"Cold viands and ice-cold drinks for hot weather," is the cry of one.

"Hot coffee, hot soup, hot victuals. Eat and drink these to keep cool when the thermometer soars," is the chant the opposition. And so the war rages.

Like the old-timer who wears a sweater and is the only one cool with during the hot months, they refuse to be swayed for or against.

Things reached a head in a home in the city Thursday evening, when local citizen who works in a hot kitchen downtown, was surprised at hasty snatches of day dreams thru-out the burning afternoon, cooling viands and drinks in a frost encrusted refrigerator at home. Iced tea, cold coffee, iced milk in tall glasses—frozen desserts. Mid-August delights, accordion to the one side which scorched the city.

Hurrying footsteps carried the parched worker home. Dinner was ready. It stood smoking and piping on the table like a miniature Vesuvius. Hot soup, a best-ware of hot coffee, hot meat and potatoes fresh from the boiling water. Accompaniments—mustard, hot plantations. Debate. The debate raged. It will probably rage until the question has been satisfactorily settled. When that will be, or how it will end, isn't quite clear.

Ice cap or iced tea for hot weather.

DECORATE CITY FOR BIG FAIR

Merchants And Residents Asked to Co-operate With Officials

Belleville will present a gala appearance to the thousands who will visit the city during the four great days of the Belleville Fair if suggestions made by the executive of the Fair Board, members of the local Chamber of Commerce to merchants, and business men of the city are complied with regarding the display of flags and bunting in front of their respective business premises.

As in former years, merchants have agreed to comply with the requests made by officers of the Fair Board and the Chamber of Commerce who are all working in unison to-obtain this occasion one of the greatest ones ever enjoyed by the city of Belleville. Keen public interest which has been created throughout the urban districts in this territory officers of the Fair Board see proof of a greater attendance than ever before. Special effort will be made to decorate the city for the visitors.

Some of England's finest fleeces come from the Orkney and Shetland Islands, where sheep farm from a large part of the sheeps' diet.

Builder Learns That This Is a City of Verandahs

Citizens Would be Lost Without Verandahs to Rest on

Recently a local builder offered a house for sale. Situated on one of the better residential streets in the city, the attractive building seemed to be a bargain for the price asked.

Even the spacious lawns in front and at the sides, fringed with flowers, in bloom, gave it a distinctive air possessed by no other residence in the block.

Many prospective purchasers applied for permission to inspect the interior of the place and were gladly shown through by the owner. They all agreed that the price was right, and that the interior was perfect. Mr. Jones then all left without a definite answer.

The dealer scratched his head.

Finally one man, more outspoken than the rest, came along. He, too, was shown the house, but he indulged in less lavish praise than the others. At the termination of the visit he declared the house was very nice and all that but it "just didn't suit."

The dealer tackled the man. "Why doesn't it suit you?" he asked.

"I'm a front verandah man," declared the other "I'll not rent verandahs, and I spend half my time on the one belonging to the house I now rent. This house hasn't any verandah, and if I lived here I'd be lost.

The dealer said nothing, but one week later preparations were commenced to add a verandah to the house. It was sold in less than three weeks.

Belleville is a city of 'front verandahs.' They are an institution in the community, and have been responsible for strangers who have visited the place However small they may be. It is here that the family take their rest, spend their leisure hours, exchange the news and gossip of the day, and entertain their acquaintances. The city have no front verandahs. They have no grass plot in front of the house. They have also even the neighborliness found among front verandahs' sitters in less populated communities. Something is lacking.

There is a comparison between front and a "home town paper." Both are indispensable to the small community. Both reflect the spirit of the small city or town and the residents which inhabit it. Both are indispensable for even the small town dweller.

MRS. ALICE NOBES

At her home in the fourth concession, Thurlow, following an illness of lengthy duration, Alice Nobes, beloved wife of William H. Nobes, passed away following an illness of lengthy duration. The deceased was born in Roslin fifty-five years ago, being a daughter of the late Frank Elliott and Mrs. Elliott. For the past nineteen years she has resided in the fourth of Sidney, previously living in Thurlow and Roslin. The late Mrs. Nobes was a member of the Free Methodist church, and was highly respected and esteemed in the community where she resided, and also throughout the countryside. To those bereaved by the passing of Mrs. Nobes is extended the sympathy of their many friends throughout the district.

The immediate family surviving are the husband, the mother who made her home with her late daughter; two sons, William J. of Warkworth and Malcolm at home; one brother, John Elliott of Thurlow; and two sisters, Mrs. Myra Hinds of Melrose, and Mrs. Gardner Post of Napanee.

Revival of Swimming Seen as Mites and Grownups are Taught Rudiments of Healthy Exercise

More Learning Art Than Ever Before in The City

MAYBE HELPFUL

Drownings Less Numerous if All Could Swim

Water dogs They miles from three years old upwards splashing, wading, diving and frolicking in the water of the cement pool on Victoria Park. On the platform in the water at the southern tip of the park other children only slightly older, poise on the springy diving board reaching out over water, twelve feet deep, and dive quietly into the depths with the grace and agility of a young seal.

Crawl stroke swimmers, backstroke swimmers, swimmers who merely lay on their backs in the water, the large fish spinning themselves on the surface, and many other swimmers who strike boldly off in the direction of the Murray Canal, wreathe breather who keep very close to shore. Swimmers who range run from six to sixty Grandfathers teaching little grandsons and granddaughters how to swim, Mothers in very deep water, and mothers and fathers who take their little brood one by one and teach them the first easy rudimentary strokes of "dog paddling." Belleville has seen a revival this year of swimming. Youngsters and oldsters have become swim conscious and are busy learning to so either an art which has for a long time been sadly neglected.

Statistics regarding the number of new swimmers who have been taught this year are not available. It is known, however, that swimming has received an impetus which has been remarked upon. Who has not noted with pride how one's own son or daughter has taken to the water like a duck, or how a parent has made his own progress in the art of swimming. Deep water had no terrors for them. Youngsters now paddling off shore will soon duplicate the performance. Even if the kid tips over in Big Bay they'll know how to save themselves. But, more important, they will know how to save others.

Trace Relatives Of Boise Girl

Mayor And Police Succeed in Finding Relatives as Sought

Through the efforts of Mayor Tice and Sergeant Detective J. M. Truesdell, relatives of Miss Evelyn B. Davidson of Boise, Idaho, have been traced. At the instruction of the Mayor City Clerk Holmes wrote the following letter in answer to the recent inquiry:

"Belleville, August 19th.,

"Theo. Blanchet, Esq.,
514 Bannock street,
Boise, Idaho.

"Dear Sir—

"re Relatives of Miss Evelyn B. Davidson

"Replying to your letter of August 10th., addressed to His Worship the Mayor, I beg to state that an investigation has been made and I believe that if you will write to Mrs. William B. Davidson, 15 Murray street, Belleville, Ontario, she will be able to give you all the information you require concerning the relatives of the above young lady. It is just possible that Mrs. Davidson has already written you as your letter was shown to her when the inquiry was being made.

"Yours truly,
(Signed) Winfrid Holmes,
"City Clerk.

"It is believed that some of the relatives are in Ottawa and Detroit.

QUINTE STABLES WIN PICTON PRIZES

In competition with other horses from all over the province which had been entered for the Picton Fair, Belleville horses under the coaching of Harry (Babe) Elmhurst, trainer, in every class.

three youths in a shaky old skiff were "rocking the boat." They laughed with glee as the boat finally tipped over and they found all hold the water. Then they righted the craft, climbed in again and repeated the performance. These boys were pupils-graduates in the art of swimming. Deep water had no terrors for them. Youngsters now paddling off shore will soon duplicate the performance. Even if the kid tips over in Big Bay they'll know how to save themselves. But, more important, they will know how to save others.

RAIN WELCOMED BY ALL FARMERS

Climaxing almost a week of unprecedented heat, rain which fell over a wide area early Friday evening, and continued intermittently throughout the night, brought with new life to parched field in this district. Today corn, grains and roots which had been slightly burned by the sustained high temperature has assumed a healthy green cover. With the rain came also a relief from the oppressive humidity and cooling breezes, which lowered the temperature considerably. Low-lying districts in this district were the district Saturday morning promised more rain, which will be appreciated by agriculturists.

MANY HORSES STABLED HERE

Races During Fair Week Attract Large Entry List

Horse lovers throughout the district, who have noticed a decline in their favorite sport of racing on local exhibition tracks this year be assured of better races and a larger number of entries at the Belleville Fair than ever before. Already double the number of horses accommodations in the stables at the track. More will arrive from Ottawa either Wednesday or Thursday than the races at the Ottawa Fair, which they have attended. Among those present are Mr. W. Hillock, Caledon, Ont., with three horses; Mr. L. Bennett, Toronto, with four horses; Mr. James Sutherland, Peterboro, with two horses; Dr. L. Wilkins, Toronto, with three horses; and Mr. R. Scott, Toronto, with three horses present on the grounds. According to local horse owners and racing enthusiasts there will be at least sixty entries at the fair during the four days. Some of had been stabled in training at the trim for the word with large entries in every class.

PARK BENCH UNDER WATER

Mystery of Missing Seats Bids Fair to be Solved

Year by years benches on Victoria Park have become fewer and fewer. The mystery of their disappearance has long been a puzzle to members of the Parks Board, and caretakers themselves who have repeatedly scratched their heads at their problem but quiet disappearance. Attempts to find the manner in which they have disappeared have been useless. Seemingly they had vanished into thin air. At the present time, out of scores which were placed at various times throughout the park a year or so ago, only a scant few remain. Others are always full.

The mystery of the disappearance of the benches at last bids fair to be cleared up, however. Thursday afternoon, while diving off the end of the platform at the end of the park, one swimmer felt something hard and queer under the water. Investigation disclosed a park bench. With the help of other swimmers it was pulled to shore and a search was made for more. Two more were found in as many minutes and were also pulled to dry land by the bathing youths. Friday afternoon a third was discovered, and after an interval of diving and clutching it, too, was brought to the surface. The last one was one of old fashioned kind which was seen on the park years ago. It is believed that all the benches had been under water for periods ranging from two years on. A search is being made for more of the benches which had doubtless been thrown into the bay in playful moments.

PREDICTS NO RAIN DURING THE FAIR

"Nearly a month ago I predicted a hot, dry August, with higher average temperatures than we have experienced all summer. Rainfall would be accordingly light. September, also would be phenomenally hot and dry. The "I-betcha-boys" waxed money they wanted to bet that I was wrong. Yet, a check up of the weather we have been having for the past month, will disclose the fact that I was pretty nearly right. We've had hot weather and dry weather. September's not yet here, but the same forecast still goes. Wait and see, declared the weather man of the city who has so far gained a commendable batting average for past forecasts.

Weather for the Belleville Fair? Hot and dry. Excellent weather. Perhaps too hot for some, but I don't believe we'll have a rainy day during the whole four days.

HIS DREAMS CAME TRUE

In far away Sparta, in ancient Greece, some years ago a young boy dreamed of distant lands and he earnestly wished that he might go forth to see the world. America, that great and wondrous land of which he had heard and read so much, attracted him greatly; it was to America that he longed to go and this longing was eventually satisfied by other and older members of his family deciding to leave their native land and to seek their fortunes in America. With them he came and when still a young boy bearing the name of Chris. Scopis, he landed in Philadelphia in the year 1905. Today 27 years later he is the popular proprietor of the Scopis Restaurant and Rich Class Confectionery Store at 208 Front Street, Belleville.

In the year 1911 Mr. Scopis came to Canada and settled in Cobourg where he engaged in the restaurant business. He remained there but a short time and then went to Simcoe, returning to Cobourg the following year and again engaging in the restaurant business. He remained in Cobourg until two years ago last May, when he came to Belleville and opened the beautifully fitted and well appointed restaurant of which he is now the proprietor.

Mr. Scopis by close attention to business and by the excellence of the food provided to his patrons and the service given, has built up a most satisfactory business. He employs a staff of fourteen persons and gives an all day and all night service.

In connection with the restaurant there is the most modern equipment for the dispensing of all varieties of ice cream and ices and he creams. A large and well assorted stock of candies also cigars and cigarettes is a popular feature of the business.

A year ago last May Mr. Scopis opened a restaurant in the village of Madoc and under the management there of his son, Mr. George Scopis, a very nice business is carried on.

In the year 1929, Mr. Scopis married Miss Athas, of Galt, who had also come to Canada from far away Greece. They have three boys and one daughter and make their home at number 5 Everett street, Mr. Scopis has been of great assistance to her husband in building up a successful business.

Mr. Scopis is an enthusiastic member of the Belleville Bowling Club and is an excellent skip. He also greatly enjoys curling and is an enthusiastic baseball and hockey fan.

Belleville, Mr. Scopis says is a fine city—a lovely place to live and he wishes that he had come here many years ago.

LEGAL ACTION

By Ralph W. Andrews

The scaffold midway between the 36th and 38th floors of the Boyle building swayed under its cornice of brick as the November gale whistled through the ropes. And Slim Hawley shivered. As he scrubbing the briny masonry as spiritedly as his stiffened joints would permit, more intently was he ching the wind suck the soap water from his brush and hurl it in foamy spurts against windows ten stories below. In another convulsion of misery he rammed the brush into a pail and warmed his bleak, red nose with a handkerchief only two shades lighter than the building bricks.

"Wotta life! Why didn't I have sense enough to stay in that sunny clime of Memphis? This ain't a job for a white man, Oscar. That dirt is from us so hard you couldn't get it off with a blow torch. Where you goin' now?"

Complacent with a much warmer scull and body, Oscar spat disdainfully over the side of the boat. "I'm going down to see a man about a dog, if it's anything in your pay check, mister. Anyway, if you're cold, why don't you wear a sweater and overalls over that suit? You're supposed to be washin' a buildin' in Chicago—not lookin' pretty to have your picture taken"

"Go along, fat boy," groaned Slim. "This suit is all I've got. But that ain't the trouble. It's these here crow-bait shanks of mine. Mean don't stay on 'em. I work too hard—it ain't my weight (you're fat, by the same token."

"Hey," mocked Oscar, lifting his bulk over the railing and on to the fire escape. "And it ain't any wonder you're cold—standin' there eyein' me like a sick halibut. I'll be back when I get here."

Alone in the boat, Slim Hawley sighed, scrubbed and shivered alternately. Then a current of delicously warm air slipped across his face and he discovered it came from a window at the other end of the scaffold, open a few inches. Peering through a glass, he saw the room was empty, the door on the corridor being lettered in reverse, "Henry Klick, Attorney."

A lawyer, Slim mused. The books along the wall and the papers on the desk looked like it. Pretty soft to warm your dogs under a desk like that and not have to listen to a booby, bulldozing bird like Oscar Boom all day long. Just imagine how swell it would be to watch a couple of building managers from the inside!

Slim raised the window a little more and then hesitated. Take a chance, Slim—take a chance, some voluptuous spirit urged him. The lawyer is gone and if he does show up, you can pretend to be washing the inside of the window. It's warm in there and Oscar—he may be gone half an hour.

The window went up and bucket in hand, Slim went in, closing the window once more. Maybe the lawyer was just downstairs for lunch or he thought, hopefully, if he ever had an office like this he would stay in it. Fifteen hours a day and have his meals brought up. Settling around in the chair, he flexed his shoulders luxuriously and lapsed into a daze. Why, he thought, what he would do if he ever became a lawyer.

The daydream was rudely jerked away by footsteps halting in the corridor outside. Slim started up, but had no time to dash for the window and the water bucket. The door was opening.

"Mr. Klick?"

Slim gulped. Ready, with an all-set to offer Mr. Klick, he now found that the footsteps were supposed to be Mr. Klick. The questioner was swarthy and over-fed, furtive and blood shot eyes buried in cushions of fat. Mr. Klick was sitting in the chair by the desk.

"Klick—I've got myself in a jam. My own mouthpiece is in California—that's why I'm coming to you. You beat Kelly out of quite a rap last summer, so I know you're a right guy, Klick."

Slim blinked again. When would the real Mr. Klick or Oscar be back? And how was he going to get out of this funny tangle?..... The swarthy man rising an elbow across the desk and rumbled on.

"My name's French. Jake French and to everybody but you, I'm a real estate broker. Got an office right in this building, as a matter of fact. You know about this Elliot Malloy getting plugged last night? Well, that's my fault. I was up at his hunting lodge with him last night—just the pair of us. We had some drinks and I made him an offer for his diamond ring. He laughed at me and we was scuffling around when I grabbed my gat and the damned thing went boom. Killed him. I beat it and when I got back to town I discovered I had the ring. Now you've got to take and sell the ring and I don't dare ride the thing and I won't throw it away—that sparkler's worth three grand if it's worth a solitary dime."

A check book was slapped out on the desk and Slim's alert clerk's hands were fumbling at his vest pocket to produce a gleaming diamond in a massive mounting. "Sooner or later the dicks are going to find out I was up there at Malloy's shack and start beating up bums and office. I can stand a little skirmish with the dicks but nobody can laugh off the grand jury's hot in that ring. You've got to take it and if—they pick me up, defend me. You don't look like muco of a lawyer, but you did a good job for Kelly and I'll pay you. There's a thousand bucks to get you started. Talk up!"

Slim Hawley was thinking—still thinking, about Klick and Oscar and French. He was scribbling a garble-faced in a cold sweat and instead of resigning to his caller's entreaty to talk he was choked to a stuck silence. He swallowed hard. And Jake French decking his face with a mixture of the loquacious variety but seeing him merely nod his head as he swallowed the liquor and shoved the check back into his pocket and slipped out the door with an understanding wave of his hand.

Slim wallet only long enough to tear the check to bits under ecstatic eyes and to pocket the diamond ring Snatching up the other pail he was over the sill and scrubbing furiously when Oscar swaggered out on the fire escape and climbed into the boat. Hands on hips, he surveyed the specimen of industry at his feet.

"Hey—are you nuts or something. Didn't you hear the noon whistle?"

"(Whistle!" Slim looked up out of empty eyes. "Did the whistle blow?"

"Did the whistle blow, he asks me. Your ears must 'a' got frozen. I been waitin' ten minutes for you down in the alley. Come on—we'll drop her a notch and then food."

Slim, following Oscar's steps at the scaffold went down. With the Lizzie secured, Slim gamely vouched Oscar on the arm.

"Say—suppose a guy comes up to you and gives you a ring, a ring. He says I've been assaulted and the ring would give him away if he hung on to it. What are you goin' to do? He's a customer you'll still you don't like to help him. Would you give the ring to the cops. It's worth money, too. Would you pawn it o. sell it, or what?"

"Hell," scoffed Oscar. "You must've gone bugs with the cold. What would I do? I'd drop that ring in the nearest manhole. Anything like that is too hot to handle. They find you said it and you're in the clear. Don't be so damned selfish. All right, get movin'."

Slim lifted that window then and go down the elevators.

Abstractedly, Slim raised the window a little more and Oscar pushed ahead of him to drop into the room was temporarily deserted and Oscar strode across it to the corridor door. Slim, however, delayed. As he rounded a desk, he took open the top drawer and tossed the ring into it. As he caught up to Oscar, his face wore a beatific smile.

"You're dead right, big boy," he said with a relieved sigh. "It don't pay to get mixed up in murder cases. A lawyer could take some regular action about it but me—I'm through. If a guy ever did give me a ring like that, I'd get rid of it plenty quick."

"Sez tell 'em," Oscar jerked his head in a nod. "Say—we never got the number of their blasted office. We got to have it so we can get the key from the janitor when we go back."

With the word, Oscar doubled back to the door in question and caught up to Slim again. At the entrance to the two-jointed thick-soled individuals merged from a car and proceeded automatically down the corridor.

"Hindquarters Jones," explained Oscar. "One of 'em is Grady—I know him. Say—look, they're going in 2311, French Realty Company. That's the same room we came through. Well I guess you've got your alibi and what you starin' so glassy-eyed at me for?"

BETHANY W. M. S.

The Bethany W.M.S. held their August meeting at the home of Mrs. W. Clark on Wednesday August 17th. The first part of the meeting was spent in quilting a quilt for the allocation. The quilt to be sent to Napanee. Then followed the regular meeting. The opening hymn 188 "Oh word of God incarnate", was sung followed by prayer by the President, Mrs. W. Yateman. The scripture lesson from John, chapter 1, verses 1-13 was read.

The Secretary's and Treasurer's reports were read and approved. Hymn 816 "Faith Triumphant by Thee" was sung and Mrs. Clark led the interesting talk on the Study Book. A solo by Mrs. A. Miller was much enjoyed. An instrumental number was given by Miss Reta Clark. After singing Hymn 405 "He leadeth me oh blessed thought" the meeting closed by all repeating the Lord's Prayer.

The collection was $2.25.

Mrs. W. Clark served lemonade and cake and a social half hour was enjoyed.

MADMAN'S TALK IS HEADLINES

National Policy of Japan is Outlined by Minister

Nanking China, Aug. 26—Nanking officialdom today regarded Japan's outline of her foreign policy as reflecting the fact that hostile world opinion will be marshalled against her as a result of her manchurian policy.

Japan's foreign Minister, Baron Yasyus Uchida, outlined the nation's policy in Manchuria before the House of Peers in Tokyo yesterday.

When the League assembly meets next month, Chinese officials believe, it will consider not only China's protest but the insistence of interested powers that Japan "not be allowed to scrap League of Nations resolutions."

The Uchida speech received great prominence in the Chinese Press under such indignant headlines as "Madman's talk" or "Proving absurdities."

MINOR DAMAGE ONLY

Toronto, Aug. 26—Fire broke out today in a workshop adjoining the Royal Canadian Yacht Club quarters on Centre Island but quick responses by a fire tug from Chippewa Island prevented the flames from spreading. Minor damage was done to the workshop.

What crowd of friends you will meet at the fair!

City folk will see what progress agriculture is making when they look over the exhibits of the rural exhibitors.

The exhibition is an indicator of the interest of the people in exhibiting and in seeing.

Speed trials as of yore will fill no small place in the 1932 exhibition. The ponies are just as popular as ever.

Have you taken a peep into the buildings and around the grounds of the fair?
If you haven't you may not know how well things are looking up for the greater fair which is now ready to open.

Loyalty to your fair means your deeper interest in the community.

Plan to see the sun's eclipse from the spacious grounds of the exhibition park on Wednesday afternoon, August 31st. It will be the sight of a lifetime, at the fair.

WOULD PRESERVE QUARRY BOULDER

That the granite boulder which has been found in the city quarry on Coleman's Flats ought to be preserved was the opinion expressed today by a citizen who feels that this relic of prehistoric ages should be taken to one of the city parks and there set up. On account of the geological importance of the find, he felt that the city should have the stone transported to a public place. The cost he figured would not be very great, for though the stone is heavy it would be easy to move.

If the stone has value and he believes that it has, as said before, geological value in telling a story of an event which transpired aeons of time ago before the earth took its present shape, it would be a pity if it were destroyed.

THE BULLETS OF THE GUILTY

Discovery of the weapon that inflicted a certain wound or caused death is of extreme importance.

The criminal has employed a firearm, and the bullet is found. Technical methods now facilitate the tracing of both.

Characteristic marks on a bullet or projectile are no less evidential than finger-prints, says Alain de Caters in the Miroir du Monde (Paris). We read:

"The size, the diameter, and the weight of the ball furnish elementary indications that serve to eliminate the wrong guns and pistols under suspicion.

"Individual and special details traced upon the ball, the markings left upon it by tiny protuberances, mingle with the possible exact conclusions as to a source.

"The barrels of two different guns or pistols may be exactly alike, even if of the same caliber. As far back as when they leave the factory they present differentia-tions in their grooves, their markings, their minute channels, their erosions, however slight, in the very folds of their metal.

"With time these differentiations grow more marked. Unusual friction causes unequal strains and differentiated lines (or traces) due to varied powders and modified cartridges. Rust stains and other eccentricities are inevitable. The projectile is sure to bear witness to such differentiations in an actual gridironing of its exterior.

"Inspection of such markings is a delicate matter, requiring special devices and a trained capacity to read their results. One such device, used in Berlin, is a long thing tube, that fits into the chamber of a firearm.

"An optical effect is first attained by means of a mirror that floods the interior of the chamber with light. An eyepiece at the end of the tube enables the operator to estimate the condition of the metal under inspection.

"When the proper moment arrives, he adjusts a photographic apparatus. The resultant negatives are enlarged and afford exact information regarding the minutiae of the inside of the gun or barrel. These are comared with the markings on the projectile."

WHERE HAPPINESS DWELLS
By Aline Michaelis

Nobody knows where happiness waits,
Around what meadows, within what gates.
Sometimes for an hour it walks by one's side,
Then veers like the wind or turns like the tide.
When I was a child it was everywhere,
It danced in the sunlight, it sang in the air,
It pulsed through the notes of my mother's song
And the arms of my father, straight and strong.

Nobody knows where happiness dwells
Or how to coerce it by charms or spells.
It can fly like a lark; it can bud like a rose;
But the secret of happiness nobody knows.
This much is true: it will not depart
From the way of a tender and loving heart;
It can veer like the wind, it can turn like
tide,
But in souls that have faith it will still abide.

there are three million horses still in harness in Canada seems odd at first sight in these days of motor magic.

WHAT ARE THE INTESTINES? EXPERTS SHOW

Functions Defined by Dr. Louis E. Bisch, Health Authority

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.,
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

The abdomen holds the intestines, while the stomach is placed well up under the ribs on the left side under the diaphragm, which walls off the chest, and under the heart. Many people refer to the abdominal cavity as the stomach, but that is not correct. After food is digested it enters the stomach, then the stomach, then the small intestine, then into the large intestine, then the lower end of this, and from the lower end of this, any part of the food that has been absorbed is eliminated from the body as wastage.

The small intestine is about twenty feet long and lies in coils in the abdomen. There is more or less holding the coils in place in a fatty covering known as the omentum, which also serves to keep the intestines warm. The width of the small intestine is about two inches where it joins the stomach. It gradually diminishes in size until it is about one inch in diameter as it runs into and joins the large intestine.

The small intestine is divided, for purpose of convenience and study, into three sections. The first is called the duodenum, the second the jejunum, and the third the ileum.

The duodenum is about eight inches in length as it runs across the abdomen, then it makes a complete bend. It is a favorite site for the development of ulcers. The second division, the jejunum, runs on for about seven and a half feet. Then comes the ileum, and this is the most important part of the whole.

There are four coats or layers in the small intestine. On the outside is a serous layer, then there is a muscular coat, then comes a submucous one and finally, on the inside of the intestinal tube, a mucous layer.

From this innermost or mucous layer there extend into the intestinal tube tiny, finger like projections called "villi". These increase the surface area by a great deal over on the inside, and hence increase the absorption power of the intestines.

The small intestine is not only an absorbing organ but a distinctly digestive one as well. In other words, it is largely in the small intestine that food is chemically emulsified and prepared for assimilation by the lymph and blood streams for distribution throughout the body.

There are many so called "intestinal glands" are to be found in the walls of the intestinal tract. Each having a certain powerful influences in changing complicated foods into simpler forms.

After the small intestines comes the large intestine, along which we five feet long. Its width is from two and a half to one and a half inches.

This small intestine is also divided into three parts. These are the caecum, the colon and the rectum. The caecum is a pouch-like extension of the large intestine proper. The small intestine opens into it at the side, as it were, about two and a half inches from the end. This peculiar anatomical arrangement makes a kind of valve at the lower end of the caecum in this blind sac, is the opening of the appendix.

The appendix ordinarily is about the thickness of a lead pencil, but length varies in different people, but the average is about two inches.

The colon extends upwards on the right side, then straight across and then down on the left side. Its function is essentially intestinal.

NEGOTIATIONS BREAK DOWN

General Strike May Follow Failure to Agree on Wage Cut

Manchester, Eng. August 27. — Negotiations between cotton-mill owners and operatives broke down late yesterday, threatening to precipitate a general strike in the industry throughout the Lancashire district, where hundreds thousand weavers, the first group to be affected, are scheduled to go out on a strike today, to be followed later by at least as many other workers. The unions have refused to accept wage-cuts insisted on by the owners, who served notice that beginning December they intended to terminate an agreement on wages and hours under which the industry had been operating for nearly a decade. The belief is that nothing short of intervention by the government could forestall the strike.

TOURISTS USE AIRWAYS FOR LONG TRIPS

Radical Changes Since Primitive Planes of 1920

BRISK BUSINESS

Thousands at Present Are Using Air For Travel

(By The Canadian Press)

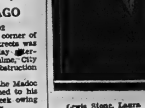
LONDON—European civil aviation experiencing its greatest "boom" since the first air-liner flew between London and Paris in 1919. Almost daily fresh records in numbers of passengers and weight of mails carried. Services are set at the chief airports. Services on the more important routes are duplicated, triplicated, even quadruplicated. Prices are reduced. Speed with the air transport planes move in and out of the terminal airports is amazing. Punctuality and punctuality of the most efficient railway service.

More holiday makers are travelling by plane in the present year than ever. Swiftly at last, after long years of concentration by the leading aeronautical engineers, the policy of safety with regularity, the principle which is realizing that in the flying machine he has a new means of speed, has come. Safety and high in speed, absence of trouble, in comfort even, equal. The result is evident in the traffic returns. Imperial Airways company carried more than 1,300 passengers a week on its continental services during the month of July, and over the recent holiday week-end the figure was greatly surpassed. On one day more than 200 travelled between London and Paris in British air liners; altogether they carried in the week-end rush nearly as many as the record number for the whole year—1924, while the London-Basle route also established a record.

Not only are the Switzerland service meets an urgent need is evidenced by the large total of passengers from 440 in June to 715 in July. On the entire journey from the English capital to Basle occupies 5 hours; passengers change over the London airport at 8.30 a.m. and land in Switzerland at 2 p.m.

A journey nowadays along any of the British air routes to the continent provides much reason for thought and comparison to those travellers who made their first flights on the regular air services 10 or more years ago. Then the aeroplanes employed were in the main converted war machines. They were noisy, if multi-engined they were slow, and the possibility of improving the cabin accommodation was glaringly obvious. Systems of flight control and of weather information were rudimentary. Experience and long experimenting for taking off and flying or the landing in fog, that knowledge so frequently necessary in our days of low cloud and mist are common. Inevitably, the public, suffering from the absence of essential organisation and of really efficient air transport services, for some years he who flew might reasonably adopt the manner of one who took his life in his hands and ventured.

Today all that is changed. Travellers are carried swiftly in large modern aeroplanes. Over a new European network of air routes the aeroplanes of the European companies fly, and two passport offices to the farmac Agency which is the headquarters of the platform at a railway station. Various stations on the air routes are fulled — If they are "travelling Britain" — into a huge four-engined biplane which has two luxurious saloon cabins inside the passengers sit. Shortly the ground the signal to start is given, the four engines begin to throw their song of power, and a few seconds later the giant metal bird is gaining height and speed with the ease of aerodrome on the way to Paris.



Inside the cabins conversation is easy, because location of the passengers' seats prevents them from and away from the plane of rotation of the propellers which are behind the cabin. There is little movement, even in rough weather; the machine rides through pockets of air disturbances sufficient to incommode the occupants of smaller craft. And the journey is quickly over; frequently it is less than 225 miles away.

The London air lines to the ends of the earth are also participating in the "boom." The newly opened route to Cape Town is proving its worth, not only to the mail and to the staff of the states and territories that lie along the 5,500 miles separating Cairo from the Cape. Central Africa, four weeks' journey from the coast by boat, train or motor-car caravan, is now within seven days' journey from London by air line. And the provision of swift transport to this paradise of the big game hunter and of the big organization of many little expeditions.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and ma said a package came this afternoon, willyum, and I look it for ghosted that it was for me although it had your name on it, so I opened it and low and behold what was in it but a manie fancy vest all the colors of 5 rainbows.

O, yes, a pritty thing, isn't it, just chock my fancy in a window downtown so I had it sent home, pop said, and ma said, Pop willyum you haven't worn a fancy vest for years, you've always declared that only gamblers wear fancy vests, and my landee this is the first of all the fancy vests I ever saw on land or sea. I can't possibly imagine what making personel appearance in it except perhaps at a fancy dress ball, or perhaps I should say a fancy vest ball. See hee.

Well, I don't know what to worry about, I'll probebly never wear it, things pop said, I was just a whim of mine to have it sent home, and it's an expensive and pastime to indulge yourself in your whims. I had a mendil picture of myself cutting quite a dashing figure with that vest and even having the finger of envy pointed at me, but I fear it would only be the finger of derition. As you say, the coy colors they forget to put in were white and black, and I believe it has a black and white striped lining at that. O well, I had the fun of having it removed from the shop window by a beautiful and acsuming salesgerl, and that's something he said.

Still, there's no use of utterly throwing in the mail. As long as you're quite decidrd not to wear it, it will be sewtible for my little tailored outfit. Colorful vests are all the rage just now, and by removing the 5 rip cords lines and cutting the neck lower I'm sure it will be quite stunning. In fact I've tried it on already, she said.

Well I'll be blithered to blazes, pop said, and ma said, Why, what's a matter? and he said, Nothing, cept I be blithered to blazes in my own house if I feel like it!

And he got in back of the sporting page.

The port of Saint John owes much of its early development to the wooden ship building industry of 1871-75 it was the port of registry for some 900 ships making it the fifth largest shipping port in the world in those days.

ADVERTISING for the MERCHANT TO-DAY

Conducted by HAROLD B. EDGAR

A series of weekly articles on advertising and sales promotion, designed for the merchants of Belleville and the readers of The Ontario Intelligencer.

ARTICLE NO. 24

DISPLAY AIDS

I have been much interested during the past few weeks by the methods some merchants are using to bring about increased sales. Bringing some new feature into the store, displaying the product in a new way, or product a prominent showing — new fixtures to show off staple products open up channels for sales.

To the end that some of these may help you I give descriptions of some new fixtures which are easy to make and are effective.

To display greeting cards or postcards, a stand using a series of set back steps as shown in Figure 1 can be made to go on top of your counter or on a stand of its own. It is built of galvanized iron bent in a series of steps with a two inch tread and a four and a half inch riser. Length depends on the space available. A wooden framework holds it rigid and finishes off the ends. The whole is enameled white. This type of stand can be adapted to using a very elaborate method of display aid. A small specialty store is using a very elaborate method of this plan and covering the entire side of the store. Special illumination is provided by concealed lighting under a shelf above the stand. A florist uses a much smaller unit for the display of his postcard stock and he sent with the flowers.

Figure 2 shows the same idea used for the display of books or albums. It is built of screen and is provided with a slot on top to hold a display card. It occupies very little space on a counter or on a window and provides a lot of display space.

Regular plumbers pipe can be used effectively in building display stands. A hardware store has built a very effective stand to hold samples of ash trays. It is shown in figure 3. The cross bars of half inch rods on the ends of the stand. It stands on one end of the counter.

Display racks for cards or other forms of sales promotion material is sketched in figure 4. Plug the bottom of the pipe and screw it to the floor. Slip on the arc headed. It stands on one end of the counter.

A few properly built stands to display these items will more than pay for themselves in the time saved by not having to bring out several boxes or bundles to show your customers your different styles.

Paints all your display stands, including those built of pipe. Neat appearing stands will aid in making sales, as they will help to show off the goods displayed.

Look over your stock. There are many items which given a better display will produce many additional sales.

NEXT WEEK—FURTHER AIDS IN DISPLAY

Mr. Edgar will be glad to answer questions in this column, if readers will send their communications in care of this paper. Confidential replies can be arranged through the editor.—(Copyright).

Kingston Ponies are Champs For Second Year in Succession Taking Nats. in Final Game 18-2

Jamieson Came Back But Pointer Couldn't Make Grade

HIT BALL HARD

Ponies Worthy Representatives of Eastern Ontario

With both seats on edge the break had to come and that break came when Kingston Ponies broke loose, when they won the 1932 championship of the O.B.A.A. by defeating the Belleville Nationals by the score of 18 to 2 in the fifth and final game of the play-off series at Kingston on Friday afternoon.

Congratulations are due the Ponies on winning the Central loop twice in succession (and they have the good wishes and good will of all gentlemen in Eastern Ontario) especially Belleville, in their quest of their first Ontario title.

Following Thursday's battle when the youngsters' Nationals took the Ponies well into camp on their home lot, the local kids literally opened out and fell apart under the strain which was bound to tell on either team. Previous to the game Manager Cerow's choice to start on the hillies as he had stopped the slugging Ponies on the Wednesday previous. Pointer failed miserably during his three innings pitching and was solely responsible for the ultimate loss.

Weir Carries On

After publishing all of the greatest games ever seen in the Central loop the Ponies' Jack Weir was again rushed to the mound to try and stop the onslaught of his cousins from the east and the unforseated Ponies. Alec tried, but in vain. In fact the title and the game was lost before he ever reached the hillock. Jamieson walked on the air the Ponies, being front runners, got busy, pounding out safe deliveries of Weir, after Pointer had been sidetracked. Weir was powerless, but he again added to his laurels 'n' scoring the local's only two runs and also having two hits to his credit. Millis had one, hit out of three times at bat and once purposely passed. Art Scarlett was the only outstanding light, when he ran miles to catch all fly balls in his territory. His triple in the third inning put the Ponies on even terms at the time. The Nationals although they did not play up to their usual standard are not to be condemned as they are but a young team, six of them being just over junior age limit. Another year will tell a much different tale.

Joe Daly on Bench

To assure themselves of victory the Ponies pressed into service Wednesday last, minus Kingston's veteran manager, Joe Daly, who directed the plays of the Ponies in the fifth and deciding game of the series. Once again Daly was seen at the bench and after faltering badly in the previous play-off series he was right there under the guiding hand of Daly the Ponies took advantage of Pointer's weakness and defeat was the outcome for the Nationals.

Belleville scored but two runs, in the third frame they pulled up on even terms with their opponents but later scored on Scarlett's long triple to left field. They did not count again until the eighth when Weir tripped and was forced at second, Hetherington's long outfield fly to Vince.

The Ponies scored on the initial frame, two in the third inning and then put the game on ice when they added seven more around in the fourth as they scored seven runs on eight hits, three more to that count in the fifth and ended their scoring for five runs in the seventh.

Alec was the slugger of the day with two triples to his credit, Jerry Armiel and Vinny McQuade hit for the circuit for Kingston during the contest.

Kingston will meet the winners of the West Toronto Senior League in the first round of the play-offs for O.B.A.A. playdowns. The first game is scheduled to be played in Toronto Saturday while the return game will undoubtedly be played in Kingston on Wednesday next.

FRUIT GIRLS STAGE RALLY

Five Runs in Ninth Ties Playoff Game With Frontenacs

Playing the third game of the play-off series at Belleville, the Belleville Fruit Girls came from behind to score five runs in the ninth inning and tie the score but before rain and darkness interfered and the game was forced to be called by the umpires with the score even 10 to 10 at the local Fair Grounds Friday evening.

The Fruit lassies took the lead in the first inning when they scored four runs and led for sixteen innings when they forged ahead and then again in the ninth frame the Fruit lassies staged a belated rally to tie the game but as rain and darkness interfered with the finish of the pastime.

Throughout the game it was decided that the game would be played in Napanee on Monday evening when the winner of the Belleville and Napanee series will finals of the Eastern Ontario play-downs.

After a rather bad start, when the local Fruit lassies were beaten by Napanee 10 to 1 in the opener the local girls have had a reversal of form with the result that they are now on even terms with the hard hitting Frontenacs.

"Babe" Lewis, who starred for the Fruit Girls was Coach Barrett's choice as pitcher and he was equal to the occasion by pitching superb ball for the pinchers. The McGuire sisters, "Bee" and Lou, were the outstanding stars for the local girls while Finger, Bland and Lewis starred in the fielding sensations, of the day.

Marion McGuire was on the hill-top for the Kingston girls but buried a masterful game throughout. Coldigh was also a tower of strength for the visitors while Bland starred at the gorgeous field at the fair grounds. W. Frederick was also helpful herself to three hits during the nine innings played. The tie game will be played off at Napanee on Monday evening.

The lineups:

Kingston—Gallogly: North; Sinclair; Grant, Walker; Allen; W. Frederick; I. Frederick and Compeau.

Belle Fruit—Galea; Finger; Lewis; Smith; Maling; L. McGuire; Wharton; Bland; McGuire and Lewis.

JOHNNY HAS TEETH THE WAS NATIONAL HERO ON HIS GRADUATION GRIDIRON

PILOTS ANOTHER WINNER

Once again the veteran swimming coach Johnny Walker rose to the occasion when his outstanding woman swimmer, Margaret Ravior, splashed her way to glory in the Canadian National Exhibition's annual swimming event. This is the third time in which Miss Ravior has crossed the finishing line in first position To Johnnie Walker, her coach, she gives all the credit.

Knocks and Boosts

It is, Belleville has won the C. O. R. junior baseball for Belleville this year.

Even in defeat there is sometimes a little consolation. And here it is. Belleville has won the C. O. R. L. title more times than all the rest of the teams in the league, combined. They have also had the privilege of playing the provincial championship twice. They should have won it in 1922 as well, but were forced to play off with Ajax, against a very weak team, too. Maybe, remember?

About the least said in regard to the fifth and final game, of the O.B.A.A. would, perhaps, be the best. But we cannot help here, the resthful, and when we say resthful, their age undoubtedly is the statement. Nationals never backed down. Nor did they quit in the face of defeat either. There is something here, more glory than in the winning. This instant was well borne out when the equitable Yankee Kingstonians came to run an unlucky hit in the eighth inning yesterday, "with a man" Jamieson lost more admirers on that play than he will ever make the rest of his baseball career. We might add here and now, Jamieson is to be congratulated for having the best pitcher on the hurling staff of the Ponies today. He thinks he is Jamieson.

Again we must laud Alec Weir. When it comes to gameness and sportsmanship Alec Weir is the "pick of the lot and the pick of the corn" Too much credit cannot be given the lanky southpaw who for the past 1923 C.O.B.L. playoff series opened the season by declaring that "Alec Weir is the best all round baseball player in the Central Ontario League."

Show us any better, and he has proved it, all around baseball player in this league.

It's all over, there ain't no more. All we hope for is that the Ponies don't lose their grip on the O.B.A.A. high as both Belleville and Peterborough have in the past. They have no doubt, if they would but rid themselves of that inferior complex, which is the best players' enemies, see their own worst enemies.

The veteran Feeney Mills also distinguished himself in the fifth game. How those Kingston pitchers fear Mills. Even when they were far to the back they managed to walked him. When better ball players are in the Eastern League Feeney Mills will be on the shelf. After watching Cecil Lobegeier for 13 or 14 years we at least are not that spineless. Cecil Scarlett left field, has also played bang-up ball for the Nationals all year. This kid is a better outfielder than he is given credit for.

Like a bolt from the blue, as far as Belleville fans Gibbards are concerned the Gananoque intermediates advanced into the second round of the intermediate "B" series when they defeated the Gibbard Athletics 8 to 7 at Kingston in the third game on Friday afternoon. The game went ten innings and was ultimately won by Shine's home run in the tenth. The kid developed into a pitcher's battle between Fraser of Napanee and Dorey of Gananoque. Both pitchers shared equal honors with Dorey being credited with the win. He allowed but seven hits while Fraser would like to say right here and now that the game was more lost by Napanee than Gananoque. The Gibbard outfielders lost the game on their pinies. Gananoque club now meet the Jockvale Wanderers in the play-downs of the intermediate O.B.A.A. playdowns. The Vics will be called upon to face the Intermediate Hotspurs left hander in Eastern Ontario in this by Dorey. Let then again the Vics have three good hurlers in Dorey, Campbell and Hatley. When and where they play we could not find out.

"Rish" Barrett's Belleville Fruit lassies staged a swell rally to pull up even with Rockaway Gananoque Frontenac girls at the Fair Grounds Friday evening. The game was pulled out of the fire in the dying moments when the local lassies bagged five runs in the final frame to tie the game. The Belleville Fruit were then scheduled to replay the tie game in Napanee on Monday. Frank Dennison is going to take the matter up with the Eastern Ontario Softball Association. Just why the game was ordered to be played in Napanee is more than we can understand when the two teams tossed a coin, after the eighth inning was in, to decide to see where the third-and deciding game would be played. Belleville won the toss and as Friday night's game was on a tie, it all, the teams should naturally replay the game in Belleville, as Coach Barrett, Belleville won the toss for that privilege. Manager Frank Dennison was the victory distance telephone many times Saturday to see that every authentic has been handed down to the matter as yet.

"The gentlemen team", that is the new monicker recently tacked on the Kingston Frolics. They surely are fewer starters if any club ever was. When they're behind they wage everything to finish even counters on the bench. In the face of defeat the Kingston manager went turned to Joe Daly to put them out of the hole. Joe was the pinch hitter and he did connect on Friday, When the childish Frolics started to pull their usual soft drink act, Joe hopped all over them and told them, in no uncertain words, just what his opinion of them was. For the sake of the Ponies we hope they can get far enough ahead to keep the wily Joe on their board of strategy.

Miss England III Being Tuned by Four Mechanics

(By The Canadian Press)

WALKERVILLE, Ont.—England III, fastest boat that ever touched Detroit river, is being groomed for another coming attempt to capture the Harmsworth trophy at Detroit. She is guarded, cared for and petted by four mechanics.

Roaring across the waters of Loch Lomond, Scotland, on July 18, Kaye Don piloted the English craft at an average speed of 119.3 miles an hour to win the British title for the second set. That brought back the water speed crown to Great Britain after it had been held for a year or more by the American veteran, Commodore Gar Wood. British authorities now holds the three world's speed records, Miss England II's 129.95 mile.

Miss England III is fitted with two 1,000 horsepower Rolls-Royce racing aero engines, of the kind developed for last year's Schneider trophy contest. Both engines Kaye Don and his team of experts had "hopped up" with supercharges, all sorts of annoying "teething" troubles, trying out various combinations of propellers, perfecting the cooling system for the motors, and coping with the problem of weight distribution of the weight along the hull. Kaye Don's speed was raised to record to 117.43 m.p.h.

Behind the engines these figures Don changed the fuel in the tanks for the flying mile and the 5-mile runs, employed by Flight Lieutenant O. H. Stainforth when he set the air record of 407.5 miles an hour over the course.

In this way he got another 10 miles an hour speed than the record was again broken in succession runs. Don knows that the formidable driver was out again; in the teeth of the wind he made one run at 120 miles an hour, but when he was travelling in the same direction he was approaching 125 the fuel supply gave out.

Don is the only driver to survive the thrill of high-speed motor-boating—the dazzling, creamy spray, the pain of the wind, the roar of the engines behind the craft, and the terrific vibration of the hull as it seems to ripple on the surface—will compel unconsciousness. Don has been seen moving on the water at these speeds without a helmet, driver. Even at 50 knots the water seems as hard as concrete, every ripple like a stone wall. Don's record is not the fast boat; at more than double that velocity he can detect a slight change in the speed runs Don and his mechanic investigate the engines, adjusts every minute, and one particularly bad shaking caused slight damage to the driver's back.

Commodore Wood, with his new boat, will find Kaye Don better equipped than ever, when the final test at Detroit decides the next resting place of the Harmsworth Trophy. Miss England III is a seasoned craft and is expected to roll over and dive to the bottom as she did when she won the British Silver last year. Don is confident that he will be thundering over the finish line — first.

M. RAVIOR IS DOWN IN FRONT FOR 3RD TIME

Followed Closely by Evelyn Armstrong And May Looney

WALKER DELIGHTED

Has Four of His 'String' in The First Six Places

Toronto, Aug. 27—Margaret Ravior, queen of the marshmoors, yesterday swam her way once more into a championship and the highest honors of her swimming career.

Never headed from the start, striking a steady crawl which left her closest competitor steadily further behind the big Philadelphia girl won her third consecutive Canadian National Exhibition 10-mile swim to prove herself the outstanding women swimmer of the world. She earned $3,000 for her efforts.

It was the finest swim of her life. It was a longer swim than the previous 10-mile contests by several hundred yards. She also made the route in about six minutes more time than her last year and, better, finished with the program, planned for her by Coach Johnny Walker.

Behind her two other Walker pupils were also bringing further honors to themselves. Evelyn Armstrong of Detroit, who finished third at Detroit with the fans took second place She led her teammate, Looney, by two minutes. They win respectively $1,500 and $1,000. It was a banner day for the proteges of the veteran Johnny Walker.

In fourth place came Dorothy Malevalko, called "ain almost an unknown before she entered the water. She was well outdistanced by Miss Looney, but was a fine fifth and sixth swimmers pressed Dorothy Dowding, Toronto Corson ahu Ruth Downing, both of Toronto. They win respectively $500, $300 and $100 respectively.

Only Dorothy Malevalko had ever been a previous marathon prize-winner. Ruth Downing had won the 1930 event. Miss Malevalko was in her fourth marathon and finished in third prize winning. Ruth Tower has been the most consistent previous winner, having taken 1929, 1931 and placed 4th in 1930 and 1930. Last year she had trouble.

Twenty-nine swimmers dived together when Premier Hepburn fired the starting gun at 1.30 just as the smoke cleared away. Within a few minutes and falsely suggested a good weather ahead. From the moment they hit the water they struck and headed towards the lake ahead of them, Miss Ravior leading in front. Last year she had done the same. Johnny Walker was also in front of the pack, his star swimmer in a launch close behind the leader in that manner he had done with Ruth Tower-Corsan.

Right on May Looney's heels were trying to catch Ruth Towersame Leah Riley, the girl who earned the nickname "Queen of the Swim" when she first started to swim and who is Walker's youngster. She was swimming smoothly and powerfully. Dorothy Malevalko, She, in turn, was leading Ruth Downing by a few strokes both of Toronto.

Miss Ravior's youth is the relentlessly powerful, the determined type of her long arms, she led the way. She was not threatened by any one and apparently she was leading the way to her third championship.

BYRD'S BAROQUE NOW A MUSEUM

Skipper of Craft Finds Time Heavy On His Hands

(By The Canadian Press)

CHICAGO.—The life of guides of sightseers hangs heavy on Captain Harry Adams and his crew who are still in charge of the "City of New York," though the barge where Admiral Richard E. Byrd to the Antarctic is now tied up at the fair grounds, a baby museum. Instead of seeking new adventures, Adams and his boys daily escort long lines of sightseers who all say they've had all the thrill of exploring the vessel whose own exploring days are ended.

And the crew wait patiently for another expedition to get away. With Adams are four men who went to the bottom of the world with Byrd. Adams was first mate on the polar expedition, Jack Burgess is a dynamo driver from Newfoundland, Lloyd Crowley of Washington was radio engineer on the "Eleanor Bolling." Byrd's second ship; Arthur Smith of Chicago was a fireman on the southern quest and John Boye of Holyoke was a fireman on the Eleanor Bolling.

85TH BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED BY ALL

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON.—Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Grand Old Man of Music," celebrated his 85th birthday today. Sir Alexander Mackenzie is one of the few men who can look back to intimate acquaintance with Liszt, whom he first met in Germany. He was born in Edinburgh, and educated at Dresden, shaanen, Germany, and the Royal Academy of Music, London. He is a member of the Royal Swedish Academy, and has had honors conferred on him by other European musical institutions. Sir Alexander is a violinist and teacher of music and a conductor of European fame, besides being a celebrated composer. For many years he was principal of the Royal Academy of Music.

He was a mere lad when he met the famous composer Liszt, while playing second violin in the Ducal Orchestra at Sondershausen, where the great composer used to bring his new works from Weimar for trial performances. Liszt took a personal interest in the young and promising fiddler. A friendship grew up between them which lasted until Liszt's death.

Sir Alexander was knighted by Queen Victoria in 1895, and in 1902 received the Knight Commandership of the Royal Victorian Order.

He is famous for his wit. Once when he was rehearsing an opera and a singer complained about one of time and rhythm he pleaded quietly, "Please do remember that you are singing to an orchestra, not an elastic band."

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Ringing in Changes on Make-up

Lipstick stock has slumped; eye shadows are having a beauty boom. Those tawny-and sugar sister who go in for hand painted complexions have found a new fetish for their art. They are concentrating on eyelids to an extent that could never have been guessed a few years ago. Lipstick vexers of vivid red may be bewildered, but eye shadows are achieved by sprae of the modernists are nothing less than wildly scenic.

Within the last six months the feminine face as displayed by those who head the beauty parade has undergone a change. Bald forehead have taken on flusterings bangs and beau catchers. Hats have expanded any sense of them are whopping, upon which the decorative element shows up to a surprising degree. Hair has dissolved to chiffon and ruffles, essentially feminine. So the feminine face makes the most of itself, assuming a soft, velvety surface, cheeks tinted lightly, just done as nature would have them, eye shadow heavily with a glistening coating of brown, blue, green or blue-green pigment.

Maybe you like the effect, maybe you don't. It is masky. It is sophisticated. Youth and beauty can get away with it. Only a certain type of youth and beauty at that.

Fancy not, gentle Geraldine, that lacquered eyelids are worn only in the evening. They walk out of the house right after breakfast, without a sign of embarrassment or shame. But that's what, we all shuddered over when the lipstick 56 Hesit talked about. And look at it now.

Eye shadow addicts, for the comfort of the public eye, should be made to take examination in cosmetic art. No hurry-up smear willsymicate, Inc.!

Does Color Affect Children?

The eight-year-old girl wept bright red dress, but I suspect I'd bitterly as she beheld herself in a be a behave terribly, too.

mirror in the yellow dress. "I'm sorry dear," mother said soothingly, "but the bride has chosen that the flower girl wear yellow."

"But, I hate it!" exploded the child. "I don't feel good in this yellow dress."

When we had left, the friend with me faced me, eyes flashing. Any one whose self apologize to a child because of the color of a dress is an idiot!" she protested.

But why class the mother as hay-ing small brain developments just because she realizes that color is a challenge, an allure, or as other times a banner of protection?

Some time when your youngster is invited, ask her if she'd like all the nice bath and the choice of fresh clothing then watch the expression she chooses. Nine times out of ten it will be totally different than the color she is wearing.

Red does that to me. Something in about it arouses my fearfully. I have no idea how I should behave in a tin.

Color DOES affect one's behavior. Each color has a marked effect upon his feelings.

COLORS DO MATTER

I don't mean blatant colors—one that kills all other colors within range—but colors that attract people. It arouses, and demands, in return sparkling repartee. I've only felt "up" in a yellow dress. I've seen men. There are times when I enjoy the challenge it creates. At other times I should be acutely miserable under its influence.

These other times I resort to black, something my friends have seen many times, something in which lies no allure or attraction. In it I can wash the fun and noise one notices me at all, and at times that is just what I prefer.

Children react to color just as we older people do, and I, for one feel that it is not only interesting, but fair, to let them choose the color they are going to "feel good" in.

Your Job and Mine—The Home

The man had been talking of conditions, politics and "What's wrong with the world?" He was rather indeed. "What can be, as individuals, do about it?" he ended with a shrug. "Just nothing!"

But I don't quite agree with him. There's a heap of work to be done, and I've learned from experience that when I'm faced with stacks of things I must get on the joint that, viewing the job as a whole, I get panicky — I DO THE THING THAT'S ON TOP OF THE PILE FIRST, then the next and the next and soon I've knocked off a lot of the jobs.

Home was the first of all social units. From it grew the clan, the village, and so on up to great governments.

Looking for meanings it sort of seems to me that we've had the pins knocked from under us as a nation possibly for the purpose of going back to scratch and repairing the keystone—the HOME.

That's the job in hand. We must rebuild, just as France and Belgium did after she war, and we who still do. This is fine work, girls. Something to be thought out.

Every man has a right to his own home, that is, if he works for it. Begin at the inner corner of the eyelid. This pigment must not extend onto the lid proper. A bit climb at the outer corner of the eye the shadow can fade gradually. Or, as outline can be drawn by dipping an orange wood stick into the creamy shadow, the application gone on until it looks as if it, blends in with it. This line remains along the summit of the bone on which the eyebrow rests, takes a downward curve, turns inward to meet the lashes of the under lid, a neat job, effective for the girl who has make-up concern, but doesn't mind how many people look at her.

The foundation cosmetic or powder base is being added to many a cosmetic kit. With make-up a bit intricate, time consuming, a girl can't gain herself a new face in a dosin times a day. The morning portrait has to last until dinner time when the facial palette is thoroughly cleared of cosmetic pigment, the new face made.

Eye shadows don't like soap and water but they give way before a cleansing cream. The best way of this cleaning when make-up is pretty generously thrown over the premises is to use a cleansing cream first, then get the old soap suds working. A tepid rinse is followed by a cold one. A bit of cream is used again to take away the starchy feeling. If a foundation cosmetic be employed, the cold cream must be removed with tissues. A lot of work, but fancy on how proud the deities look!

"An Idyl of Old Age"

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

Old age is usually associated with inactivity — especially when one, whose career has been filled with work and accomplishment, is retired to one of life's shelves.

It was so with Old Charlie Morgan. Charlie was forced out of business at the age of 70. A depression victim. He retired so to speak.

"I can't retire," he complained to his sons, Robert and Donald. "I haven't any money, I'm broke, flat broke. How in the world can I get along?"

"That's for us to worry about," Robert told him, and Donald supplemented the statement with: "Good heavens, dad, we'll take care of you. Don't for one minute think you can begin all over again now. It's about time you took things easy and let us carry the load for awhile."

This was all very well as far as it went. Old Charlie took things easy for awhile and seemed contented. He puttered around the place and spent long hours chinning with old cronies of a day when the firm of Chas. Morgan & Co. was an active and thriving industry.

The boys, Robert and Donald, saw to it that the old gentleman had everything he wanted in the way of necessities, and they provided him with pocket money—whenever they thought of it. But sometimes that matter of money slipped their minds, and then Old Charlie, too proud to ask, went without his tobacco.

Both Robert and Donald were in business for themselves and were having a hard time making both things meet. They felt sure that they could for the old man, and he appreciated it, but the feeling of independence was lacking. He was dependent and he thought made him miserable.

When meals were in, and there was no longer any "puttering" to be done about the place, Old Charlie was forced to spend a good deal of time indoors. Hence he found more time to brood over his unhappy predicament and allow his thoughts to dwell upon the days gone by.

The result wasn't very satisfying. He grew morose and began to feel himself a burden. He very soon unimportant—a burden to Robert and Donald.

Then Donald's business took him to the coast and Robert and the old man were left alone in the house. Shortly after this Robert announced his intentions of getting married.

"It won't make any difference with you", he told Old Charlie. "Both Marie and I want you to live on here with us. We'll have a great time together, the three of us."

Old Charlie smiled, and felt more miserable than ever. Robert's decision to get married had a double effect on him. First he was afraid that Robert didn't feel obliged to postpone his marriage because of the old man. This, in a way, was satisfying because it made Old Charlie feel that he wasn't so much of a burden.

But on the other hand, the elder Morgan was pretty well informed as to young Robert's financial standing. He knew that the youth would have hard sledding for awhile, supporting a wife and a father. And this only added to the old man's misery.

More and more, old Charlie came to realize that he was in the way. He had failed in business and now he had to lean himself down on his son. It wasn't fair. It wasn't fair to Robert.

If Old Charlie hadn't led such an active life he probably would never have thought of these things. If the habit of achievement and accomplishment hadn't so impressed embedded in his system, he would never have made the ultimate decision.

Robert, whose mind was totally occupied with plans for the forthcoming wedding and business matters, failed to notice the change in his father, failed to perceive the unhappiness that had come to the old man. Youth can never completely fathom old age, and old age can never fully appreciate the hopefulness of a future that seems black and empty.

"I've decided," Old Charlie was saying, "to go to Uncle Richard's, let you and Marie live here alone. I'm all right as I am, and I'll be in the way. I can go up to the old folks' home and spend the rest of my days."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," his son declared hotly. "You'll stay right here and look after Marie while I'm away at work. You'll live right in this house till the end of your days, and that's the end of the argument."

Old Charlie laughed a little bitterly, and his voice had a catch in it. "That sounds just a little like mockery," he said. "Stay here, I'll work? Why, Robert I haven't accomplished anything."

Robert's eyes were suddenly filled with pity and shame. It came to him abruptly—how during the past few weeks he had neglected the old man, failed to pay him the little attentions that old age requires.

"Haven't accomplished anything" he hurried. "Why dad, what are you talking about? What is it you haven't accomplished? No man, so far as I can see, could have accomplished more. You've reared two sons, who aren't doing so badly. You've educated them both. You've done your duty to your home and to the community. You've led a good, clean, honest life. You've made a hundred friends and not one enemy. You have the respect and admiration of every man in town. Haven't accomplished anything? Bosh! You mean you haven't made a lot of money. Why? Because you've invested it in your sons and your home and your town. And I want to prove you've made a wise investment. I want to pay you dividends. And mostly I want you to settle down and enjoy your income. I've got to stand for everything that's fine and honest and worth working for."

Old Charlie stared, gulped, tried to speak. "You—you mean that, Robert. You mean all that you said?"

"Mean it! Say, I was never more serious in my life Old Men's home! Say, aren't you satisfied with this home here? And moreover, Marie was just saying last night she wanted you to help her about making some alterations in the kitchen. And what's more, I received a letter from Don today. He's made some money and he's coming home. he wants to build a garage, and wants me to help with the plans. Gn the way? Say, you're more important around this joint than I am!"

Old Charlie grinned and brushed a hand across his eyes. His vision was a little misty. But his heart was standing whole. There surged up inside of him once more the old time feeling, an almost forgotten desire to live and work.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Aiden)

Always beautiful is white chiffon for afternoon wear. An exquisite ensemble is of white chiffon, the frock having both sleeves and bodice finely pleated. With it is worn a cascade of white chiffon with a border of white ostrich feathers tipped in gilt.

Has your dinner this Autumn in mind? Then a lovely model frock in black and white. A lovely model has a long, slim skirt of black crepe with a tiny bodice-top of white satin with brilliant buttons holding it together. Sleeves, too.

Just a bit of lace appears on many of the summer dresses, while others are plentifully trimmed with it. A frock for dinner was of black crepe cut on very slender lines is sleeveless. It has a white lace jacket with elbow-length sleeves.

A question mark collar is always the last word in smartness. One of suede blue diagonal woolen with a suede finish has a huge question mark collar of blue fox.

Just a touch of gold is grand on black. A hat of black velvet with a touch of gold embroidery has a gold cord band and mesh with pasted discs of gilt kid.

Almost Twins in styling and cut are the new night gowns and evening frocks. Some of the models are cut on Empire lines with deep back necklines extending almost to the waist. A new model in ivory satin is cut with this styling and has a deep puff sleeve at the shoulder. It is trimmed with lavish appliques of black Chantilly-patterned lace.

Weddings

LANGDON—AYLSWORTH

The Wycliffe Knox College Chapel was the scene of a quiet wedding Thursday, when Miss Patricia, daughter of Dr. R. B. and Mrs. Aylsworth of Trenton, Ont., was united in marriage to Rev. Kenneth Murray Langdon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Langdon, of Brighton, Ont., with only the members of the immediate families present. Rev. Ewan Macdonald (L. M. Montgomery), was master of ceremonies. The ceremony was attended by the bride's brother Mr. Ross Aylsworth. Reverend Ewan Macdonald, Norval, Ont., cousin of the bride, officiated. After a short honeymoon motor trip, Mr. and Mrs. Langdon left for a motor trip and on their return will reside at Georgetown, Ontario.

DEACON—CONNER

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Mary Ina Conner and Mr. John William Deacon, Wednesday morning, August twenty-first at nine-thirty o'clock, in the Madison Avenue Methodist Church in New York City, Reverend Bendall, pastor of the church officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. P. J. Conner of Long Branch, New Jersey.

Mrs. Wedding Munch (nee Conner) was matron of honour, being the bride's only attendant. Mr. Deacon had as his best man, his brother, Mr. Fred H. Deacon of Belleville, Ontario.

The musical program was offered by Miss Ethel Hamilton, church organist, and Miss Janie Elwood, contralto soloist of West Virginia. The ushers were Messrs. Eagle (Masseat), and solo "Beloved".

Following the ceremony, Mr. Johnson (Wagner) was played as a processional and Mendelssohn's Wedding March as a recessional.

The bride is the beautiful and talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Conner of West Unaka Avenue, Johnson City, Tennessee. She has been in New York City for the past several years, where she has pursued her musical career, being a student at the Beaumont-LaPrade Studios, and living at the Mu Phi Sigma Sorority House, 57 West 79th street. From Virginia Intermont College, Bristol, Va., she received her concert diploma, and following graduation she was connected with the Virginia Intermont College as head of the Music Department. She is popular in Johnson City social circles, and in musical and church and civic organization of the city.

Mr. Deacon, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Deacon of Belleville, Ontario, Canada. He is member of Engineering School of the University of Toronto, where he became a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity. Later Mr. Deacon became associated with Ford and his success as a tenor took him to New York City. One of the delightful features is a member of the Roxey Gang. Mr. Deacon has recently accepted a position with a large Canadian chemical importing company, with offices in New York City.

The bride wore a handsome costume of brown velvet, of Queen Marie style, with trimmings of brown lace and buttons. Her hat was a turban of velvet of harmonizing shade, and accessories were of brown. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of orchids and valley-lilies.

Mrs. Schofield wore a becoming frock of new blue crepe, with accessories of blue of synchronizing colors. She wore a shoulder corsage of Talisman roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Deacon left Sunday, by motor, for a wedding trip through the Shenandoah Valley to Virginia. They will arrive in Johnson City, Tuesday night, to be guests of the bride's parents for several days. The following week will be spent in Beaudry's points. M. and Mrs. Deacon will make their home in New York City at 313 West 13th Street.

HODGENS—VANMEER

On Thursday afternoon, a quiet wedding took place at St. Andrews' Church, George street, when the bridegroom Mr. George Hodgens and the bride Mrs. Elizabeth VanMeer both reside at Corbyville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Seymour, minister of St. Andrews' Church.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Beyond him in the parlor Mary Faith could see Mr. McClintock sitting beside the fire reading the evening paper. Agnes was standing in the door of the dining room.

"There's no place here," she said, looking up at him, a faint, puzzled frown knitting her brows, "for you or outside? We could drive down town together."

"We'll drive over to the Park for a minute," said Jim, "before going downtown this morning, I have to stop off and see a man on the way home."

Halmorth Park on that gray autumn morning was deserted and full of the sad sound of rain dripping from the trees and bushes. The green iron benches where sweethearts and nursemaids took their ease during hot weather had all been taken away.

Kim shivered. His roadster near the little lake where swans swam lazily all through the long days of the hot summer. There was nothing on the brown ruffled water now but a few dead leaves.

"I don't know just how I'm going to tell you," he began, turning off the engine of the car, "I swear I don't—"

He looked at her. Mary Faith looked back from the rain, white with a word.

"Last night after I left you," he said slowly, "I didn't go straight home. I meant to, and then I got to thinking about Janet. I got to thinking about her and I drove around to see her."

Kim paused and Mary Faith sat, as if in a question.

"Is Janet the girl you've been driving home from work lately? The one you told me about last night?"

He said she was, his eyes on the surface of the little lake. Suddenly she turned in his seat.

"Oh, I may as well tell you the whole thing and get it over with!" he said roughly. "That girl's been around the office for months. I've taken her out to lunch a dozen times. I suppose, and I've driven her home three or four times a week for the last month.....I thought she was a cute little kid. But I did not know I was falling for her. I did not know how much. I cared about her until yesterday when I told her about you and me."

Mary Faith gave him a straight and steady look.

"Until she told you how much she cared for you," said Kim, "I don't what are you trying to tell me? What you're giving me up?"

"No, couldn't bear to hurt her that way. They had been in love with each other for almost four years. Month by month they had waited for the time to come when they could be married. Night before last they had actually decided on the date for their wedding.....Today didn't speak to each other like that if they did not love each other for keeps!"

"Why, Kim, you couldn't stop loving—after all these years!" she said, putting her hands up to her aching throat. "You don't care for that girl the way you do for me, Kim. You haven't known her long enough.....Why, think just two nights ago you told me we'd be married on the first! And now this—Kim, I couldn't live if you threw me down now. That may sound silly to you, but it's the truth."

He sagged lower in his seat, shrugging his shoulders.

"You're making awfully hard for me, Mary Faith," he said, his forehead a mass of petulant lines. "You're making it awfully hard for both of us. Let's try to be calm about it."

He made a sudden impatient movement with his head.

"You don't think I enjoy sitting here telling you that we're through with each other, do you?" he asked her. "I'd much rather have written to you, but I decided that the only square thing was to tell you just how things are so far as I'm concerned."

"Through with each other!" repeated Mary Faith. And then she said it again. "Through with each other." She sat still, taking it in for a minute or two.

"Well!" she said at last, as if she finally realized just what had happened to her. "Well, that's that, isn't it?" She opened the door of the car with wet, cold fingers and stepped out upon the brown soggy grass.

As she closed it Kim rushed suddenly for her hands.

"Aren't you going to say good-bys to me, Mary Faith?"

She couldn't say a word. There was a great lump of tears in her throat. She shook her head and walked away across the grass.

"Mary Faith—!"

She turned at the sound of his voice. He was getting out of the car. He had something more to say to her, his eyebrows were drawn up in a question.

"How about your engagement ring, Mary Faith?" he asked in an embarrassed voice. His face was flaming under its tan. "You won't want to wear it now, will you? I promised her I'd get it from you. She had an idea you might make trouble about all this. I told her you wouldn't. I told her that you were wonderful and that you'd understand—"

"Come here and take your ring!" Mary Faith cut in upon him.

He came across the wet grass and took it out of her fingers. He tried to smile but he looked like a whipped dog.

CHAPTER 7

It was half-past three when Mary Faith walked into the office that morning.

Jean Bartlett and the other stenographers looked up as her and smiled when she opened the door. Something in Jean's smile made Mary Faith turn a quick half-fright ened look upon her. Jean had a little note in her hand.

"Mr. McClintock's been in this morning," she said, "and left this note for you. I'm going to lunch now, shower! A shower like the one that had given Miss O'Keefe last year just before she left to be married.

"I hope they haven't—Oh, I do hope they haven't," Mary Faith prayed silently.

But Jean opened she opened the door she saw that the thing she feared would happen had happened, her desk was covered with white packages tied up with satin ribbon and her great flower vase was filled with "long-stemmed brides roses.

Mary Faith stood there in agony for a second. Then she closed the door and went into Mr. Mark Nesbits office without ceremony or knock.

He was sitting at his desk, doing nothing. His letters lay in a neat block before him. He saw that they had not been opened. She had always opened his letters for him.

"I'm sorry," she said, "I'm sorry then." May I speak to you a moment?"

He nodded.

Mr. Nesbit yesterday afternoon I told you I was going to leave you at the end of the month.....I'd like to stay on if I may, if it suits with you. I've changed my plans."

He glanced up at her.

You mean that you're not going to be married in two weeks?" he asked sharply. So sharply that it did not occur to her at the time that this was anything but a business-like question.

"I'm not going to be married at all," she answered quietly. "I've broken my engagement."

"I see." He got up and stood beside the desk, his hands in his pockets. "Everything here goes on just as it usually does, then.....Well, that's fine, Mary Faith."

He never had called her Mary Faith before.

Everything had always been perfectly business-like and matter-of-fact between them. She had done his work and he had paid her her salary. They had always been "Miss Fenton" and "Mr. Nesbit" to each other.

"Please send Miss Bartlett in," he said as Mary Faith turned to go out of his office. "I wish to be her just now about taking your position when you left.....It'll tell her you're staying on. That will save you any embarrassment."

In her own little room once more Mary Faith stood looking at the white-wrapped packages on her desk.

One of them smelled of gardenia sachet powder. The heavy scent was to her hopeful mind made her think of the little bunch of gardenias tied with silver ribbon, that Kim had sent to her last Easter. Once again she could see the pale waxy sunlight of Easter morning when she and Kim had walked, side by side, to church. Kim always would do something or remind her of him always.....

She was looking at the white packages from her desk when the door of the room first open and Jean Bartlett came in.

"What's this, Mr. Nesbit's been telling me?" she asked, shutting the door behind her. "You're not going to leave after all?"

Mary Faith shook her head, her face white and still above the bunches on her desk.

"Well what on earth—? What's happened?" asked Jean. "Aren't you going to be married?" Her black eyes were wide with curiosity.

She was one of those frank, cheerful, talkative people who have no secrets. She told everything there was to tell about herself to anyone who would listen to her. Mary Faith knew all about her love affairs, her home life, her friends, and her bank account.

And because she had no secrets of her own, Jean had no qualms about poking her nose into other people's business. Big she was low, able and loyal and amusing, and she and Mary Faith had been great friends for four years.

"No, Jean, I'm not going to be married." Mary Faith told her with lips that felt stiff although they were trembling. She looked down at the packages in her hands, and when she looked up again her eyes were dim.

Jean fairly snatched the packages from her. Then she seized Mary Faith's two hands in her own strong and shook the water from them fast.

"Oh, but I'd just like to tell Miss Farrell what I think of him!" she said, bristling all over. "It's too bad, you haven't a father or a brother-in-law, somebody to go round and give Richard Farrell what he deserves! The way he had, Mary Faith. That's what.....

Jean ends—"To do a thing like that—"

She dropped the roses in the wastebasket and picked up the Interwaste basket.

"Buck up, Mary Faith!" closed "Don't take it this way!" she resume one "Plenty of fellows in the world who know. A girl's a fool who heart over one man.....The world's so full of men.....somebody else pretty six months you'll have forgotten you ever knew Kim Farrell.' I know I've been crying—and I wouldn't shed a tear over the best man alive!"

When she had gone, taking the white basket of roses and the engagement ring with her, Mary Faith rose downstairs to the rest room where she rested bitterly as she washed the scent of gardenia sachet from her hands.

All day long as she went back and forth in the office she could feel the curious eyes of Jean and Miss Sazz and Miss Kelly upon her. She knew that they had heard what had happened between herself and Kim.

And Miss Gilday, who operated the switchboard, had put through telephone calls from Kim to her every day for almost four years.....Miss Gilday must be wondering what had happened, too.

CHAPTER 8

At half past three Mr. Nesbit left the building to go to a bank directors' meeting. He did not get back to the office until six o'clock.

"I'm sorry, Mary Faith," he said putting his head in at the door of Mary Faith's small room, "but I'm mind staying a little late? I'd like to get my desk cleared tonight.

"I'll be glad to stay" said Mary Faith looking up at him. She and her desk had not been opened. She had always opened his letters for him.

"I'm sorry to keep you late, then: May I speak to you a moment?"

He nodded.

Mr. Nesbit yesterday afternoon I told you I was going to leave you at the end of the month.....I'd like to stay on if it suits with you. I've changed my plans."

He glanced up at her.

SESSION MOST IMPORTANT IN ALL HISTORY

Opinion Expressed by Minister at Meeting of Newmen

MANY MATTERS

Bank Act Will be Revised in Many Respects Says Speaker

Woodstock, Aug. 27 (CP)— Special session of the Canadian parliament to be held "late in September or early in October" will be one of the most important parliamentary sessions in the Dominion's history in the opinion of Hon. W. D. Sutherland, Minister of National Defence, who addressed a meeting yesterday to a meeting of the Ontario Provincial Newmen.

"Five important matters will be on the agenda of the special session, Dr. Sutherland stated. He listed them as treaties and enabling legislation arising out of the imperial Conference, the St. Lawrence Waterways treaty, consideration of the impending report of the Railway Commission expected in a fortnight, revision of the Canada Bank Act and the electoral re-distribution Bill following the census.

In reference to the Bank Act Dr. Sutherland said the west had blamed many of its troubles on the existing bank system, and the government planned to amend the act in certain important respects.

After giving his audience of newspaper men a lively picture of the Ottawa meeting of the Imperial Conference he went on to testify to the fairness and accuracy of the reports sent out from the capital throughout the country, commending the press on much intelligent speculation.

Ottawa, Aug. 27 (CP)—Cabinet has left in abeyance the matters of the date on which parliament will open. This was due to the uncertainty regarding the assembling of the other parliaments of the empire, coupled with the Prime Minister's desire to synchronize as far as possible the opening of the Canadian and the British houses.

PROGRESS OF BOYCOTT CAUSING DEEP CONCERN

Shanghai, Aug. 27—Progress of the anti-Japanese boycott movement is causing deep concern in both Chinese and foreign business circles, who fear the present activities may bring conditions similar to those which preceded the fighting here last January. Merchants generally however are slow to ebb, believe that a renewal of hostilities between would subject their commercial structure to straits it would be unable to withstand for long, despite their attitude, the anti-Japanese "blood-and-iron pledges" continue threats and violence against merchants who handle Japanese goods as a result of these threats, merchants have published statements in the newspapers asserting they are not handling anything Japanese hoping thereby to escape the wrath of the agitators.

CYCLONIC BURST BLEW ROOF OFF GAS STATION

Gravenhurst, Ont., Aug. 27—Five men standing in a service station here yesterday to escape a heavy downpour of rain were left without a scratch, when cyclonic burst of wind wrecked the building and threw the roof 100 feet away.

At the time of the blast a motorist had driven into the station to refuel and stepped on the gas and dodged the falling roof. The blast did damage to the building estimated at $2,000.

At The Belle

GAYNOR AND FARRELL AS YOUNG, MARRIED LOVERS

The trials and joys, the bliss and kisses of "The First Year" that most trying matrimonial period of a young couple, constitute the dramatic motivation of James Cayney's and Charles Parnell's latest Fox picture at the Belle today, Monday, Tuesday, matinee daily.

"The First Year" promises a new Janet. Petrie and piquant as ever she has proved, the pathetic for the positive in her characterization. With a new hair dress, with smart modern frocks, she is said to bring an entirely fresh and inspiring portrayal to the screen in this, her first entirely grown-up role. Farrell, too, is different. He will be seen as an ambitious young business man, bankrupt, it is true, by his many difficulties of becoming established in a city where the life is the whole a capable, energetic young fellow out to prove that he can make his way in the world.

Among the supporting players of "The First Year" are Minna Gombell, seen in a hilarious comedy role; Leila Bennett, Virginia Sale, Robert McWade, George Meeker, Maude Eburne and Harry Holden all whom portray important parts suited to their capabilities.

"At Niagara Falls," is Jimmy Gleason's latest comedy, the popular Fox Movietone, and the clever cartoon specialled "The Bully."

"Back Street" is Booked

One of the outstanding screen dramas of the season, "Back Street," booked for showing at the Belle Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, matinee and Friday, by Manager Forhan.

The picture is "Back Street," adapted from the novel of the same name by Fannie Hurst, with Irene Dunne and John Boles in the featured roles, and directed by the master of sentimental romance, John M. Stahl.

"Back Street" tells the story of a woman who considered no sacrifice too great to make in the name of love, and a man who loved one of his love but at the same time retained his social position as a husband and father. The story covers a span of 20 years, and is said to give an especially affecting picture of the trials of two people whose love is outside the law, and withstanding its sincerity and depth. It is a powerful and ambitious production of the season. "Back Street" presents Miss Dunne and Boles the most sympathetic roles of their careers.

At The Capitol

"NEW MORALS FOR OLD" HEADS CAPITOL PROGRAM

"New Morals for Old," a drama of modern family life which depicts the conflict between older and younger generations, will be the feature attraction starting Monday at the Capitol Theatre.

The picture is a filmization of John Van Druten's play, "After All," produced both in London and New York with Margaret Perry playing the feminine lead in the Broadway production. Miss Perry also plays this role in the screen version, in which she makes her motion picture debut.

Film Has Strong Cast

The role of the son who scorns his father's standard of business to go off to Paris to become an artist is played by Robert Young, remembered for his outstanding work as the young doctor in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," and last seen as the drunkard's son in "Strange Interlude." Madge Evans is cast as the father who lays down the law to his children in vain and the role of the old-fashioned mother is filled by the distinguished stage actress, Marie Dressler. The supporting cast is headed by Lewis Stone as the father of "Young" rebel, and also includes Irene Rich, Neil Hamilton, Hedda Hopper, Sally Eilers, Kathryn Crawford, Louise Closser Hale, Mitchell Lewis, Hilda Bethem and Lillian Harmer.

"New Morals for Old" deals with the struggle of a brother and sister to break the conditions imposed upon them by their parents. As is typical in countless family of today, the father is anxious for the son to follow his own line of business and has no patience with the son's yearnings to become an artist. The mother, on the other hand, flatly a bitter battle with her daughter as an attempt to keep the latter from running off with a married man, Lewis Stone and daughter meet their respective problems provides the "dramatic meat" of an unusually entertaining plot.

Charles Brabin Directs

Charles Brabin, who has produced such sensational talkies as "Beast of the City" and "Sporting Blood" directed "New Morals for Old" from an adaptation by the Van Druten play written by Zelda Sears and Walter Anthony. Other Van Dyke ten stage successes include "Young Woodley," in which Helen Hayes scored, and "There's Always Juliet" in which Basil Rad and Herbert Marshall played the leading roles.

Monday is Dunnerware gift day.

NORWAY FEARS FOR FLIERS

Lee And Bochkon Not Heard From Since Start Thursday

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 26 (A.P.)— Hope that Capt. Leo Lee and John Bochkon might succeed in flying their "Green Mountain Boy" across the Atlantic began to dim today as afternoon faded into evening and there was still no word of them.

It was feared the bad weather which prevailed over the eastern Atlantic might have spelled failure for their aspirations.

There were low-lying clouds and some fog over the water in Greenland from noon on and because of those conditions it might be that flyers laid down over England without being seen.

Fog Dive Into River

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 26—Flying from New York to Oslo, Norway, Capt. Harlow Grace and dash across the ocean to Croydon, Surrey, Sidney and Peterson flew into fog adit rain before they reached the Newfoundland coast and crashed.

At 8,000 feet, their engine went dead. Grace made a quick decision to pick out the most likely looking stretch of water. Their ship went into a nose dive and plunged into the water, but remained afloat.

Solberg managed to get out their window, swam ashore and made his way to the open through a door in the fuselage. Grace swam over and to assist the fishermen of Darby's Harbor in towing the plane to shallow water.

Meanwhile Lee and Bochkon, who hopped off from Floyd Bennett early yesterday morning are believed to be nearing their destination, Oslo, Norway, although reports of their progress across the ocean are vague.

It was understood that Captain Mollison would not take off today due to poor flying conditions.

Agnes Macphail Advocates Inflation of Currency

Temperanceville, Ont., Aug. 26—(By The Canadian Press)— Miss Agnes Macphail, Progressive member of parliament today was on record as favoring inflation of currency to ease hard times.

Addressing a conference, she told an audience of the United Farmers of Ontario last night that the south the controlled system, but made a few pointed remarks when she suggested a tie-up of the Canadian dollar to the pound sterling. The group resolution in favor of inflation was in this province and foreign countries tended to nullify the value of preferences granted at the Ottawa conference.

Miss Macphail advocated inflation to increase "the amount of money normally increases in booms and decreases in depressions." The opposite, she said, should occur.

"There is no reason", she said, "why the government cannot print $100,000,000 or $200,000,000 and pay with this new money for unemployment relief and for new public buildings."

Canada, Miss Macphail added, would never be properly prosperous until the agriculturists and the industrial workers realize that they must work and cooperate to the fullest extent."

Students Fees are Jumped Salaries of Staff Reduced

Winnipeg, Aug. 27 (CP) — Deficiations in the endowment fund of the University of Manitoba necessitate a change in the economy measures, Dr. W. J. Tupper, Government.

As part of its campaign for a balanced budget the government is planning to reduce the university grant and this step, it is believed, is part of the question if the university is to continue functioning on the present scale.

The grant was reduced from $500,000 to $400,000 at the last session of the legislature and, faced with the need of further economies, the government had requested the university to reduce expenses to permit to a further cut.

In the meantime government authorities are going over the books to determine the extent of the irregularities which led to the arrest of John A. Machray, K.C., bursar and chairman of the Board of Governors.

Machray is held under bail charged with the theft of more than $47,000. A number of trustees of the fund are said to be seriously depleted if not almost completely wiped out and the loss to the university may run to $1,000,000 or more.

Officials of the Church of England are checking over their trust funds in which were also in Machray's keeping as chancellor of the Archdiocese of Rupert's Land.

Students at University of Manitoba will pay fees of 40 to 75 per cent higher fees than a year ago, the staff is to accept 15 per cent salary reductions, but all departments of the institution will operate as usual.

Among the old time remedies still in favor with the latest medical books in England are camomile and leeches.

MODERN SCHOOL LOSING GROUND

Sees Disintegration of School of Emotion

(By The Canadian Press)
LONDON—"The modern school of emotion" is disintegrating, as represented by D. H. Lawrence and James Joyce, among others, is beginning to disintegrate, according to Prof. Percy Hazret of the University of London.

Speaking in a symposium on contemporary literature at the Columbia University summer school Prof. Hazret asserted emphasis on the physical aspect of love and on sensuality, and a cynical attitude toward man, were characteristics of the modern school.

He listed as among chief representatives of the modern school D. H. Lawrence, James Joyce, Aldous Huxley and Stephen Hudson in the United Kingdom, Proust and Maurice in France, Kafka in Germany and Ernest Hemingway in the United States. "There are signs of the school of emotion is beginning to disintegrate", he declared, "and that this modern period is over. Sensuality and a responsibility which was lacking in literature in the last 10 years is to be returning.

"Among the various faculties of the human soul such as reason, memory, imagination, this modern school lays the emphasis on sensation, but among all the sensations it happens sometimes there is one more particularly which seems to have an eternal value—the sensation of God. The modern school is also a school of sex. It is different from the Romantic and it is different from the Classic because the Classic insisted on reason. But each school proper lasts really only a few years."

Australia's chief imports from the United States now are gasoline and allied products radios and tobacco.

J. M. MOLLISON AGAIN ON WAY

Left Saint John For Harbor Grace Shortly Before Noon

Saint John, Aug. 29 (By The Canadian Press)—Dr. James A. Mollison left the Saint John Municipal Airport at 11.28 A.M., Eastern Standard Time. He expected to reach the Cape off St. John city in three hours. Weather conditions permitting the famous airman will continue from Harbor to Harbor Grace this afternoon. Otherwise he will remain at Symonds for the night.

Thick fog in the vicinity early today lifted before noon, permitting the Canadian to hold his plane from Newpie, 18 miles distant, where he landed after a fast hop yesterday afternoon. He schedule for his flight to Harbor Grace, 300 for a direct trip from New York to Saint John but he was unable to land here because of the fog ceiling and turned back to the large field he had tested as ideal for landing.

Captain Mollison motored to Norpeie this morning and then lifted into the air without difficulty, and reached the local airport shortly afterward.

Before Mollison took off it was learned that Mrs. J. S. Jenkins planned to fly from Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Mrs. Jenkins' brother somewhere above Pugwash, N.S. If flying conditions were good, it was said, she would fly with him on to Sydney, or if he desired she would escort him to the airport at Charlottetown. Mrs. Jenkins is the wife of Dr. S. J. Jenkins, Charlottetown. Both are aviation enthusiasts.

SYDNEY, N.S., Aug. 29.—(CP)—Mollison landed Sydney.

ANCIENT ELMS BOW TO AXE IN TREE DRIVE

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 29.—More than 100 ancient trees, mostly elms which for many years graced the sides of the highways in the London district, have their stately heads lie low as, during the tree survey conducted during the past few weeks by the Ontario Department of Highways. They were condemned as unsafe and therefore a menace to traffic. The survey was a sequel to the Eastern Ontario tragedy in which a tree fell across a truck with fatal results.

A. KINGSTON FOLLOWS ORDE

Becomes Judge of High Court For This Province

OTTAWA, Aug. 29.—(By the Canadian Press)—Courtney Kingston, K.C., St. Catharines, Ontario, was appointed a judge of the High Court of Justice of Ontario. Official announcement was made today.

A vacancy was recently created on the bench of the Appellate Division, when Mr. Justice Orde, who had sat on the Appellate Division bench since 1923, died. Judge Orde, who died in the Ontario Legislative Building on May 19, 1931, was appointed a judge of the Supreme Court of Ontario in 1921 provided that the number of judges on the Appellate Division would be increased from ten to eight. This amendment stipulated that the vacancy would be brought about by not making appointments as the Appellate Division when the following two vacancies occurred on that bench. Consequently Mr. Justice Kingston will sit on the other division, the High Court of Justice.

THREE MORE CASES ARE REPORTED

Quebec, Aug. 29.—(By The Canadian Press)—With only three new cases of infantile paralysis reported for the week-end, 20,000 children returned today to schools operated by the Catholic School Commission. Health authorities considered that their attendance at class would be less dangerous than continuation of summer holidays.

Three new cases brought to 52 the number reported since the first outbreak of what health authorities describe as a "mild epidemic" of infantile paralysis.

BIG THREE OF GERMANY MEET

Von Papen, Hitler And Von Schleicher Are Together

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—(AP)—Chancellor Von Papen, who assailed Adolf Hitler's demands for "all power" in a speech yesterday, had luncheon with the Nazi Chief today and Kurt Von Schleicher, Minister of Defense, called the most powerful men in the Von Papen Cabinet, also was present. They talked over the political situation with complete secrecy regarding their conversation.

Meanwhile Nazi and Communist programmes aroused a storm of interest throughout Germany, wherein it was declared that he revealed "little practical knowledge of economics."

Union critics expressed anger because such a diminutive majority which is opposed by the entire Nazi movement, should be dependent on the rights of workmen," and they rejected the government's proposal that every reinstated workman would be looked upon as re-employed, to be reduced pay of his fellow workers.

BEATTY PLEASED WITH PROSPECTS OF PARLEY

Toronto, Aug. 29.—(By The Canadian Press)—"The Ottawa Economic Conference has undoubtedly helped us, the wheat bonus should help us and things generally seem to be looking a little better," E. W. Beatty, K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said today on his arrival here.

"Yes, I think Canada, and all the Dominions did well at the Conference," he added, "and we should benefit materially. Crop prospects are good and there may be some improvement in the Fall."

Agricultural Officials Meet to Put Business on Paying Basis

To Take Advantage of Trade Agreements Now in Force

Toronto, Aug. 29 (CP)—Agricultural officials from all parts of the Dominion met here today, under the leadership of Hon. Robert Weir, the Federal Agriculture Minister, to co-ordinate and reorganize the farm production of Canada.

The meeting brought together many provincial ministers of agriculture and all but two of the deputy ministers. The deans of agricultural colleges were in attendance as well as representatives of the Dominion department, the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian National railways.

The agenda calls for definite action on problems now confronting the Canadian farmer, and decisions expressed their determination to take full advantage of benefits to be derived from the Empire trade pacts arranged at Ottawa, and to make the farmer's business in Canada the most prosperous.

Dr. Archibald Chairman.

Dr. S. S. Archibald of Ottawa, Director of the Dominion Experimental Farms, was elected chairman of the conference, and H. L. Trueman of Ottawa, chief secretary.

Leading the Provincial delegations here are the following ministers of agriculture: Hon William Aikman of Victoria, British Columbia; Hon. George Headley of Alberta, Edmonton; Hon. W. H. Hepburn of Saskatchewan, Regina; Hon. D. G. McKenzie of Manitoba, Winnipeg; Hon. W. H. Price of Ontario, Toronto; Hon Adelard Godbout of Quebec, Quebec; Smith of New Brunswick, Fredericton; Hon. J. A. Campbell of Nova Scotia, Halifax; Hon. G. S. Sharp of Prince Edward Island, Charlottetown.

Meet in Private.

Desiring to safeguard freedom of discussion the conference decided to hold its sessions in private, excluding the public and the press.

Following the conference it is expected to last four days or more, according to L. S. McLaine of Ottawa, assistant secretary.

Nearly 30 officials of the Dominion department of agriculture are at the conference, led by the acting deputy minister, Dr. A. T. Charron.

REBELS ASK FOR PARLEY

Federals Storm Capital to Quell Revolt in Progress

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Aug. 29.—Federal infantry, artillery and aeroplanes stormed Quito, the capital of Ecuador, today to stamp out the revolt against military supporters of President-Elect Neptali Bonifaz.

The drive on the capital came from two directions. The north and south. It was officially announced.

Federal forces captured the City of Magdalena, six kilometres south of Quito, after brisk fighting and then pressed on to the capital.

Five infantry battalions and two companies of artillery took active part in the action, according to the official announcement. Further that communique was issued it was said the leaders of the rebels who had set up a provisional government, were hemming in and asking for a parley.

POLICE SEARCH FOR KIDNAPPERS

64 Year Old Girl Missing —Brother Dumped From Car

Buffalo, N.Y., Aug. 29—A 14-year old girl, believed kidnapped by three men, was the object of an intensive hunt by Buffalo and New York Police today.

The girl, Mary Fanara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fanara disappeared from her home after she had accepted a ride in an automobile in which three men were riding.

The girl's parents told police that men came to their home at their house Friday evening and asked Mary if she would like to ride to the home of her sister with them. One of the men said he was Mary's a former acquaintance and Mary agreed to go on the condition, that the brother, Michael, told police. The brother, Michael, told police the men came in an automobile after they had driven a short distance.

The New York police were called into the search, when it was learned that the men known to the family had been living in New York for the past year."

90 P.C. WALK TRACKS' RIVER THRU BLOCKADE

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 29. — A new "air-tight" camp today found supporters at the Farmers' Holiday Association's 90 blockade of every highway leading into this agricultural centre, as the strikers was their objective.

Determined farmers, numbering little more than 250, were continuing efforts to confine their activity to a half dozen roads. All trucks carrying produce and milk were halted and the drivers attempting to persuade the drivers to turn back to their farms.

In only a few cases did trucks fail to run the blockade.

Des Moines dairy heads estimated that 90 percent of the city's milk supply was delivered.

JOHN AVERY'S TROUBLES ARE MULTIPLIED

Amery's Flat in Chelsea Broken Into And Clothes Stolen

MANY IN U. S.

Tells Bridegroom-to-be He is Determined to be Married

John Amery's troubles multiply. The young son of Rt. Hon. L. S. Amery and his fiancee, Una Evelyn Wing, 20 year old actress, who left London last Wednesday after asserting they would not return until they were married, are now back from the continent today. The hospital bride had not been idle.

To make matters worse they found that Mr. Amery's flat in Chelsea had been broken into and clothes valued at £300 stolen. Papers were strewn about the floor and the intruder is believed to have been someone intimately in the film business with which Mr. Amery is connected.

Mr. Amery today declared he and Miss Wing were more determined than ever to get married and planned to go to America at the end of the week to have the ceremony performed there.

Last Monday the wedding was to have taken place at Chelsea registry office but the ceremony was stopped by Lord and Lady Cromwell, the young man's uncle and aunt, sent telegrams forbidding it on the ground that he was still under age. Mr. Amery's father is in America. Mr. Amery's father said to consent because he had been told nothing about it. Subsequently the couple left England to visit friends of Belgium.

When told today that his father is expected to return from Canada where he attended the Imperial Economic Conference, on Thursday or Friday said, "I will see him if he looks me up."

Coroner Witholds Formal Verdict Pending Investigation

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Aug. 29— Mrs. William A. Simmons, 28, wife of a coach, squirmed free from her small daughters into a lake near here last night under pretense of showing them "how to baptize" drowned two of them and herself but the other jerked loose and found refuge on an island.

The survivor, Louise Simmons, 10, was found on the island an hour later by searchers who had stopped at the lake to fill his radiator. They directed searchers in recovering the body of her mother and two sisters.

It was said her mother, a seller of religious literature, drove with them from their home 12 miles from the lake and waded out into the water after Dorothy, 8, and Marjorie 4 to her arms, Louise said she had seen her by her hand but succeeded in breaking loose just before Mrs. Simmons and the other two sank. Although her mother tried to drag her under as well.

Coroner S. T. Harding said he had decided that the deaths by drownings but he is withholding a formal verdict pending a thorough investigation.

R. WENSLEY'S HOME ENTERED

Door Broken But Nothing of Importance is Removed

Upon their return home Sunday evening, after a short holiday, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Arthur Wensley of 253 Bleecker Avenue, found that their home had been broken into during their absence.

The local police were notified upon investigating found, that the thief or thieves had gained access by forcing in the screened cellar window at the basement of the Wensley home. Later with the use of a hammer and some other tools secured in the basement of the house, the burglars broke open the door leading from the cellar to the main floor of the house. The ransacks smashed a large hole in the door and by so doing were able to reach in through the hole and unlock the door.

Upon further investigation the police, assisted by the Wensley family, found that every drawer in, all cupboards and other places of furniture had been pulled open and their contents strewn about the floors. The only missing article, that could not be ascertained by Mr. Wensley was one pair of brown striped trousers. Sergeant Hammond conducted the investigation.

The police are still on the lookout for the culprits, but further watch will be kept on the residences of those who are away on their holidays. No reports were received at the police station in regards to any persons seen about the house.

The EYE and NOT of VISION
By J. A. McFEE
Professional Optometrist

An error of vision may cause a child to be called dull?

Yes, many children shew a marked improvement in every way after being freed from the effects of eye strain.

All parents should be interested in their children's sight?

Yes, vision should be recognized as the most valuable sense.

The ideal plan for parents is to learn at once if their children are or are not in need of the aid of glasses?

If that were done great benefit to children would result.

FOUR-POINT VIEW OF LIFE IS DESCRIBED

Rev. Dr. F. E. Malott, Winnipeg, Addresses Large Congregation

FOUR WINDOWS

Childhood, Youth, Middle Age and Old Age Portrayed

"We are all facing our land of promise with the four viewpoints varying according to age and experience," said Rev. Dr. F. E. Malott, of Winnipeg, addressing the United Church congregations in Bridge Street and the Tabernacle at the union service in the Tabernacle on Sunday morning. The former pastor of Bridge Street Church had accepted an invitation of the Rev. A. E. McCutcheon to preach. The large attendance of members of both congregations was a tribute to the enduring popularity of Dr. Malott whose pastorate in Belleville will never be forgotten.

Four Viewpoints

His theme was a large one being in reality life as seen through the four windows of childhood, youth, middle age and old age. There was a time, he declared, when windows were taxed and the people closed up their windows and built houses with a minimum of windows because of the tax on glass, he said. The result was lowered health standards and the decline in the race. We are taxed on every thing, but I do hope the governments will not tax our windows," commented the minister. The text was Deuteronomy 3-27, the admonition to Moses to climb Pisgah and see the Promised Land from afar.

The soul has its windows through which we look out life. What we see depends on ourselves and our years ago," he said, "depends upon the window. Carlyle once cynically remarked that the population of England was forty millions, mainly fools. What we see when we look out of the windows are pavements, streets, hills, trees, rivers, lakes, heaven. Now what we see people as Dicken saw them, to love them, because he saw some good in them. Dickens never said a cynical thing though he saw the foibles of man. What a difference it would be to mankind if all men saw their brothers as they saw them. How there are people who have no idea of anything but materialism.

East Window, Childhood

In Canada we look out through the window of childhood. We see everywhere. Like Pippa in the immortal drama, we feel "God's in His Heaven, All's right with the world". There is nothing wrong with the world for those children who look out through the east window. They never see children turn to the financial page of the newspaper, they are never taking depression, they turn to the comic page of life. From the east window the child's world is not yet disillusioned, the woods are still full of fairies, and the child is not inclined to believe that the twentieth century is the century of childhood and think the child is getting more than its rights today. But we need to come back to the childhood age to learn how to pray."

The South—Youth

The south window, the south that turning inwards, the glowing sun was next dealt with by Dr. Malott. All nature is flourishing with life. It is the June of experience. Youth is that period of expansion comes great are the expectations. It is just as natural that youth should love pleasure and even if some seem to think that life is made for nothing else. Youth becomes venturesome. It seeks achievement. It is not all given up to pleasure and mere dreaming. The stern realities of life come soon enough. The story of Abraham the greatest pioneer of the ancient world, takes up half the story of the book of Genesis, although it covers a period of two thousand years and one third of the balance of that book is given to another pioneer, and dreamer, his great grandson, Joseph, and the New Testament is entirely devoted to another youth, Jesus. Youth is important as the time of habit-formation. Counsel is necessary and sometimes it is spurned.

North—Middle Age

Youth passes and mankind looks out of the north window of the grey sky and sad fluctuating intensity of light. Some of the romance is left behind. They time of middle age but for steady work the sun is done by the north window. It is well that youth has dreams. Now in middle age it is to make the best of them comes. In middle years we are less dreaming, we are more settled, marriage and the growth of families cause mankind to settle.

The most outstanding successes of life are made in middle age. It is middle age that handles most of the affairs of life, the most business and fills the most important positions. But middle age has its dangers of ease, success and wealth—the destruction that worth at noonday. David's chief sin was not in the time of his wars but in the days of plenty and peace and he fell. Middle age people are dependable and are the backbone of society, the church, the home, the state.

West—Age

There is another window, the west. Sadness spoke of the dying soldier as one who goes "west". Very few people like to think of old age, but many find it the time of greatest peace and joy, not only because of the hope beyond, but because of the desire still to round out this life in places where full development has not taken place because of too many interests in other activities of middle age.

To many old age brings the spectre of poverty. Many have reason to fear it. They are afraid of weakness, of being in the way of others, of being laid aside. Indeed infirmity does lay many of these men aside.

Preparing For Age

Dr. Malott gave a little advice as to how to prepare for age. "Plan for at least a moderate annuity either from an insurance company or the government and be on your guard against venturing all you have in some scheme which may leave you stranded and penniless."

He suggested also the cultivation of a love for reading, good books are friends in age.

In closing he referred to the cultivation of friendship and told of the delight he had in renewing his friends in Belleville.

He is a friend of Jesus Christ. Christ is the religious nature. Invariably health may be. Christ never deserts.

Rev. A. E. McCutcheon welcomed Dr. Malott to the pulpit and Dr. Malott spoke of his happy associations with Mr. McCutcheon for two years in Bramble as well as recalling his happy days in this city.

ARRESTED ON THEFT CHARGES

Police Allege Boys Stole Gasoline From Wholesale Firm

As a sequel to the arrest of Dorland Rushlow, who was arrested on a charge of attempting to steal gasoline from a local wholesale gasoline house Friday night, William Mondville, also of this city, was arrested on a similar charge and appeared before Magistrate Mikel in the police court held Monday morning. Both boys pleaded not guilty to the charge laid and upon advice of counsel asked for an enlargement for five days. They were allowed their freedom after bail was provided.

Hartford Tweedie of Thurlow was charged with assault causing bodily harm, by Sidney A. Whaley also of Thurlow. Mr. Whaley alleged that while he was driving Mr. Tweedie's car from the hill (Whaley's) property, Tweedie had attacked him and struck him knocking him down on the ground. After hearing both sides of the story Mr. Mikel was of the opinion that both parties were somewhat to blame and that the fatal encounter had arisen over a past grievance. The case was enlarged upon to be bound over to keep the peace. The costs of the court were equally divided between the two parties.

A young woman of this city appeared in court charged with obtaining a dress from a local family by false pretences. The young lady was found guilty and a suspended sentence of two years was imposed upon her.

A number of cases of infraction of the L. C. A. and the H. T. A. were also disposed of.

OBITUARY

SHUBAEL FOSTER

Shubael Foster, a former well known resident of this county, passed away a few days ago in the city of Rochester, N. Y., where he had been making his home for nearly forty years.

Deceased was the third son of the late Jacob Foster and was born at the Village of Moira in the township of Huntingdon about 80 years ago. In his early manhood he was engaged in farming operations in Huntingdon but later removed to Rochester. Mr. Foster was unmarried, he was one of a family of four sons and four daughters all of whom predeceased him except one sister, Mrs. Thomas Tyrell of Rochester. He was a grandson of Shubael Foster, U.E. Loyalist, and one of the founders of Belleville.

THOMAS A. J. INGRAM

Death which occurred in Belleville General Hospital on Sunday, August 28th., 1932, cut short the life of Thomas A. J. Ingram, son of Ingram of Stratford, in his 83rd year. The deceased, who had been visiting at the home of his son, Mr. Clarence Ingram, 88 Queen street, Farm that house had been suddenly taken ill and was removed to the Belleville General Hospital. Death followed soon after.

He is survived by a widow, two daughters, Mrs. Clarence Ingram of Belleville, one son Clarence, Belleville, and one brother, Mr. Thomas Lay of Stratford, Mrs. Wm. MacDonald of Stratford, and two brothers, Francis and Wellington both of Stratford.

Born in Carrol, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ingram, pioneers, who spent their early days in that city, moving to Stratford some years later. Here he had a wide and intimate circle of friends, who will mourn his passing. He was a member of the United Church.

The body was sent by the Belleville Burial Company to Stratford where interment will take place.

LATE JOHN McKENNA

(Contributed)

PENN YAN, Aug. 28.—Funeral services were conducted on Monday August 22nd at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James J. McKenna of 212 Hall Avenue, Solvay, for John McKenna, 26, popular milk tester for the Schuyler-Yates Dairy Improvement Association, who died last night of injuries received when he lost his balance and fell with his head on the rail of a rowboat from which he was about to dive into the Keuka lake.

According to word received here, Mr. McKenna was swimming in the river near the Hemminger farm, one mile south of Plainville in the Plainville-Jack's Hill Road with Donald and Joseph Haney of Belleville, Ont., R.D. The boys obtained a rowboat, and went out into the river and were nearly in the center when Joseph or Haney dived from the boat into the water.

Falls to Rest

Donald Haney, who was roving the boat, said that McKenna was poised at the stern of the boat ready to follow Joseph into the water when his feet slipped and he fell headlong into the boat. His head struck behind the ears struck the gunwale, knocking him unconscious. The Haney boys rowed quickly to shore and attempted to revive him by artificial respiration. Dr. R. L. Faulkner of Bainbridge was called and pronounced the case dead. A preliminary examination indicated that death was caused by a broken neck. Doctor Faulkner believed the youth died a few minutes after the fall.

Mr. McKenna was at the test-er for the dairy improvement association on February 1st, 1930, and made the Yates County Farm Bureau office his headquarters. He lived with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Flynn in Milo. His sudden death was a shock to many of the county dairymen with whom he came in contact.

Barnes Head Praises Youth

W. C. Stokoe, Yates County Farm Bureau manager, said today: "It hardly seems possible that McKenna will not be coming into the office with his cheery greeting. He was liked by dairymen and other friends. His personality was ideal for his position and he got along well. He was taking a day off when the accident took place, he said.

McKenna was one of a family of six children, who spent their early years in Solvay. He was graduated from the Solvay Process Company, John was a member of the class of 1929 at Penn Yan Academy, where he gained prominence in agricultural activities. He was a member of the Jordan prize-winning livestock team and a member of the school band and orchestra. He also took a course at Cornell University to obtain his tester's license.

Besides his parents, he leaves two brothers, Harold and Clarence McKenna and three sisters, Doris, Emily and Jane McKenna.

The young lad who met so tragic a death is the son of a member of one of Belleville's oldest families, a former employee of the Intelligencer. His mother was also for a few years a resident of this city. The sad loss is deeply felt by their deepest sympathy in their deep sorrow.

LATE MRS. BESSIE RYAN

The funeral of the late Mrs. Bessie Ryan was held Saturday afternoon from her late residence, 24 Wilkins street. Many were in attendance to pay their last tribute of respect, to the deceased and to show the sympathy felt for those bereaved. The Rev. H. F. Power assisted by the Rev. J. G. Misener of the Standard Church, officiated, conducted the service at the home and at the graveside in the Belleville cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. B. Hipper, L. Lake, C. Greatrix, S. Symons, K. Canning and G. Vandervoort.

ONE BANDIT A GIRL, GRIMSBY POLICE STATE

Service Station Owner Robbed at Point of Gun

PAIR TAKEN LATER

Girl Alleged to be Dressed as Man at Time

Grimsby, Aug. 29—Good Samaritan service station owner was forced trim his car at the point of a gun on Fairview Avenue early Sunday morning, robbed of $42 and partly disrobed, to impede pursuit by three bandits, one of whom, police said, was a girl in men's clothing.

Last night after long grilling Albert Valencourt, aged 31, of Welland, and Ruby Wilis, aged 18, Penthill, were placed under arrest by Provincial Constable Embleton, charged with robbery while armed, in connection with the hold-up. Police say they have obtained a confession from the prisoners. A third suspect is being sought in Welland.

The robbery occurred at 1.30 yesterday morning. Bowlagas was driving from his service station to his home on Main Street. On Fairview Avenue, he says a car drew up on his left, and a masked man pointing a revolver at him ordered him to stop and get out. He obeyed.

Covered with a revolver in the hands of one of the bandits he was relieved of a part of his clothing consisting of his jersey, driver's license and keys by the other bandit, who also was masked.

Removal of his clothing and ignitkeys was deagned, police believe, to hamper pursuit.

The hold-up was witnessed at some distance by Charles Hamilburg and his daughter.

Bowlagas, unable to pursue the bandits, roused the occupants of a near-by residence. By telephone Provincial Constable Embleton and Chief De Mille were notified. A police alarm was broadcast, Provincial Traffic Officers Jess of Winona and Jones of Beamsville called out; St. Catharines and Hamilton police were notified and traffic on all highways was subjected to close police scrutiny.

At about 4 a.m. Provincial Constable Embleton was approached at the West End Motors Garage by Valencourt and Miss Wilis. Valencourt had a car which the motor car had been stolen from in front of a boarding house in Grimsby. The description of the car, police say, tallied with that of the bandits' auto.

The missing car was later found at the foot of a road about two miles west of Grimsby, and near-by, to police claim, they discovered a suit of man's clothing hidden in the ravine. Following several hours of questioning Valencourt and the Wilis girl were placed under arrest by Provincial Officer Embleton at 8 o'clock last evening.

WATCHMAN WHO NEEDS WATCHING

Alleged to Have Committed 10 Burglaries on Beat

Chicago, Aug. 29—The police say that Charles Aydberg, 34, a watchman who needs watching. It has been the police custom to wear a star while making his rounds and to each night carefully to see that no burglars had entered.

Suspicions yesterday called the police and reported a star decked policeman hauling a heavy satchel in getting into the rear of a restaurant. He was arrested. They said he admitted his intention of committing burglary. Later he also confessed at least 10 other burglaries—on his own beat.

BEAUTIFUL YACHTS SEEN IN HARBOR

Repairing in the harbor on Saturday evening were several beautiful yachts, notable one of which was the property of two American citizens sons of a former well known citizen of Belleville. Those on board were Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Earle of St. Louis, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Earle of Rochester, N.Y. Both are sons of the late Mr. H. D. Earle who was for some time manager of the Bell Piano plant. The party are on a holiday tour and on Saturday came here from Picton. On Sunday they visited relatives in the city. On Monday morning they left here for a trip to Georgian Bay previous to returning to their homes.

BURNED FOR 27 DAYS

Hopedale, Pa., Aug. 29— Henry Morrison, of Hopedale, Pa., has come out of a "grave" which he entered 27 days ago and claimed the record for this type of endurance test.

Morrison was "buried alive" on July 23 and when he emerged Sunday appeared none the worse for his experience. He delivered a brief speech to the crowd which had gathered to see him make his appearance.

Cotton Strike May Effect 500,000 if Weavers are Not Upheld in Requests

Strike Pickets on Duty at 700 Mills on Sunday

NO INTERVENTION

Spending Power of 10 Millions to be Cut in Half by Strike

Manchester, England, Aug. 29.—The cotton textile strike, involving some 200,000 weavers started in Lancashire today without disturbance.

Strike pickets went on duty at some 700 mills, evidence of the biggest industrial struggle in the history of the textile industry, and the most serious industrial strike in Britain since 1926.

Union leaders clung to their strike strength estimate, while both sides waited to see how many weavers would remain workless today. As a result of week-end conferences, a small number of mills reopened with their full complement.

No Intervention

There was no sign of Government intervention as the strike actually got under way. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Sir Philip Thomas, Secretary for Dominions left for Balmoral, Scotland to see the King about the results of the Ottawa Conference. The Prime Minister, however, intimated he would return to London in a day or two, which was an alteration of his plan for a longer holiday in the north country.

The gloomy prediction that more than 10,000,000 people within 50 miles of Manchester will see their spending power cut in half if the textile strike becomes general, was made by Alderman George Tht, Deputy Mayor of Manchester, who initiated conferences last week in a vain effort to circumvent a walkout over wages and working condition.

The failure of these meetings resulted Saturday in orders for 200,000 weavers not to return to work when the shooters called to mill operatives to their tasks throughout Lancashire today.

Rev. H. Davidson, Deposed Pastor Holds Open Air Service to Aid Appeal

Shiffley, England, Aug. 28 (CP) —Using a gramophone to softly music from hymns, the Reverend Harold Davidson, the barred Rector of this parish, fulfilled his promise yesterday and held an open-air religious service attended by 300 persons.

From wearing a lounge suit and a collar, he emerged from the rectory to the lawn, where he had carried the phonograph. He had been forbidden by the Bishop of Norwich to officiate within the church after being found guilty of immorality by an Ecclesiastical court.

Standing as a plain table Mr. Davidson led the singing and read the Anglican confession for the 14th Sunday after Trinity as well as the Apostles' Creed, then he preached a short sermon and took a collection for his appeal fund.

NEW COMMAND FOR VETERANS

Belleville Men Appointed on Executive of New Branch

Toronto, Aug. 29—While many may have lacked the sensitive ear of the musician, there was no lack of unbounded enthusiasm at the meeting of veterans in the Garrison Mess on Saturday afternoon when the Ontario Provincial Command of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada was officially organized, as authorized by the Dominion Command at Ottawa last month.

Stephen Jones, who was elected President, stated that, so far as he and the other executive men whom him were concerned, they had no idea of undertaking a job for Government "jobs." There have been far too many in the past going into veterans' organizations with the idea of getting a job from Government department," he declared. "I do not believe creation should be made for appointments or anybody until we are sure of our ground. We have a good enough cause to fight on its merits, without getting into trouble."

Comrade McCully, President of the Montreal branch, in the course of a brief address, strongly emphasized the need of a powerful, virile Independent organization of veterans." They had, he said, their problems now than they had had at any time since the end of the war.

Controllers James Simpson and W. D. Robbins both joined in wishing the veterans success with their new organization, and both declared themselves as being behind anything that would better the condition of returned soldiers.

Representative were present from Bradford, Belleville, Hamilton, Trenton, Trent Lock Branch, East Toronto, Corps of Commissioners, Riverdale, Oakwood, P.P.C.L.I., Royal Grenadiers, and Toronto No. 152. A number of veterans from the United States were also present.

The officers elected are as follows: President, Stephen Jones (Toronto); First Vice President, H. Cotterell, Hamilton; Second Vice President, G. Spafford, Belleville; Third Vice President, C. Cross, Bradford; Hon. Treasurer, J. F. Worrell; Hon. Secretary, Lieut.-Captain C. R. Nash; Representative of Naval Veterans, C. Hall.

The Secretary of Belleville Branch is C. C. Bellinger, who was elected to the executive.

STEAM ROOM YIELDS BODY

Charles Johnson, Toronto, Burned to Death by Steam

Toronto, Aug. 29—Charles Johnson, 55, this city, found dead in a steam room of a Steam bath company here yesterday was burned to death by steam, Dr. R. H. Frankish, provincial coroner, said here after an autopsy.

Johnson's body was found by an employee of the company about two and a half hours after he was seen entering the steam room. The temperature of the room was probably about 200 degrees, Frankish, coroner Dr. J. Lazion Watson said.

Following the coroner's investigation, the assistant coroner ordered the steam bath place closed until it is examined by government inspectors.

SIX CENTRES ARE CHOSEN

Toronto, Aug. 29—Ministers and laymen of the Methodist Church in Canada will meet at six centres in Ontario and Quebec early in September to consider missionary and maintenance fund activities. The conference will be held on the following dates:

London conference at Stratford, Sept. 6 and 7; Hamilton conference, Guelph, Sept. 8 and 9; Toronto conference, at Brampton, Sept. 12 and 13; Bay of Quinte conference, at Trenton, Sept. 13 and 13; Montreal and Ottawa conference, at Montreal, Sept. 8 and 9.

SACRAMENTO WATER-FRONT SWEPT BY FIRE

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 29—Fire resulting in damage estimated by steamship officials at $600,000 swept Sacramento's the business river waterfront here yesterday after an explosion aboard the river steamer Flora.

The blaze water craft burned and drifted down the river, spreading flames to wharves along the shore. Thousands of spectators gathered as the flames leaped from boat to boat, igniting gasoline and oil on the river.

Several persons, eager to save their household homes, swam out into the river stream and cut loose the mooring from their vessels.

GORDONTRAVIS ONLY BRUISED

Knocked Down by Car on Station Street on Saturday

A minor motor accident was reported at the police station Saturday afternoon when Morton Weese of Redeemerville reported that he had struck a boy with his automobile and ran over him on Station Street at noon Saturday.

Mr. Weese explained to the police that while he was driving his car west on Station Street, Gordon Travis, aged 7, of Station Street had darted across the street running from south to north. The little Travis lad ran out from behind another car which was proceeding eastward and before Mr. Weese could apply his brakes the little boy had been knocked down and run over by the car. Mr. Weese was travelling rather slowly at the time and his car stopped in a very short space. He immediately got out of the car and ran back to ascertain the result of the injuries received by the accident by the time Mr. Weese got out of the car, the little Travis lad had gotten up and was running into his nearby home, however.

Mr. Weese followed the lad into the house and after ascertaining that he was not slightly cut about the head and face reported the accident to the police. No action was taken.

FOUR PLANES IN AIR DERBY

Race Towards Cleveland For $15,000 in Prize Money

Los Angeles, Aug. 29—Roaring into the dark skies at short intervals before the coast four small bullet-like planes shot toward the National Air races at Cleveland, Ohio, in quest of $15,000 in prize money.

The pilots of these speedy craft were Roscoe Turner, Hollywood; Clarence Chamberlin, Bellefonte; Mrs. Haizlip, St. Louis and Les Schwamstedt, Detroit. They planned stops enroute to refuel.

A fifth plane, piloted by Claire Vance planned a non-stop flight with a cargo-carrying plane of his own design.

Vance, with a slower plane, carried no additional time that he might reach the Ohio City by 7 o'clock today. The deadline for those competing for prizes. Vance, however, said he didn't expect to win. He wanted to demonstrate "the fastest cargo carrying plane in the country."

"PAL" EXEMPT FROM TAXES ALL HIS LIFE

Leavenworth, Wash., Aug. 29. —His head high, "Pal," a 5-year-old collie, trotted through the streets of this community, the hero of the hour, and was free for life.

"Pal's" 10-year-old master, Roy Welch, clung to the rope around a cow's neck until the animal dragged him into the swirling Wenatchee River. The dog leaped into the stream, clung Roy by the suspenders and dragged him to shore. The Town Council gave the collie a license for life when it was learned the dog-catcher had been searching for "Pal."

MODERN FREIGHT SHED OPENED AT PT. ARTHUR

Port Arthur, Aug. 29.—The most modern freight shed on the Great Lakes was opened when the steamer Hanover, of the Canada Steamship Lines, docked Saturday at the new Canadian National Freight Shed No. 3 which replaces the one destroyed by fire last August. The big steamer had loaded 750 tons of flour to be taken east. The new shed is 840 feet long, and is steel wide, equipped with automatic fire sprinklers and modern conveniences for the handling of the package freight.

CONTROVERSY NOT OVER YET

Dogs Should be Used Says Middlesex Association

London, Ont., Aug. 29.—The Middlesex Game Association today challenged the view attributed to Hon. George H. Challes that the agitation against the ban on dogs in deer hunting has blown over.

The association is calling a meeting to renew the argument, meanwhile claiming through John Puttenbrough and Inspector Thomas Lucas, who are members of the executive, that the dog ban is a conspiracy to provide jobs for game guides living in the North. Feeling in Western Ontario is bitter, Inspector Lucas, acting chief of police, stated today. He expressed belief that many summer hunters will not go North this year.

"We cannot understand," he said, "why the Government set up the Black Committee at great expense to report on the question and then enacted a law against the use of dogs without waiting for the committee's report."

The Inspector disputed the chief arguments against the use of dogs. The death of the claim that dogs ruin pursue deer till they plunge overboard into frigid lakes and rivers, and later die of pneumonia. He and Mr. Puttenbrough agreed on the theory that the agitation rests on the northern idea of furnishing guides for the natives at $5 or better a day.

The American tourists have encouraged this sort of thing," said Inspector Lucas, "but the main idea of the average guide is to take you into the woods at so much a day and keep the deer away from you."

POLICE COURT

On a charge of vagrancy, George Jones, address unknown, was sentenced to serve ten days "on the hill" by Magistrate Mikel in Saturday morning's police court.

It was alleged by the police that Jones had procured a meal at a local restaurant and did not have the necessary money to pay for it. He was taken in the police station on Friday afternoon, later being called to get out of the city.

Jones evidently refused to leave the city as he was picked up by the police in the neighborhood of the same restaurant late Friday night, when he was again raising some disturbance. He pleaded guilty to the charge.

Fraser Armstrong, who was arrested as he was attempting to break in the Grimsby police station on Wednesday evening, also appeared before His Worship. Armstrong asked whether he was guilty or not, the accused man tried to allege that he was intoxicated. His case was enlarged until Monday when he will also be charged with stealing a silver knife, fork and two spoons from a local restaurant. Armstrong comes from Kingston.

Dorland Hunkins pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing gasoline from a local wholesale gasoline company. The case was remanded for one week for sentence so as to give the police a chance to check up on the case. There have been numerous reports of the theft of gasoline in Belleville of late.

A local woman appeared before His Worship and pleaded not guilty to a charge of getting a dress under false pretences. So as to give the young lady a chance to procure a lawyer and defend herself the case was enlarged until next week.

Frank High, 175 Mary Street, reported to the local police headquarters Saturday morrfing that a car had been stolen from his back yard some time during the previous night. As the car had no timer on the engine it was necessary for the thief or thieves to have the key to start it. Later the car was found abandoned.

TRANSIENCY A MENACE

Transiency which has been accentuated during the past several years has become so great a problem as to be dealt with under new regulations. Those who move from place to place in search of work and who belong to the hobo or tramp class are to come under a uniform planning for relief. Hitherto there has been no standard policy by municipalities. Preparations have been scattered and unlinked.

The transient group has caused trouble to railroads and railway crews, has caused accidents and created danger. Other unfavorable developments are the soliciting of rides on highways and dangers involved; practice of panhandling which is increasing in the business sections of all the larger cities, begging of meals at residences which is also increasing, the anxiety caused by the presence of the known and unattached men in the community; the marked evidences of deterioration in capabilities and character and the grave effect of irresponsibility, the tendency toward crime offered by indigency, idleness and being in a strange community.

A policy has been planned which is more agreeable than the hitherto hit-and-miss method. There is a plan for special and systematic provision within the new municipal relief system for food and lodging of this single unemployed class in need of relief with prohibition of begging at doors of houses and of soliciting of money on the streets on the sound basis that provision is being made through the municipality with the assistance of the provincial government for the care of all who are in need of direct relief.

It is planned to have interment farms in suitable localities in the province with programs of work for those who refuse co-operation and thus become misdemeanants. The police will be asked to assist in enforcing regulations against transiency. In addition a thorough going classification of unemployed single men from the standpoint of training, work experience and capabilities in which welfare department and employment offices will establish close co-operation for the interchange of information of all kinds relative to placement of men in suitable employments.

Transiency is a growing menace according to the advisory committee and a new residence policy is demanded.

Some of these recommendations are suitable not only to the present situation but to the normal times which are to come. The tramp and panhandler problem must be faced once and for all. Even in the most prosperous times there are large numbers of men who will not work and in some way manage to get help. Municipalities must not have to carry year by year and year out a load of loafers whose winters wants are always pressed. With this class out of the way, public givings towards those who are in distress from ill health and misfortune can be increased.

In normal times men who will not work and who should be made to work can be taken care of. Now they are going to be taken care of during the coming winter in internment camps. Most people will hope that these camps will be dropped when the depression lifts. Such a threat to transiency would take out of the picture some of the romance of "shunning."

At the present time much has to be done and it is well that there should be united action. Some municipalities have perhaps shifted the burden off on some others. That will not be allowed to continue. The reasons are clear — first humanitarian, and then social and economical. To have transients decline in a sense of responsibility is one of the greatest threats of this situation. Deterioration cannot be allowed to develop.

CONVERSATION

There is hardly a vestige of conversation left in America. Yet, what talkers people are!

Perhaps he might say, if asked, that we speak too much before we think, for the sentence following the one above quoted is: "Why use three times as much as needed to have any meaning."

No one ever hears the question, "so familiar in Europe," "What was the subject of conversation at dinner last night?" The Canon thinks the question would be as preposterous as if one were to ask, "What was the subject of conversation at your dance?"

There is another kind of talk, tho, in which we do not declaim:

We have been admitted a few times to club deliberations, and I have retained a vivid memory of the capacity which American women show for knowing their minds and for expressing themselves lucidly, tersely, and courteously. This shows that national habits are often inexplicable, for the same women, a moment after their deliberation was over, would take their part in a brain-racking chorus of multitongued, wild but seem to inconvenience them in the least.

"American voices are accused of being shrill, although their natural quality ought to make them rather lower-pitched than the British falsetto, but how can any one avoid shrilliness in a bird-market?"

WHEN THE MOON ROSE

By Aline Michaels

When the moon rose my love's hand lay in mine;
I drew her closer to my embrace.
Ah, never was there night so near divine,
And never moonlight touched so fair a face!
The world grew dim and very far away:
We two alone were all in all, that hour
When circumstance had lost its wonted sway,
And time was mocked, stripped bare of every power
By threats of life unmoved and unalarmed.
We saw our dreams fresh-flowered for us to clasp,
We knew no fear, against all evil armed:
We knew no hope; our heaven was in our grasp!
When the moon rose I held my loved one's hand
And we two dwelt in an enchanted land.

CANCER AND TUBERCULOSIS have yet to be conquered, and the scalps of these dread diseases hung with those of diphtheria, smallpox and other malignant diseases which have been mastered by science and research after years of study and sacrifice, human life included. Two eminent scientists have asked for artificial lightning bolts of millions of volts to split the atom, gave a demonstration of how they have mobilized this tremendous energy in the treatment of cancer and tuberculosis. Dr. Fritz Lange and Dr. Arno Brasch, "the atom splitters," and Professor Ludwig Hallenradter, cancer specialist, have invited 130 persons to the laboratory of German General Electric plant for a demonstration of the "Pathodic ray" in what they announced to be "the termination of experiments with cancerous growths in animals."

WITH EVERY EVIDENCE of good weather Belleville Fair Week should set a record for attendance and receipts. This year, more than ever before the officers have bent their best efforts to making the exhibition a memorable one, and it now remains for the hearty co-operation of the citizens of Belleville to make this year's exhibition the best ever, and that in a year when the officials were approached from the business of putting on the usual exhibition with rather dubious reflections. Belleville Fair is going to be a success, according to the optimistic officers "The Rebirth of Prosperity and the Burial of Depression," a slogan which, if generally adopted, should win the world rapidly back on the smooth road of contentment and confidence which leads direct to a general reawakening of industry and commerce. Belleville citizens should be proud of this fine fall exhibition, located here, a Belleville institution, but serving the whole Bay of Quinte district — pride should lead to enthusiastic support and that means attendance and investing in sufficient tickets to keep the entire family or some members of it at the Fair every day.

× × × ×

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, but a prominent official of the Belleville Fair informed the writer that if the fair officials looked to the Belleville citizens for support they would fall far short of making the Fair the attraction it should be. That of course, is applied to past years and surely will not apply this year. The best support the citizens can give is in the matter of attendance, enthusiasm for the fair and loyal boosting. It is said that there are people living in Belleville who have never contributed one five cent piece for Belleville Fair and have never set foot inside the gates. That is hardly believable in a city like Belleville where folks generally are quite proud of their home town and all of its activities. Snap out of it, you sleepers, awake to your opportunities, this is Belleville Fair Week; let's celebrate this annual event in good style so that visitors will know we are up and coming, a real live citizenry of a real live community. Celebrate, decorate business places and residential sections with flags and bunting, and everybody grab that Belleville smile, big, broad and handsome, and keep it there Monday morning at sunrise and keeps shining until Saturday night long after sundown. Smile, smile, smile and let Fair visitors see that this is one happy, optimistic burg, full of pep and faith and courage, and confident in the prosperous future of Belleville, the Dominion of Canada and the British Empire as a whole—SO PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES IN YOUR OLD KIT BAGS, AND SMILE, SMILE, SMILE.

PERSONALITY IS DEVELOPED THROUGH PETS

Children's Ego Strengthened by Possession of Animals

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

If you do not own a pet you owe it to your self—one of the greatest joys of life. You have deprived yourself also of a friendship that actually has helped the world of good.

Every human being possesses more emotion than he can exhaust upon human beings. Even up. Minds of 51, if not most of it, behind us which we have been unable to use, are never called forth. When you see a roaring play or motion picture, for instance, you realize how emotional you really are. Well, perhaps can bring out a great deal of this emotion, too, and giving expression to the type of emotion they call forth is distinctly beneficial.

A cat, a dog, some rabbits, even white mice and gold fish, can be mighty congenial company. Some of these animals are fun for fun keeping snakes. Many wild animals can be tamed, too. The more unusual the pet, the greater is the thrill of having it.

A pet brings affection to therefore and fosters kindness and companionship. Here we consider that a starving man often has divided his last morsel of food with his dog. We realize at once how really powerful the attachment is that can exist between the master and the dog.

That is why giving a child a pet is such a strong educational force. It brings out the best in a child. It teaches him that his human superiority can be turned to good account. It helps him to be interested in something living outside himself. It develops unselfishness and thoughtfulness, and it amuses him hugely.

Having a pet animal around the house tends to enhance the ego of a child and to develop in her or her feel superior. Witness how happy a child will feel when you pet a dog over you and wags his tail when you enter the house; and if you can manage a horse, or make an animal obey you, you feel at once that you have promoted to something. The larger pets therefore, are an excellent method for that famous inferiority complex. That, by the way, also takes an abnormal. It is not uncommon for a woman, usually unmarried or alone, to develop a fondness for pets to keep and feed a dozen or more stray cats or dogs. Such extreme behavior suggests a neurotic tendency, a sort of self-punishment for fancied sin or often unconscious wrong-doing. The individual in question does not realize why she is so motivated. Over-kindness, however, often is explained by such mechanisms.

Another tendency to be depicted is that of certain women to fondle much over a pet, when the family is neglected in the matter of affection. Such a woman usually doubtedly substitute dog love for love of children. Often it is not because they cannot have children, but because they think they do not want any. This is frequently the case.

If you already have one or more pets you know how to appreciate them. If you have none I would strongly advise you to procure one by supply the deficiency and find out.

Children particularly love pets and they, in turn, like children. The two seems to understand each other. Give your children, then, at least one pet, even if it is so shy a mare as a canary.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Men tend to wear too much clothing and clothing too thick. This is partly due to conservatism and partly to carelessness. Improvement in clothing habits comes with efficiency and is often a cause of chronic irritability.

METHOD FOR CONTROL SEX BEFORE BIRTH

Use of Lactic Insures That Baby will be Girl

77 FROM 78

German Scientist Offers Experiment Results to Genetists

Ithaca, N.Y., Aug. 29.—A method by which parents may control sex of their children before birth, described as successful in 77 out of 78 trials, was reported today at the International Congress of Genetics.

It involves use of lactic acid to insure that the expected baby will be a girl, and bicarbonate of soda, an alkaline, to produce a boy. The method was worked out by Dr. Leo Unterberger, of Koenigsberg, East Prussia, and was described here by Dr. Jacob Sanders of Rotterdam, Holland.

Boy babies were born to 77 out of 78 German women who used bicarbonate of soda, according to Dr. Unterberger's directions. Dr. Sanders said that the emotion they recently had had one or more girl babies, and had expressed a desire for a male child. The woman who used the method unsuccessfully believed it failed because of low directions.

Twelve of the same method on rabbits, the use of lactic acid produced litters with only as many females as males and bicarbonate of soda produced the proportion. Sugar reversed the proportion. Sugar converted acidosis and the lactic acid and soda produced respectively 11 males and 10 female and three males to one female.

Possibility that use of method on human plants may grow, bigger and juicier tomatoes was shown in an experiment by Dr. Sanders, he said today. They were shown growing tomato plants with one group which had been changed by "spraying" radium rays upon the genes, or heredity carriers, in their parents. Similar methods may be used to improve the tomatoes themselves, he said, but this time, said Mr. Rhodes.

It is now possible to plant a corn field in which the entire crop matures at so nearly the same time that only one picking is necessary, Mr. Rhodes said. This type of corn, developed by careful breeding, is of special benefit to the canning industry.

Nasturtiums that have a sweet odor, produced by treating cuttings of ordinary nasturtiums, and crazy to ordinary nasturtiums, and cabbages, melons and beans especially true to their disease also were seen by the geneticists.

Landa at Nerepis, Near Saint John And Will Refuel

Saint John, Aug. 29.—(CP)—Captain J. A. Landa, Montreal motored this morning to Nerepis, 18 miles from here, where he landed his plane from New York late yesterday afternoon. Fog that prevented his flying from Boston ceased today and until 5 it lifted it seemed doubtful that he would be able to fly the ship back here for refuelling before continuing to Harbor Grace.

The Captain was still at Nerepis ready had had one or more girl babies, and had expressed a desire for a male child. The woman who used the method unsuccessfully believed it failed because of low directions.

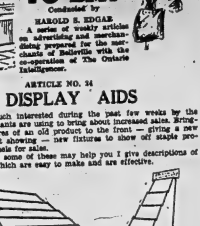
ADVERTISING for the MERCHANT TO-DAY

Conducted by HAROLD S. EDGAR



A series of weekly articles dealing with advertising and display prepared for the merchants of Belleville and District by The Ontario Intelligencer.

ARTICLE NO. 14

DISPLAY AIDS

I have been much interested during the past few weeks by the methods some merchants are using to bring about increased sales. Some of these are new (serious to the merchant) product to the front — giving a new product a prominent showing — new fixtures to show off staple products open up new lines, etc.

To the end that some of these may help you I give descriptions of some few fixtures which are easy to make and are effective.

To display greeting cards or postcards, a stand using a series of set back steps as shown in Figure 1 can be made to go on top of your counter or on a stand of its own. It is constructed of stained wood in a series of steps with a two inch tread and a four and a half inch riser. Length depends on the space available. A wooden dowel rod is fitted at right and fastened at the ends. The whole is enameled white. This rod is used to hang the cards on one end of the counter.

Display cases for dresses or cards or suits are expensive to buy, but serviceable stands can be built using the one of the most widely used is sketched to figure 2. Make the bottom elbows with wood and insert casters so that the stand can be easily moved.

Many have proposed plans to display these items but when you pay for themselves in the time saved by not having to bring out several boxes or bundles to show your customers your different styles.

Paint all your display stands, including these built of pipe. Neat appearing stands will aid in making sales, as they will help to show off the goods displayed.

Look over your stock. Some items are many items which given a better display will produce many additional sales.

NEXT WEEK—FURTHER AIDS IN DISPLAY

Mr. Edgar will be glad to answer questions in this column, if readers will address their communications in care of the paper. Confidential replies can be arranged through the editor.—(Copyright).

Starting from the Rossmore shores, near the Bay Bridge, the calf entered the water and commenced swimming in the direction of Belleville. Several boys who had been swimming in the vicinity of the Rossmore shore, noticed the animal

YANKEES AND CUBS CLOSE TO PENNANTS

Yanks Have But 18 And Cubs 22 Before They Are "In"

STILL WINNING

Cubs Win 10th Straight And Are Playing Real Ball

(By Baker W. Baker Associated Press Sports Writer.)

If you're interested in mathematical possibilities the New York Yankees can clinch the American League flag with 18 more victories while the Chicago Cubs need 22 to assure themselves of the National League pennant.

Here's how the leaders in each circuit stood today:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Club	Won	Lost	To Play
Yankees	75	39	36
Athletics	73	49	32
Senators	71	49	34

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Club	Won	Lost	To Play
Cubs	71	40	30
Pirates	66	50	28
Dodgers	65	50	29

This the Yankees—if winning 18 of their remaining games—can obtain regardless of what Philadelphia accomplishes. Washington is in the second most dangerous position, for the Senators' unbeaten rally will be eliminated as soon as the Cubs win 30 games. It must be remembered too, that each time their closest rivals win a game the Cubs and Yankees will need one less victory to clinch.

The Cubs continued their mad dash through the baseball circuit yesterday, nosing out the New York Giants in the latter 18th successive triumph. Kiki Cuyler drove in four runs with a single, home run and long fly. The latter blow knocking in the game winning run in the ninth. Brooklyn's hopes took a sharp drop as the Dodgers lost two decisions to the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 and 6-4. Dizzy Dean won his third game in five days in the nightcap although he was relieved by Sylvester Johnson in the ninth.

Cincinnati and Philadelphia split into well pitched games, the opening going to the Phillies 2-1, and the second going to the Reds 3-2, on Americus League.

The Yankees maintained their 10 1-2 game lead in the American circuit by defeating the Boston Red Sox, the Chicago White Sox. The Sox won the first game 8-5, but Ted Lyons held the Yankees to five hits, but dropped the second 12-0 when New York collected 12 hits. Babe Ruth hit a homer in each game to help his season's total to 30.

Cleveland waved seven runs in the first inning to win the first game from the Boston Red Sox, 10-1, but dropped the second 4-3. Johnny Allen won the latter game in the 11th inning. Detroit pounded out a 7-2 victory and Connolly her, 11 hits and won a 15-7 victory over Washington.

O.B.A.A. SENIOR BASEBALL RESULTS

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—Results of the games played Saturday in the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association senior championships were:

Guelph Leafs defeated Toronto Beaches 11 to 7.

Toronto Danforths defeated Moodie Tigers of Hamilton 7 to 6.

ONE OF THE BEST

One of the best field generals in baseball is Alex Ponton, coach of Senator Beach hurling aggregation. He first broke into the game with the old Parkdale team, then he played with the C.N.R.A. and then to the Argonaut club. He played flying wing with Argos until the Depression forced the Balmy Beach Club. He played with Canadian rugby from 1928 to 1930 when he became the coach of the team. Besides 35 years of age, Ponton was originally a sprinter before turning to the pigskin racket.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

In last week's excitement of baseball we clean forgot the Belleville Fair.

According to all reports about town the 1932 edition of the Belleville Fair is to be, by far, surpass anything ever achieved by the society in previous years. Early this morning we journeyed up to the fair grounds to have a look-see, but we were informed by the police that we were pretty fine looking steers and that we were ready for the starter's word "go". Secretary Dick Ketcheson assured us that there are more horses due to come in Belleville today and tomorrow. He predicted the largest fight of horses ever to start at a Belleville Fair for 1932. Atta boy, Ketch.

As an added attraction the fair board are introducing a man's softball tournament for surrounding districts to come to compete in. There has been a fine large silver trophy donated while other prizes will be added for this feature. The date is expected be complete in the this tournament are: Consecon, Centenary, College Hill, Cannifton, Victoria and Belleville. Accordingly to these to authority the play will be of the knockout type. That is when a team loses game they are eliminated from further competition.

In the first game to be played at 3.30 p.m. Tuesday, Victoria and Centenary hook-up. At 4 p.m. Tuesday College Hill and Cannifton battle it out and on Wednesday at 3.45 p.m. the other two teams, Consecon and Belleville meet to play their game. Following Wednesday's game a draw will be made with one of the winning teams getting a bye and the other two playing at 5.45 p.m. Thursday, the winner of this game will play the team drawing the bye at the same hour on Friday. This game will be the semi-final and the winner will enter the finals. Each team is supposed to bring one competent umpire while the Fair board will have a umpiring field in readiness for all games.

Manager Frank Demenico of the Belleville Frail girls softball team was in touch with the promoters of the Ladies' Eastern Ontario Softball Association at Picton over the week end and after explaining that the Frail team had won the toss for the third and deciding game, between them and the Picton Pirates, it was decided to played in Belleville the reply back from Ottawa was "carry on all suggestions until further notified". The team will now play the second game with us to when and where the deciding game will be played.

After leading New Toronto in the fifth innings by the score of 8 to 2 the Kingston Frolics literally fell to pieces and dropped the first game of the O.B.A.A. play, downs by the score of 12 to 8 to the New Toronto aggregation. After having such a substantial lead it is too bad that they faltered so badly. Of course they had a rather strenuous series with the Belleville Nationals and once they get two or three days complete rest, should "take" the Queen City nine in a walk. The Frolics started Hewitt Smith on the hilltop but were forced to call on Chuck Fowler and Tammy Jamieson to try and stem the tide of hits coming from the bats of the New Toronto aggregation.

The third and final punt race of the season is scheduled to take place over the usual course down the bay of Quinte Park on Wednesday afternoon. Taking into consideration that punt racing is practically extinct in this district for some years past they have made a wonderful progress in this line of recreation this summer. It is expected that at least 25 punts will face the barrier Wednesday afternoon. The series of punt races were started early this summer, there were but seven punts in town. Now there are about 15 or 16.

A large number of bowling rinks from Kingston are to be over in action in the east will be present at the Rink Tournament which is to be held in Belleville on Wednesday afternoon. This event is the last of the season tournament to be held at the old Bay Shore Bowling Green on Front St. the bowlers will soon be moving to their new greens at the Fair Grounds.

TABLES TURNED ON TWEED NINE

Havelock Wins 4-1, Scoring All Their Runs in Sixth

TWEED, Aug. 27.—(Special)—Havlock Baseball Club was at home on the local organization on Saturday afternoon and turned the tables winning by a score of 4-1. Tweed scored their lone run in the fifth inning and held their more experienced opponents scoreless until the sixth when they scored all their runs.

Pitcher Ham ran up for Tweed singled and advanced to the bat corner on sacrifices but was left stranded. Havelock was retired in order in the first three innings, not a man reaching first. They threatened in the fourth but were kept out of the score column after getting two men on. A barrage of hits coupled with two charities in the sixth and four runs were chalked up. Marsh Hewitt opened the fifth with a two base hit and scored on a sacrifice by Callahan. The lineups:

Tweed—Freeman rf; P. Merwin ss; Casey 2b; C. Baker cf; D. Smith 1b; J. Marsh 2b; D. Casey lf; Callahan c; Merwin p.

Havelock—Jack ss; Clarke 2b, Campsey p; Hooper 1b; Kennedy c; Voyer 3b; Buchanan cf; Mackenzie rf; Hagerman lf.

Score by innings:—

Tweed..... 000 010 000—1 6 2

Havlock 000 004 00x—4— 8 2

NEWARK AND BISONS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

No Reduction Made in Bears Lead Over Field

ORIOLES SECOND

Baltimore Takes Two Games From Rochester

(By The Associated Press)

It is hard to find anything like a "crucial" series when one team is 13 games ahead of its nearest rival, but the current battle with Buffalo looks like one of the toughest engagements the Newark Bears. International League leaders will run into for some time.

The third place Bisons started right out to make trouble as soon as they ran into the Bears by their final series of the campaign yesterday and Newark had quite a task to get out of the fourth break despite the big margin they had in previous meetings this year and this season.

The first thing Buffalo did was to hammer Don Brennan all around the lot and then hit Ellis Kinder with a three run rally in the same winning streak with an 8 to 2 setback. Brennan went the route but he was knocked for 11 hits and Buck Crouse was the only Bison who failed to get a hit. Bill Cissell, who was the league leaders down with the flash.

In the second battle only the high-powered hitting of Jimmie Hill saved the Bears from more trouble as Fred Fussell hurled a seven hit game. Hill collected two home runs and a double and batted in one run with a single besides his two home drives.

The Bisons gained some honor through their split with Newark but they lost more ground in the league race in the second place. The Orioles, who appear to have had Rochester's number most of the year, took two games, 7 to 1 and 3 to 0, behind Lou Mangum and Lowell Claset. Three runs off Al Shealy in the third inning won the game while Claset, who gave only three singles in winning his 15th game, was in full control the rest of the way.

Baltimore and Toronto had the usual open date.

FINE SHOWING AT KINGSTON

Tweed Tennis Club Wins Seven Events at Tourney

Tweed, Aug. 29 (Special)—Tweed Tennis Club players were entertained on Wednesday afternoon by Kingston Tennis Club. Fifteen events in all were played. Tweed players entered 11 but six and two were unfinished. The club is to be commendable showing for the local club and the fine sportsmanship taken. They were without the services of Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Hubbs, C. Cournoyea, Mrs. T. E. McFarlane, Mrs. Emerson, Clark, and V. Kindred. This made it necessary for the other club members to do double duty.

Miss D. Bowers, Tweed, won from Miss Lachlan, Kingston, 6-1, 6-2.

Miss H. Carpenter, Tweed, lost to Miss H. Coffee, 6-4, 9-7.

R. Rollins, Tweed lost to Doug Grant, Kingston, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

R. Bateman, Tweed, lost to H. Allen, 7-5, 6-4.

W. McGee, Tweed vs. G. McLachlan, Kingston, unfinished after one set 9-7, match unfinished.

Tweed second, Match unfinished F. Calvert and M. Cotton, Tweed, won from Grannan and Carr, Kingston, 6-1, 6-4.

Mrs. Fred Prior, Miller won from Dr. Mylke and R. Chambers, Kingston 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Tweed won from Miss H. Coffee, Kingston, 6-2, 6-4.

Miss D. Gordon and F. Calvert, Tweed lost to Miss D. Bews and Fred Miller, Kingston 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

The players report a splendid time and are very appreciative of the courteous treatment and hospitality of Kingston Tennis Club.

COBL CHAMPS LOSE 1ST GAME

New Toronto Comes From Behind to Defeat Kingston 9-8

Toronto Aug. 29—New Toronto defeated Kingston Frolics 9 to 8, on Saturday at Ulster Stadium, before 1,500 enthusiastic fans. In the first of home-and-home games in the initial round of the O.B.A.A. senior playdowns. The return game will be played next Wednesday in Kingston at 8 o'clock.

Trailing the Central Ontario League champions 8 to 0, in the last of the fifth, and to all appearances completely out of the contention, the West Toronto loop representatives launched a mighty offensive in a net three runs. They continued to press the issue in the sixth and gathered 3 more runs, and finally were successful in the eighth inning in tying the score when Adams singled to right field with two down, advanced on a wild pitch, and later sauntering home with the equalizer when Plummer rose to the occasion with a slashing double. Bill Holdenby's circuit clout in the last of the ninth with two away sent in Terry Dalton who previously poled a mammoth triple and gave the Lakeshore squad a well deserved victory.

"Dusty" Rowe, who took over the hurling end from Jepson in the fifth, turned in a commendable effort. He allowed but seven hits, but three hits off him during the balance of the game, including the winning pitcher for the Ponies went great guns in the early innings, fanning but wavered in the fifth and finally succeeded to the showers in the sixth netting a withering attack on base hits.

DRAW IS MADE FOR TOURNEY

Six Teams to Compete For Trophy At The Fair

As an added attraction to assure the sporting public come receptions the directors of the Belleville Belleville Fair have decided to place on their grounds a man's softball tournament for winning teams in the district.

Six teams have been invited to attend the tournament and compete in it. The teams comprising Consecon, Centenary, College Hill, Victoria, Cannifton and Rednerville. The tournament is of the elimination type, the losing teams advancing to meet the winning teams until only the losing teams dropping out of competition.

A fine large silver trophy has been provided for this event and the prize money will be added. Added attraction will be of great interest to the sporting men of surrounding district. A draw by the committee in charge of the event entertainment has handed out the following schedule. On Tuesday afternoon at 3.45 p.m. the Victoria and Centenary teams of Rednerville, will cross bats.

Each team will be to bring along a competent umpire, while the diamond and scoring will be looked after by the committee in charge. Previous to each game the losing team will toss for the choice of innings. Following Wednesday's events, the winner's bracket draw will be made from the three winning teams. The tournament chairman will announce the draw with the result of a game between the other two teams which will be played at 5.45 p.m. Thursday with the winning team of the first game played Friday at 5.45 p.m.

The tournament has aroused considerable interest throughout the district, with the Quinte Athletic County, and the northern part of Prince Edward. Some of these teams have already commenced, others are complete strangers on the baseball field and will receive considerable to the prestige of the championship of the first Belleville a men's softball tournament has been tried out in the Belleville Fair and providing it is a success it will be made an annual event for succeeding years.

Will Take Unclaimed Cats, Dogs for Ride, Car Pumps Fumes Into Chamber

Unclaimed dogs at the city pound will in future be killed painlessly following the completion of a new gas chamber, it was announced by Thomas Thorne, custodian of the pound has been working on for the past week. The chamber, which is a large air-tight box with room enough to hold two average dogs will depend on carbon monoxide gas from the exhaust of Mr. Thorne's car to destroy the unwanted animals. Cats, dogs and other animals which have stranded in the city with to dispose of will be given a speedy death from the fumes which are conducted into the box from the running motor of the car. Formerly animals had been poisoned or shot.

METAL SHARES STILL STRONG

Active Golds Subject to Some Selling Pressure

Toronto, Aug. 29.—Base Metal shares after a mixed opening, continued strong on the Standard session and Mining Exchange market today, the balance of the list particularly active golds, was subjected to some selling pressure and had an irregular appearance at midday. Volume, totalling 240,000 shares for the first two hours was comparatively heavy.

Thick-Hughes softened under liquidation, dropping another 30 to $3.30. Sisco was off 5, Mining Corporation 4 and Base Metals and Howey a cent.

International Nickel was steady at $11.85 but Noranda and Hudson Bay were up 30 each at $11.75 and $3.70 respectively, and Coast Copper gained 5 cents to $1.05. In the golds Chemical Research fell 10 to $1.30 and Homestead a cent to 71.

MART HURDLES PROFIT SALES

Commodities And Shares Rise Together on Wall St.

New York, Aug. 29—The Stock Market managed to hurdle fresh waves of profit taking to push generally higher today, along with the principal commodity markets.

The copper and utilities were actively bid up in the morning, and under cover of the buying in these groups, considerable selling was absorbed without bull headedness expanded to embrace much of the list after midday. Some of the leading industrials like General Motors, American Can, Du Pont and Union Carbide managed to recover morning losses of a point or so to show gains of 1 to 3 points, but these advances were not well maintained.

Rails dragged sway at the market in evident confidence that the seasonal upswing in the nation's general business would spread out to embrace currently lagging lines after Labor Day. Wall Street nominally awaited the individual reports of Pennsylvania and New York Central to provide better clues to the strength of general business chandise.

The strength of coppers was evidently in response to firming tendencies of prices in the London market, but domestic prices still hold below average production costs in this country.

Produce Market

Toronto, Aug. 29 (Fruit Market) wholesale prices of Canadian fruits and vegetables as reported to the Canadian Fruit, Vegetable and Co. are as follows:

STOCKS PUSH UP STRONGLY

Early Strength in Coppers Extended to Others

New York, Aug. 29.—Enthusiasm wanted in the opening session of the week on the Toronto Stock Exchange, with a dull forenoon session the result. Volume slackened considerably in the afternoon and the price range in this group was narrowed. Golden Power issues featured with gains of over 3 points.

Consolidated Smelters, International Nickel, Port of Canada, C. P. R. etc., were fairly steady or showed fractional changes only. Bell Telephone was off 1-2. Brazilian 5 1-2 off 1 and Page-Hersey Steel of Canada unchanged.

Implement stocks were fractionally higher with Cockshutt Plow adding a new high for the year.

In the Power group, Power Corporation was up 3 1-2 and Quebec Power 2 1-4.

GRAIN PRICES

Winnipeg—Prices on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange at ten o'clock this morning were:

Wheat—October 1 1-8, higher at 43 3-4; December 44 1-4 to 44 5-8; May 7-8 higher at 52 3-8.

Oats—October 3-8 higher at 25 3-4.

Sim's Shows Reach Fair

Early Monday morning the Sim's Traveler Shows moved into Belleville. Special attractions have been added to the midway by Mr. Sim coming direct from the Pacific coast Exhibition, these new rides and shows arrive at the fair ground part of the Sims Shows Monday morning.

"Ely the swiftest and neatest thing on the road in years," said Mr. J. Clarke, director in charge of the midway for the Belleville fair this year. Mr. Clarke pointed out that there would be no less than 5 rides, 3 shows, including a round, ferris wheel, whip, merry go round, Sim's Indian village (all new shows brought from the midway by Mr. Sims include the monkey speedway, monkey on the glass blowers, the prison shows, the Hawaiian show, the mystic maze, at-larger American prizes, a large North American Indian village with various reptiles and the Hawaiian Village.

Director Jack Clarke said that midway are more than satisfied with the midway which has been provided by the Sim's Greater Shows for the Belleville fair to open Belleville Fair to open Tuesday of this week.

BOOTH LUMBER CO. TO OPEN CAMPS

According to information received by Superintendent J. P. Green, of the Government Employment Office, which was carried out today, the Booth Lumber Company of Canada who own 34 limits, camps and mills in Eastern Ontario have announced their intention of opening up all of their camps, which have been closed for some time.

The markets for Canadian lumber has been opened up as the result of the recent Imperial Conference, and as existing stocks of lumber have been almost depleted the re-opening of camps and progression of the mills which has been laid out will necessitate the employment of approximately three thousand men or some time.

TRACK RECORD MAY BE BROKEN

Horses of Class Are on Grounds For Harness Classic

Horsemen of the city had a regular fanning fest over the week-end as they visited the fair grounds and made last minute check of the different stables viewing the race horses quartered here and talking with the several trainers in charge. The race meet in the Belleville Fair this year promises to be the best in the history of the association. This is a time when horse lovers like the horses are here to prove that stabling of Many of those taking part in the Ottawa meet stopped off here before going to Toronto in order to pick up a little oat money, but the going will be tough for any that turn for the wire in the several classes.

Horses, the class of Romona Grattan, Sid Hal; Bacon Lullwater, Mary E. Grattan, Consul Rodd Grattan, Parker Boy, Herman Grattan, Marion Direct, Philco, Margaret Grattan Rod Worthy, Rusko Jr., Sahi Charles, Kana Mylo, Peter Grattan and many others are all ready for the track meet. The grounds present an animated appearance as they perform on the half-mile ring. Besides the outside horses there are a number of local horses that will take some part in the days sport.

Lou Gnot will start in the 2.16 class against Peter Grattan and while Frank Orr will start his two juveniles, Catharine Grattan and Mary J. Grattan the mare owned by Jos. Vaseau will start Lou Irridien and Ben Rowntree. Rowntree will parade a couple of Grattan mares, Lou Gnot and Lee Note. MacDougall, the sensational trotter, will also start in with all hustle. The races will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and should attract a large crowd each day. Greenwood will act as racing agenty and some of the best in training will turn for the Belleville fair. They will act as starter for the three days.

VICS MEET GANANOQUE IN NEXT ROUND

Gananoque and Belleville Victorias will meet in the next round of the International "A" Baseball on the first game being played in Gananoque on Wednesday night. The return game being played in Napanee on Saturday.

The Victorias wanted the second game to be played on Labor Day in the city but the C.N.E. would not allow the switch due to the shortage of gate receipts and a winner in his series. There was also a possibility that the Napanee at the fair grounds would not be in shape so soon after the fair and under the circumstances decided the management decided to play here on Wednesday night. Wednesday game in Gananoque will be played at 3.30 p.m. Standard time, while the game in Napanee will start at 3.30 Standard time.

The Vics have a real smart organization and if they can beat Dorey, the starry left-hander of Gananoque, their chances in the round look exceedingly bright, the umpires for the series have not been appointed.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Mary Faith shook her head quickly. "I, no," she answered. "Mrs. Puckett always has Agnes put some dinner away for me when I'm late. And I'm tired. I'd rather go straight home if you don't mind."

The dining-room windows were dark when they reached the house. Mrs. Puckett, Mary Faith let her, self quietly into the house, hoping that she would speed no one on her way upstairs. But as she closed the front door Mrs. Puckett called out to her from the parlor.

"Mary Faith-Dickie? I just see you driving up in a gray closed car!"

Mary Faith knew that she had been her. Whenever an automobile stopped before the house Mrs. Puckett hurried to the front windows. She had the ears of a fox and eyes in the back of her head.

"Yes," Mary Faith ...e down the hall and stood be...n the ruby velvet portieres that lined the doorway of the parlor. "That was Mr. Nesbit's car. He brought me home tonight, Mrs. Puckett."

He never had before. Mary Faith knew it. Nor did Mrs. Puckett know it. Her eyebrows shot up under the fringe of her bangs.

"Oh—bo!" she said. "So that it is! Married in two weeks! And that's why you've stayed out about half a dozen times lately, I have been told!"

Miss Allie Brock raised her eyes from the game of solitaire that she was playing on the marble-topped table.

"It looks to me like a case of 'out with the old love and on with the new,'" she remarked archly. "That's the way things look to me, Mrs. Puckett."

If that was the way things looked to them it was a blessing said Mary Faith to herself. And in her heart she thanked Mr. Nesbit for driving her home.

"Good night, everybody," she said and escaped from them before they could ask her any more questions.

Her room was unbearable to her that night filled as it was with things that reminded her of Kim. The books they had read together. The pink-sprigged dishes and the etching that she had bought long ago. The scrapbook of recipes and household hints. His picture in leather frame on her desk. His picture.

She picked it up and stood looking at it for a minute or two. Then she opened the drawer of the desk and laid it face-down-ward under some old letters.

And for a moment she stood there, pressing her hands against her heart as if she were trying to deaden the intolerable pain in it.

Once during the night she woke up.

In the darkness everything came rushing back to her—all the unhappiness of the past twenty-four hours.

For one black moment she knew she was sick of herself, of her life, of everything.... Then the merciful weariness of utter exhaustion came over her again and she slept until morning.

September was blown away on a gale that stripped most of the branches in Haliburton Park and tore loose one of the green shutters outside Mary Faith's bedroom window.

Halloween came and there were little pasteboard Jack-o'-lanterns on the tables in Mrs. Puckett's dining room.

Thanksgiving Day brought the first snow and filled the house with the rich odor of sage dressing and roast turkey.

The year before Mary Faith had gone to the Thanksgiving Day football game with Kim, chrysanthemums on her coat and windblown roses in her cheeks.

This year she went to church, alone.

The words of the beautiful service for Thanksgiving kept coming back into her mind all that long lonely holiday: "He healeth those that are broken in heart. He giveth medicine to heal their sickness."

They seemed to have been written justo for her. For time, the medicine that heals those that are "broken in heart," was healing her. Her first anguish over losing Kim had settled down to a dull and steady ache.

Once again she could pick up a book or magazine without seeing Kim's face swim across every page. She could hear the shrill ringing of the office telephone without telling herself that it might be Kim, wanting to talk to her. Sometimes after work she went to the moving pictures with Jean Bartlett and found herself actually enjoying them.

Slowly, slowly, she was learning how to live her life without Kim.

A little after nine on the first morning in December Mary Faith stepped into Mr. Nesbit's office and found it empty.

At ten o'clock when Dan Bassett came upstairs to see him about some orders it was still empty.

This was unusual for Mr. Nesbit was a person of punctual and orderly habits.

At nine every morning he walked into the office. At half past five he left it. On Wednesdays he lunched at the Rotary Club. On Saturday afternoons he played golf at the Valley Country Club if the weather was right. On Sundays he played handball at the Athletic Club downtown.

His car was ordered with punctual regularity, and Mary Faith knew it.

"I'll sign those orders for you, Dan", she said to the shipping clerk. "But I wonder what's keeping Mr. Nesbit. It's not like him to be late, and not to telephone."

At eleven o'clock he did telephone from his house in Rice Valley, thirty miles away.

"Mr. Nesbit's not ankle, Mary Faith," he told her. "The doctor says I'll be laid up here for a couple of weeks. So I'm going to flew to Arizona to bring my mail out to me, and anything else you need. Left in charge of the office. Just go right ahead and anything else you need. Left in charge of the office. Just go right ahead and anything else you want to ask me about."

"No, Mr. Nesbit," answered Mary Faith, who always signed routine checks and orders and looked after things in general when he was not at the office.

Fifteen minutes later Loftus, his colored chauffeur, came walking into her little room with an envelope shoved under his wrist. He carried her typewriter carefully as the huge colored limousine that stood waiting in the street, and rang the doorbells even more carefully as she crossed the icy sidewalk.

"Mighty cold weather for drivin'", he said to her as the car started. "Looks like snow, too, in the streets. "I never knowed Mr. Mark's car to have accident until he was driving it. He shook his head.

"What happened to him, Loftus?" she asked, and her voice was matter-of-fact little gray one," the man explained in his soft Southern drawl. "Mighty soon I heard a horn tootin' out by de gate. It kep' on tootin' and pretty soon I goes to see what's wrong out dere. And dere is Mr. Mark's car, mowed over in de ditch and him settin' on top of it. He made an awful to-do about it."

The Blue Valley road was like a prison river and Loftus drove with it slowly and cautiously. It was almost one o'clock when he turned into a gravel driveway that ran along between high hedges of evergreen.

At the end of it stood a long low house of dull red brick. Smoke rose from its chimneys, giving promise of warmth and comfort within. A white collie came running across the snowy lawn from the field-stone stable.

CHAPTER 7

The car stopped and Loftus opened the door for Mary Faith with a flourish.

"Here we is, Miss Fenton!" he said. "I got you here fu' in time for lunch."

Within the Nesbit house fulfilled his outward promises of warmth and comfort and beauty. A wood fire, crackling to pink embers, glowed and flickered in the long, white-panneled hall. On the mantelshelf Mary Faith saw a note that made her think of Mailbonth Park in June, and the energy under the tent was springy and soft like grayish green moss.

Mr. Mark says for Miss Fenton to come right upstairs to his study, please, ma'am," said the colored housman who had opened the door to her and, taken her typewriter from Loftus.

He led the way up the stairs and Mary Faith followed him.

Mark Nesbit was waiting for Mary Faith in his study at the head of the stairs. He was stretched out in a long chair before the fireplace. A steamer rug was tucked around him and he had a magazine in his hands. But he was not reading it. His eyes were fixed on the doorway when Mary Faith stepped into it. He looked somehow as if he had been lying just that way, watching for her, for a long time.

"Well, here you are," He grinned at her in welcome. "You were such a long time on the way that I was beginning to think you'd gone into the ditch the way I did."

He seemed to be very cheerful about his accident. And it struck Mary Faith that he looked younger than usual with his dark hair rumpled and his soft collar turned in at the neck above his house coat.

"Loftus had to drive very slowly," she said. "The roads are like glass and the wind tried to blow us into the ditch once or twice."

It was hard to believe, in the pleasant warmth of this quiet room, that a wild December gale was blowing outside and that there was ice on the roads and snow in the fence corners.

Azaleas in Dutch pots were in bloom on the window sills and there was a bowl of roses on the white-covered table that was drawn up beside Mark Nesbit's chair.

"We're going to have lunch up here on this table, Mary Faith," he said. And then, without taking his eyes from her face, he spoke to the housman: "Will you please tell Mrs. Nesbit that Miss Fenton is here, Silas? You can bring lunch up as soon as it's ready."

He took the letters Mary Faith had brought to him, and tucked them into a pocket of his long wicker chair.

"Those can wait until we've had something to eat. Move that chair closer to the fire, Mary Faith. I'm sorry I can't do it for you but I can't move out of this chair. It took Loftus and Silas to get me into it."

"Why don't you send in to town for a wheel chair?" Then you wouldn't have to stay in this one room for the rest week or two?"

Mary Faith asked.

"Not that it's an unpleasant place to be.....It's lovely, comfortable, but it's like a stage-setting."

From the depths of a Sleepy Hollow chair beside the grate she looked around at his study. It was a typical man's room—brown leather couch, flat-topped desk, book shelves, fishing rods and gaf sticks in a corner, photographs of mountain scenery on the walls. But it had a cozy look, as if a woman's hand had passed over it, leaving the flowers on the window sill and the brown velvet cushions on the couch.

The door opened and Mr. Nesbit's mother came in.

Mary Faith had seen her a dozen times before during the years she had worked at Nesbits. She was a tall pretty woman with white hair that she wore in a pompadour, bright brown eyes and naturally pink cheeks. Mary Faith had always liked her and her soft southern voice and the air of ease and graciousness with which she wore her clothes.

She had on a white linen dress now, and she was stripping a pair of white cotton gardening gloves from her hands.

"How do you do, Miss Fenton? I was listening for you." She shook hands with Mary Faith. "But I didn't hear you come in. I was in my little greenhouse at the very back of the house, taking care of my orchids. The wind blew a pane of glass out during the night and this morning I found five of my bushes frozen."

"Then you ever tried covering them with five or six thicknesses of newspapers?" cold sightedly asked Mary Faith shyly. "My mother used to have some plants in our dining room when I was a little girl, and I remember that on winter nights she used to let us help her wrap them up in newspaper."

The door of the room opened once more, and Silas came in on his felt soles, carrying a large silver tray. The meal he set out upon the table was simple and very good. Broiled chicken and fresh Park House rolls with butter melting in them, orange salad and coffee in a fat silver pot.

"Newspapers! That's an idea," Mrs. Nesbit murmured as she poured out the coffee. "I wonder if brown wrapping paper wouldn't be better. It's thicker—and it seems to me I have a big roll of it down-stairs."

Mary Faith nodded her head. I suppose it would be better. My mother used newspaper probably because we always had such stacks of it in the house.... My father was a newspaperman and he never came home from the office without bringing a lot of papers with him.... He was brought up on the Kansas City Star and the Los Angeles Herald and the Atlanta Constitution. Some times he even brought home the London Times."

Over the table she found herself talking to Mark Nesbit's mother as she never had been able to talk to Kim's mother. Telling her all sorts of things that she had half-forgotten. Things about her brilliant, independent father who had died when she was sixteen, leaving her mother and herself two thousand dollars and a library of six hundred books.

When lunch was over Mrs. Nesbit went away. Silas cleared the table and Mary Faith got out her shorthand pad and her pencils.

She sat down, her hands clasped at the edge of the table in front of her, and waited for Mark Nesbit to begin dictating to her. He had taken his letters out of the pocket of his chair and was reading them as he filled his pipe.

Suddenly he glanced up from them and his eyes fixed themselves on Mary Faith's eyes with that intent look of his.

"You and I have known each other for four years," he said as if the thought had just struck him. "But until today I didn't know that you father had been a newspaper man. I didn't know anything really about you and your life outside my office. It's a funny thing when you stop to think about it, isn't it?"

CHAPTER 10

Before Mary-Faith could say a word he went on:

"A man in an office trains himself not to take a personal or sentimental interest in the young women he sees there all day long. It's one of the rules of good business that he should see them simply as fellow workers—I think I've told you I've accustomed myself to think of you simply as a valuable assistant of mine and not as the very attractive girl that you are."

Mary Faith looked at him gravely. That had not been Kim's way of looking at her. But she worked in his office.

For an instant Kim's face was in her mind, flushed and sullen as he had seen it that last morning in Hallworth Park. For an instant she could hear his voice telling her more cruelly that he had fallen in love with the Janet-girl in his office.

"And now let's see about these letters...." Mark Nesbit's voice brought her back to the present.

It was three o'clock when she finished her work.

"Loftus will come for you tomorrow morning about eleven," Mark Nesbit told her when she was leaving. "They're not victims of this accident of mine, Mary Faith. Coming out here every day for the next couple of weeks isn't going to be very pleasant for you."

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 16

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Nothing disturbed the tomb-like silence of the treasure chamber. Once again, and, he thought, for the last time, Tarzan closed its massive door. Behind him, Werper rose and stretched his cramped muscles. Then he picked up one of the gold ingots and lovingly caressed it in an ecstasy of emotion. Tarzan dreamed of the wonderful things that lay before him; but there rose to dispel that dream the memory of the old witch-doctor and his warning. And then, in the span of a few brief seconds, the hopes of both these men were shattered. Werper forgot even his greed in the panic of terror — and Tarzan was plunged into total forgetfulness of the past by a jagged fragment of rock which gashed a deep cut upon his head. The thing came without warning. One instant all was quiet and silent — the next Great blocks of granite, dislodged from the ceiling, tumbled into the narrow way, choking it; the walls bent inward by the earthquake. Beneath the blow of a fragment of the roof, Tarzan staggered back against the door, his weight pushed it open and his body rolled inward upon the floor. Werper staggered to his feet when he found himself unhurt. He sought and found the candle dropped by the ape-man, and seeing it, the Belgian's one thought was to escape from this frightful tomb.

Making his unsteady way toward the door Werper saw the body of the giant stretched upon the floor. He drew back in sudden fear; but a second glance convinced him that the Englishman was dead. From a great gash in the man's head a pool of blood had collected upon the stone floor. Quickly the Belgian dropped over the prostrate form of his enemy, and, without a thought of aiding him, and bolted for safety—only to find his hopes dashed.

Announcement Made by Von Papen at Large Gathering

PUBLIC WORKS

Two Billion Marks Will Be Risked to Help Situation

Munster, Germany, Aug. 28. (AP)—Chancellor Von Papen told Germany Sunday the bottom of the depression had been reached and announced a sweeping economic program to set the nation on its feet again. He expects to provide jobs for between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 unemployed.

The Chancellor, he said, does not favor any course which would attempt to make Germany economically self-sufficient, for the nation cannot turn its back upon foreign economic relationships. He promised, nevertheless, "continued moderate regulation of imports."

"Our currency must not be endangered," he said. "We desire no revaluation of the mark. We shall make no artificial experiments.

"We regard personal, private enterprise as the most important source of strength for giving impetus to our economic life. Hence, the (all German) government opposes all interference with the sphere of private economy."

Then he announced his economic projects:

First, extension of public works, such as street-building, agricultural relief measures, the liquidation or regulation of canals, for which 135,000,000 marks has been appropriated. This program would be augmented by establishment of rural and suburban settlements.

Second, revival of private industry with the aim of reducing the thousands of jobless to productive tasks.

Bottom of Depression Reached

"In tackling this problem," he said, "we proceed from the consideration that history gives testimony to the fact that the bottom of the depression has been reached, hence all efforts to overcome the crisis will contribute toward actual revival."

More than two billion marks, he estimated, can now be raised for this program which has been approved by the Reichsrat and Reichstag and should be raised in the following manner:

All taxes of a nature likely to hinder production, such as the Turnover (Sales) Tax, Emergency tax, due between Nov. 11, 1932, and Nov. 11, 1933 and collected at about 1,500,000,000 marks are to be paid in the form of economic life in the form of certificates on which the taxpayer can borrow an equivalent amount from the Reichsbank to be used in his business.

Loans on certificates must be repaid between 1934 and 1938. In addition 700,000,000 marks will be advanced to public industries which have increased the number of employed over their presental total. By this scheme it is estimated it would be give work to 1,750,000 unemployed.

Besides thus supplying new credits, the Government, said the Chancellor, also will authorize employers to reduce, but not below the minimum necessary for existence, and on condition that the wages saved be used for further additional labor. All these measures will be approved on a 18 months basis.

The Chancellor indicated in his concluding remarks that his Government has no intention of retiring.

"The moment has come," he said, "will be devoted to reconstruction along all lines. This work can be accomplished only by the most necessary independent government despite conjured up obligations. To ward God and the nation.

"Imbued with this conviction, I regard it as my duty to ward off interference with this work and influences which in principle of the constitution that political authority is derived from the people cannot be interpreted to mean that this authority would be surrendered to the tactical moves of parties in Parliament."

WEEKEND ACCIDENTS

Toronto Aug. 28 (CP)—Ontario's safety and fatality list stands at six today with four persons perishing in motor car accidents following his life in a steam heated room while another was drowned.

Charles Hill 26, Chatham, was critically injured when automobile in which he and three companions were riding crashed into a diesel near Chatham.

A collision between his bicycle and a motor car at St. Thomas Saturday resulted in the death of George Grandinetti, of that city.

James Craft, 12, was killed at North Bay Saturday by an automobile while Thomas Kosek, 22, Sarnia, died from injuries sustained in a fall from a motorcycle.

The charred body of Charles Johnson, 45, found in a local Turkist steam room yesterday.

Edgar Poole of Iroquois Falls, Ont., was drowned at Australia Beach near Ottawa.

TRUST FUNDS ARE DEPLETED

Further Investigations at University Reveal Alarming State

Winnipeg, Aug. 29— (CP)—Four days before John A. Macleary, university secretary and Church of England chancellor, makes his first appearance in months to answer to theft charges, auditing of books of the two institutions whose funds he controlled had revealed the following facts:

1. That about $100 000 of University or Manitoba's $1,000,000 Endowment Trust Funds remains. The rest has either been stolen or lost in bad investments.

2. The Rockefeller Institute grant of $500,000 donated to the university for medical education has disappeared.

3. The Jubilee Endowment of $130,000 also is gone.

4. Only one trust fund, administered by Macleary as university bursar and chairman of the board of governors, have been seriously depleted.

5. Church of England funds totalling $600,000 have been reduced through irregularities "to an alarming extent", according to chancellor of the Ecclesiastical Province of Rupert's Land.

6. Only one trust fund, one of $250,000, is intact.

The Superannuation Retirement Fund, to which clergy of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Northwest Territories and the Yukon contribute, is over drawn due to strike on the formation of Canada Dominion Church causing grant system it was learned here yesterday.

It is not expected that Major Murray, who was born in British Columbia has now been in England with the British National Radio organization for some years, will be a member if the commission by which the British broadcasting will be supervised. His task is purely advisory. He will give the Canadian Government the benefit of his experience with the highly efficient British system.

Under the report adopted by parliament last month, radio in Canada will be nationalized. A central national commission having paid supervisors and advisory committees in each of the provinces, will assume contro- over the programs. The advertising content in radio programs will be limited to two minutes per hour and entertainment of a high standard will be offered to supplement the efforts of local talent.

No important steps have been taken as yet to get this organization under way but it is believed that with the arrival of Major Murray here during the Fall, the machinery will be put in motion with a view to producing the first national program when the radio season, now in its summer doldrums sets under way again.

ADOLF HITLER NOT TO ENTER INTO CABINET

Von Papen Makes Bitter Attack on Leader of Minority

SUPPRESS UNREST

May Use Force to Bring About Equal Rights For All

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Munster, Germany, Aug. 29—Chancellor Franz von Papen, addressing an assembly of 10,000 agrarian farmers Sunday thrust aside all possibility of receiving Adolf Hitler's National Socialists into a coalition government.

His speech was a bitter attack on the "impulsive recklessness" of the Nazi chief, and in the course of an outline of the present governments economic program, he indicated unmistakably that the cabinet has no intention of relinquishing power for months to come.

Offence Against Justice

Referring to heavy penalties recently imposed by special courts for political violence, the chancellor declared:

"I recognize no principle of justice which is usurped by one class or party as an instrument of combat. That is a Marxist conception which I reject even if it is applauded by the Nazis, for it is a blow in the face of every German and an offence against the Christian conception of justice.

"The impulsive recklessness manifested by the Nazi leader is ill suited to his claims for leadership in government. I do not accord him the right to demand that the minority which follows his orders, for their conditions in Germany nation nor the right to look upon all other Germans as outlaws

Fight Against Unrest

"If in opposition to Hitler I advocate a state based on justice, a real commonwealth of the people and honorable conduct of government, it is I and not he who pursues the aim which the masses of his followers have yearned for in their fight against party domination, arbitrariness and injustice."

The chancellor then planned to the governments determination to administer "equal justice unaffected by political pressure."

"If necessary," he said, "I shall use force to bring about recognition of the equal rights applicable to all Germans. I am therefore firmly determined to stamp out the smouldering fire of civil war and to prevent unrest and political excitement and political acts of violence."

Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 29—Illinois Wesleyan University will accept cattle, hogs, grain or other farm produce in exchange for tuition this fall according to President H. W. Matthews.

The offer of "tuition in kind" is open to home students from farms said they may apply also their offerings on dormitory fees or for a musical education.

Man Weaker Sex Genetists State

ITHACA, N.Y. Aug. 27.— Man, instead of woman, was pictured as the "weaker sex" at the Fifth International Congress of Genetics today.

The male sex, said Dr. S. J. Holmes of the University of California, apparently suffers from a "constitutional inferiority" which causes a higher death rate among males than among females in infancy and before birth.

This rule applies to many species of animals as well as human, Dr. Holmes reported and seems to result from a difference in heredity of the two sexes.

"In many other species of animals the male is the more variable and is relatively short," he said. "The defects involved are a property associated with a different hereditary constitution of males.

"FIRST YEAR" CLEVER AND LEAN COMEDY

Up till last night as far as this critic is concerned, Constance Cummings was the one actress who had captured most fronts going "riding" ories Augustus Bridde in the Toronto Star. Her previous dialogue pictures reminded us that here was one mistress of pantomime who had never been allowed to demi—even when Charles Farrell did halt the talking.

"First Year," at the Imperial, is not only one of the best- acted romantic comedies we've served up to anybody; it is also a wonderful vehicle for Janet Gaynor as a talking actress, and it plays up Farrell as a better actor than he has ever been here.

The story itself is not so much just a comedy of life as it is a comedy of romance and also establishes them as the undisputed leaders of the first rank.

Much of Janet Gaynor's work in that picture suggests the very best that Mary Pickford ever did in pantomime. Her acting is so subdued which is just the coy, lovely wiles of the non- vocal screen actress shown on the screen. She talks splendidly, even at high tempo. Her reading is beautifully modulated. She brings to this picture—whose motif is the eternal triangle—very much of the glamor that made Mary Brevard and Corinne Griffith "Angel".

Farrell, essentially a romantic player, plays the boobish young realtor rather magnificently. At times he is positively boyish, at times even when he is funny in action.

The supporting cast in the picture is full of laughs, runs as smoothly as the best of film dialogue can make it, and it's as clean all through as a baby's new toy—without having a single nonsense.

"The First Year", co-starring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell is the feature attraction at the Belle today and tomorrow. Starting daily, with a funny spy Girl comedy Fox News and a clever cartoon.

FAMOUS HUNT'S "SAXON SISTER"

Two outstanding, singing stars featured together in a romance picture—and neither sings a note!

This is the unusual role in which in John M. Stahl's production of "Back Street", Universal's picturization of the novel of the same name by Fannie Hurst, which comes to the Belle Theatre, Wednesday for three days, matinee daily. The leading roles are those of Irene Dunne and John Boles, both of whom have gained fame as singers of unusual ability.

Miss Dunne appeared on the New York stage in many such musical comedies as "Irene" and "Sweetheart Time" and "Showboat", and seemed definitely headed toward the Metropolitan Opera House when she was placed under contract for motion picture work in Hollywood. But by the time she reached the film capital, the vogue of musical pictures had gone into a temporary eclipse, and Irene Dunne embarked upon the playing of dramatic roles.

Boles, after several years in musical comedy, made his first big screen hit in the motion picture pioneer musical film, "The Desert Song", and shortly became established as the screen's leading singing-er. He sang leading roles in "Rio Rita," "The Call of the West" and other pictures.

Since "Back Street" is a straight dramatic picture neither of them will sing a note.

At The Capitol

NEW MORALS FOR OLD NOW

High-strung, sex-mad youth and old-fashioned parents who refuse to understand the new freedom of the modern generation, provide the dramatic conflict of "New Morals for Old" which comes to today at the Capitol Theatre.

Ralph and Phyllis, a typical brother and sister in the average middle class home, are the two lives of their own, unhampered by parental restrictions. Ralph scorns his father's antiquated business, thinking instead a desire to go to Paris and study art. Phyllis falls in love with Wilson and contemplates running away with him despite the fact that he is not free to make her his wife. Their parents attempt to keep them in the law and consequently there are constant quarrels and recriminations in the household.

Eventually both brother and sister achieve their desires but find them so much ashes in their hands. Ralph fails as an artist and is disillusioned by a disastrous love affair. Wilson, whom Phyllis gave his divorce Phyllis marries him and settles down to a placid domesticity. At last they realize that happiness hasn't been so exciting after all.

The picture, which was adapted from the John Van Druten stage play, "After All" is expertly cast, directed under the able direction of Charles Brabin, who has contrived to make the situations poignant and stirring without losing his sense of humor. It is particularly the acting however, which makes the drama which strikes an immediate responsive chord in the onlooker. Robert Young, as the son who seeks a career and finds it, offers a performance which even his outstanding work in "The Wet Parade" will not surpass. He forms ranks of the screen's younger leading men.

Margaret Perry, who starred in the picture which first brought her role in the screen version, giving Phyllis a glimpse of the more glamorous screen personality. Pretty, blonde and vivacious, Her performance is one of sympathy who breaks her father's heart also proves Miss Perry to be an actress of considerable emotional power and appeal.

That invariably flawless performer Lewis Stone, enacts the father role and the inimitable Beryl Mercer the mother.

$400,000 LOAN IS PAID

Britain Wipes Off Debt Incurred One Year Ago

New York, Aug. 29—The $400,000,000 loaned by the British Treasury a year ago in New York and Paris, in an attempt to preserve the gold standard, expires today. Of the $300,000,000 supplied by a syndicate of bankers under the leadership of J. P. Morgan and Co., none has been in use since April 4, on which date the last of the bills drawn against credit were paid, while all but $50,000,000 of the $100,000,000 has been cancelled. It is this $50,000,000 of credit outstanding that expires here today without renewal.

The French half of the credit consisted of a $100,000,000 overdraft on a syndicate of French banks, which was established early this year, and $100,000,000 of short Treasury one-year notes which were sold to the French public. A portion of this issue has been bought up in the open market. The Bank of England recently has been similarly buying credit for the purpose of redeeming the remainder today.

CHINESE RAID JAPAN'S FORT

Terror Spread Through Key City of Manchuria

Mukden, Manchuria, Aug. 29—(AP)—Planes and bullets spread terror throughout Kirin, key city of Manchuria today after hundreds of Chinese raiders slipped across the line the night and dealt a swift blow at Japan's Manchukuo's military defense system.

Before daylight most of the many small Chinese bands had vanished, but large concentrations of the raiders were reported when only four miles away at Hun Hepo. Early today Japanese planes took to the air with orders to attack them if the Chinese raiders obviously had a well organized plan behind them. Japanese troops were energetically to wipe out the affair. Fighting and bombing continued after daylight in some parts of the city, especially around the wireless station, 200 Japanese had surrounded the place, and planes joined in machine gun fire giving them a hand to hand battle for control.

CRANKED CAR WHILE IN GEAR

Cranking his car while in gear on Pinnacle street, one of the county buildings just before noon Saturday, Norman Johnson, aged eight, fell under and bumper of the machine which passed over him. Ralph Stinson, Sidney, when the car started ahead, jumped right for and came to rest against a large maple tree at the edge of the sidewalk. Mr. Stinson who was fortunately able to sidestep the machine when it started up received injuries to his left leg which was struck with the end of the bumper. Medical aid was not required.

RAILWAY BD. TO RULE RAILS

Hon. R. D. Morand Not in Favor of New Commission

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 30—(By The Canadian Press)—Placing of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways under the care of the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada instead of creating a new commission with semi-dictatorial powers is suggested by Hon. Raymond D. Morand, M.P. for Essex East in an interview today.

While the Duff Railway Commission findings are being carefully guarded and are known even to few inside the cabinet, circles there have been reported that a commission of three to manage the roads is among the recommendations. Mr. Morand said.

He pointed out that the Railway Board now has nearly all the power which would be given the new commission, that the members are thoroughly conversant with railway management and that confidence in having would be made by not having railways and expenses to pay in a new body. He also says there would be overlapping of authority in the two boards and urged that should be avoided as one of the purposes for which the Duff Report come duplication between the two roads.

Merger of the two telegraph companies as well as the two express companies also needs endorsement by Mr. Morand.

PRICES STATIONARY AT MID WEEK MART

Despite the rain which was in evidence Tuesday morning, Belleville's mid-week market was attended by a goodly number of farmers disposing of their wares. As soon as the rain fell, however, the purchasing citizens were not in evidence with the result that prices of all farm commodities fell during the short hours of trading.

Corn could be purchased at the rate of three dozen ears for 25c, while fine looking cauliflowers could be purchased for 10c and upwards according to their size. Other seasonable vegetables such as beets could be purchased for 10c, turnips and cabbage sold for the prevailing 5c rate. Tomatoes brought 10c a peck as did new potatoes, while cucumbers retailed at 10c and upwards.

Fine looking cooking apples sold at 75c to $1.00 a bushel. All kinds of seasonable fruits were also displayed and sold by the various prevailing prices. Eggs remained firm selling at 18 to 20c a dozen.

TRANSIENT IN WRECK IS MAN FROM TORONTO

The unidentified transient who was picked out of the wrecked car which overturned one mile east of Marysville at six o'clock Monday evening, killing the driver, Mrs. Alice Woodin, of Detroit, instantly, has been identified as Mr. Hyman Kawarky, aged 30, of 26 Kensington Avenue, Toronto. His condition from injuries which include concussion of the brain and a fractured left foot, are reported to be serious by Dr. J. J. Robertson, who is attending the man in Belleville General Hospital.

Police here have been informed Kawarky from his bed in the hospital is some of the clearer moments between periods of unconsciousness, when asked as to how the accident happened.

The man who had been on his way west from Toronto, Ontario, was picked up some distance out from the wrecked car by Mrs. Woodin who volunteered the lift to Toronto. His mind after the car left the road at Marysville is said to be completely blank.

His condition is precarious.

Mollison Has Penchant for Farms Prefers Field to Airport for Landing

Sydney, N.S. Aug. 30.—Captaincy of the homeward journey, times a day, the Atlantic flyer's penchant for farmland. Ten days ago the little Scotsman, completing the first eastward solo crossing of the Atlantic, set his Moth plane down in Jim Armstrong's field at Pennfield Ridge, New Brunswick. He was "too tired to go on" and the plowing farmer looked invitingly flat.

Nine days later, flying eastward from New York on the final hop, he sighted Harbor Grace airport, but decided against it. He was "too tired to go on" and the pasture looked inviting flat.

Now, after a rest of three days, he has decided against the airport at Sydney, and will land in a field. Why? Because he likes farmers.

PROPOSALS OF INTERVENTION OVER STRIKE

Case of Compromise Not of One Side or Other Wrong

GOV'T. SILENT

Very Little Disturbance Reported in Strike Area

Manchester, England, Aug. 30.—Some estimates of the extent of the Lancashire cotton strike ran as high as 90 per cent today as the ranks of strikers increased due to intensive picketing at operating mills.

In their effort to make the walkout 100 per cent, nearly the 100,000 weavers in the manufacturing centers of Lancashire, union leaders asserted that by tomorrow night the strike would be a united front.

Manchester, Aug. 30 (CP)—The call for government intervention in the strike of Lancashire cotton weavers grew today with Sir Kenneth Stewart, former chairman of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce declaring the step must be taken sooner or later. "And the sooner the better," he added.

Sir Henry said it was the case of two sides being right and the other wrong. "Neither side is stupid in the dispute. It is a matter for compromise, and the government seems qualified to arrange it. The stoppage shows again the wasteful industry needs overhauling and there are too many cost-raising factions on both sides."

From another quarter came a similar suggestion. Joseph Cooper-tion, former labor member of parliament of the Manchester Exchange division, who holds great influence along the cotton belt, spoke directly to His Majesty at Balmoral Castle that "all classes of Lancashire people look to the united efforts to attempt a settlement of this unique calamity."

Bi-election Stench.

Despite the demands for intervention Sir Henry Betterton, minister of Labor, maintained official silence in the absence of united action on the part of employees and employers.

Estimates differed as to the extent of the strike, which began after nearly a year's dispute over a 10 per cent wage cut, and attempts to spread the system of short weeks and part time. The most conservative estimate was that 112,000 had answered the strike call, out of nearly 200,000 weavers. Leaders of the workers claimed 140,000.

At any rate very little disturbance was reported in the strike area in its sixth week at Burnley, where 7,000 mills are stopped. A number six mills in Manchester and mills are stopped at Nelson and Colne, Haslingden and Wigan.

Chimps and Barbers at Same Game 'Grooming' is a Primitive Instinct Genetic Convention is Told Today

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The barber snipping away at the customer's hair is expressing the same instinct which that prompts a chimpanzee to search his cage-mate's coat for ticks and cockroaches. The instinct is "grooming," a primitive, fundamental trait common to man and some animals, Dr. Robert M. Yerkes, Yale, told the International Congress of Genetics today.

Activities not only of barbers but of hair dressers, nurses, physicians and surgeons probably originated from the "grooming" instinct, he said. Among chimpanzees and other apes "grooming" takes the form of removing foreign materials and dirt from the skin and hair, picking out and destroying parasites, and poking out and thorns, splinters and chiggers that are in or under the skin.

"Grooming" has an unusual confidence, liking, acceptance of fellowship expression to be analyzed as form of relatively dis-interested affection" Dr. Yerkes explained. "Although obviously related to sexual behavior, grooming is not itself a manifestation of sex interest, for it may occur between individuals of the same sex.

Old Sol Shines Upon Fair While Children Throng Thru Gateways

It was Children's Day at the Belleville Fair.

A day of free admissions, roundabout rides, pony rides, bunny hunts and streaked Bibbed faces, smiled, blonde, curl ringlets, strange pellings, Ferris wheels and merry-go-rounds, pink candy floss, luncheons on the grass, even if it was a little damp, free attractions in the grandstand, a day of noise, whoopings and car-free shouts. Why, there was so much you would find out also, that it's the most strenuous day of the whole four days for booth proprietors, concessionaires, officials of the fair, and fathers and mothers who have been coaxed to take the day off and help their wide-eyed offspring enjoy the sights, sounds, smells and thrills of the first day of the best fair in the country.

Promptly at nine o'clock Tuesday morning the gates to the fair grounds were thrown open by the gate-keepers to a rapidly filling second later, tumbling, jostling and pushing their way through the openings went a joyous horde of youngsters intent on appropriating this, their own day, for the full and utmost enjoyment possible.

Early in the morning, even while long lines of little children, big children and fathers and mothers began to eat along the streets, all headed in the same direction, with lunch boxes under their arms and dimes and quarters in their pockets, rain fell in a steady drizzle that threatened to put a quietus on all outdoor activities. Some of the smaller ones turned back, disappointment written all too plainly on their little faces, to wait another day. Later, the rain cleared. Hopes again ran high, and the children set out at eleven o'clock. Blue skies shone in the midst of the dark clouds which reflected gloom on a thousand disappointed youngsters going through the gates increased by dozens more once more the swing of the fair bit its stride which it kept up all the livelong noisy day.

A Lively Day

Through the buildings they raced pestering for samples, poking into odd corners, getting in the way, asking questions, and refusing to be dismayed by anything they saw. When the rain cleared up and the sun shone forth in the afternoon, there were the outside attractions to be visited, and the Ferris wheel and merry-go-rounds stern found their way to the Midway. Nickels and dimes were spent for candy floss, ice cream cones and hamburgers, sizzling off the hot plate which had been a specializing aroma. Balloons, candy, novelties, things dear to childish hearts, coaxed the few remaining coins. A troop of home bags, papers and dolls, carried their way to the stockpens on the sides of the grounds.

But while many of them wandered, the livestock displays claimed others stuck to the merry-go-round where the electrical piano kept up its merry music, and clambered into places where they were warned they had repeatedly had their parents rain even the privacy of the small seat of the Ferris wheel. The Ferris wheel intrigued them with its dizzy whirl, and the aeroplane ride. The "Caterpillar," the "Whip" and other devices also had their quota.

Fathers and mothers were a bit more serious, perhaps, and felt an invitation to call it a day, but not so the children. It was not until the last event, perhaps, and felt an invitation to call it a day, but not so the children. It was not until the last event had been spent, and the luncheon hot-dog reposed in solitary grandeur that they realized that they were willing to call it a day. Tired? No, but perhaps a bit sleepy.

91 Per Cent of Eclipse Seen in Central Ontario

TORONTO, Aug. 30— (By the Canadian Press)—When the period of maximum shadow is reached here by tomorrow's eclipse, the temperature will be down about 10 and five degrees, declared John Patterson, head of the Meteorological Observatory.

The eclipse will be 91 per cent in the tal in Central Ontario districts, he said, and would be at its maximum at 2.27 o'clock Eastern Daylight Time.

Darkness will not completely cover this district. In some other sections of the country where the eclipse is to be total, chickens and birds will probably retire, he said, believing night has fallen. The phenomenon has been known to, sally, however, since the sun will not be entirely covered.

FIREMEN DARE FIRE AND AMMUNITION

Baltimore, Aug. 30—After a bitter battle with flames in Baltimore's most crass-like fire department Armory a fight made hazardous by explosion of the ammunition pits, acting Fire Chief John Kehl announced early this afternoon the blaze was under control.

More than a score of firemen received injuries or were overcome by the fierce smoke.

Several thousand rounds of small-calibre ammunition exploded, the hot metal of the firemen was hit. Ten alarms were sounded, bringing 20 companies to combat the flames.

Grandmother of German Revolution Advocates Impeachment of President

Von Papen Goes Before Reichstag Breathing Defiance

HINDY'S WORD LAST

Frau Zetkin, Communist Leader, Occupies Chair

Berlin, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The impeachment of President Von Hindenburg and the Cabinet of Chancellor Franz Von Papen on charges they had violated the constitution was demanded today by Clara Zetkin, 75-year-old "Grandmother of German Revolution" and a Communist leader, when in the capacity of Senior Member she opened the first session on the new Reichstag.

Frau Zetkin took the chair in pursuance of a custom that the Senior Member of the House shall open each session. Her election by Socialists and their allies have objected strenuously for several days to her selection, characterizing her presence in the chair as an insult to the nation.

Two women Communists were also elected Vice Presidents as a result of the election of Frau Zetkin, 75-year-old "grandmother of the revolution" who ordered in her address a temporary speaker the impeachment of President Von Hindenburg and the whole Von Papen cabinet, for "infringing the constitution."

The Nazis nominated Goering for speaker of Reichstag. The Communists nominated Ernst Torgler and the Social-Democrats presented Paul Loebe for re-election. The offices trad tionally goes to the nominee of the largest party and Goering was elected shortly afterward.

Hitler Party Wins First Office as 'Diplomat of Brown House' Chosen

Berlin, Aug. 30.—Adolf Hitler's National Socialists won their first parliamentary office today with the election of Herman Wilhelm Goering, who has been with Hitler since the "beer cellar putsch" of 1923, as President of the new Reichstag. Goering's election was expected, as the nominee of the largest party.

Through the preliminaries of the opening meeting the Nazis under stern admonition from Herr Hitler himself, sat in silence even when Frau Zetkin, 75-year-old "grandmother of the revolution" ordered in her address a temporary speaker the impeachment of President Von Hindenburg and the Woman Again Leads Way First at Fair

No more striking proof of the pulling power of the Bellevile Fair to residents of the section for miles around could be offered than that displayed at the official opening of the gates at 9 o'clock this morning. To Mrs. Harry Sutton, Nap. area, R.R. No. 7, goes the honor of being the first one to enter the grounds with a paid admission ticket. She entered the grounds at exactly nine o'clock, followed by scores of others who had been waiting patiently, unmindful of the slight drizzle of rain which was falling, to take their place in their own special day. Up to noon gatekeepers reported the fairly fair attendance, which will be multiplied three or four fold in the afternoon with the ceasing of the rain.

Canon Booms While Mayor Starts Fair

Amid the booming of cannon Mayor George C. Tice officially opened the 1932 Belleville Fair following the annual directors' luncheon at 1.45 p.m. Tuesday afternoon.

All was tense and excited previous to the official opening when the directors and all gathered at the dining tent assembled by their worthy President Robt. Mitchell welcomed all present and expressed his personal appreciation to the Parks Board and to the directors of the 1932 fair for their hearty co-operation during the past year.

Mayor Tice was then called on and immediately a silence fell over the gathering when he said "I hereby officially open the Belleville Fair and sincerely hope that it will be a decided success." Cannons boomed, the flag was raised on the fair grounds, a fanfare was then turned on the band played the National Anthem while the Sea Cadets stood at attention in front of the flag raising.

Upon resuming his speech His Worship the Mayor assured the members of the board present that however in the history of the Belleville Fair had the annual exhibition opened under such auspicious surroundings. He pointed out that each and every director was wholeheartedly behind the project and it could not help but be a success for 1932. His Worship regretted the absence of Past President Chas. R. Hanna who as it present confined to his home suffering illness.

In closing His Worship pointed out that the Belleville Fair belonged to the entire community at large and it was with courtesy and kindness that it would attain its objective for 1932. "I predict for the Belleville Fair of 1932, mayor" said Mayor Tice as he closed his remarks amid applause.

Gallery of the speakers' table were other notables such as John Wesse, M.P., Edward Guilford County, W. H. Ireland, M.P.P., W. E. Timmon, M.P., wired his regrets in not being able to attend. Secretary R. H. Ketchenon and other officials of the fair were also in evidence besides those who had previously spoken.

During the luncheon hour the directors and their friends were entertained by the orchestra from the Clifford Amusement Company who are supplying the grandstand performances and both afternoon and night the entire four days of the fair. Mrs. Clifford rendered two beautiful solos which were highly received by the directors and their wives.

The opening day was children's day and at 2.30 p.m. the cannon boomed the official opening note the kiddies by the hundreds had taken advantage for the bigger and better Belleville Fair of 1932.

Harry H. Rhode proposed the toast to "The Visitors" stating he was pleased to be honored in being selected for this important task. The guest chamber is always the best room in the house," he remarked, "and the Belleville fair board wants the visitors to know that the board is offering the best in agriculture and education and hopes that in many years to come we shall all again meet around the festive board."

W. H. Ireland M.P.P. West Hastings daughingly objected to be called a visitor but was not angry when called a guest in the house," he remarked, "and the Belleville fair board wants the visitors to know,

NEWLY ELECTED PRESIDENT OF Y'S MEN HERE

International Officers Pay Visit to Local Club

ADDRESSES MEMBERS

Thank All For Hospitality Shown by Canadian Members

"We must advance, we cannot afford to stand still," was the message left by President-elect Ed. Fisher of the International Y's Men's Club when he spoke, all too briefly, to the members of the local Y's Mens' Club at a specially called meeting, held at Andrew's Restaurant Monday evening.

The meeting was highly honoured in having four personages from Y's Men's International at their special meeting in the persons of Mr. Fisher, newly elected president of Wakefield, Mass., Norton Grimes of Lawrence, Mass., Secretary-Treasurer of Y's Men's International, Frank Cottrell of Vancouver, Pacific Coast district governor, and the Pacific Coast section and Newton Thompson of this city, past President of Y's Men's International.

The out of town honored guests were introduced to their fellow members by Newton Thompson in his usual fluent manner and were later royally welcomed by President Reed on behalf of the local club.

Following the banquet Mr. Fisher was called upon to say a few words and in his usual brief time he outlined the work of the club members for the coming year. Mr. Fisher was a member of the first Y's Men's Club at their recent international meeting held in Detroit, Mich., last week.

Mr. Thompson in his remarks by relating the results of the recent convention at Detroit after leading to the fullest extent and hospitality which he had been afforded in Canada and Detroit, asked that Mr. Fisher pointed out to the members what was expected of them from the International control. He was of the opinion, that the Belleville Club held the respect of all Y's Men's Clubs throughout the world as they seemed to have exemplified their workings through the President Reed, Thompson, during his term of office. The greatest asset, however, pointed out as the Y's Men's Club was but a decade or so old it needed new and up to the minute members.

Landed Work

In closing Mr. Fisher lauded, very highly, the work accomplished by past President Reed, Thompson and asked the fullest co-operation of all members throughout the coming year. Mr. Fisher is a teacher of Economics and History in the High School at Wakefield, Mass., some ten miles from Boston. He has been a member of the Y's Men's movement for some ten years past and is vitally interested in the future of the youth of America, today.

Y's Men Henry Grimes of Lawrence, Mass., secretary-treasurer of the International was next called upon and after leading to great heights Canada's hospitality amongst the host club, both in International Past President Newton Thompson of this city, the club as well as the community should be proud. He pointed out that a remarkable feeling was taken by the delegates following the recent convention at Detroit and that slogan of "carry on" would no doubt be fully disabused upon by not only the club but by each individual member. Mr. Grimes spoke highly on the International feeling which existed between the twelve odd countries which were represented at Detroit, pointing out that through their gentleman's feeling of brotherhood throughout the world was being established. He also touched on the through the Y's Men's movement the fundamental principles inculcated in the Y.M.C.A. were fully exemplified. Mr. Grimes was of the opinion that the Y's Men would see a rejuvenated year in the SURE! FLY KILLS FLIES!

Y's Men's activities throughout the world. In conclusion he spoke briefly upon the great work and high ideals left by Past President Newton Thompson.

Spoke Briefly

Y's Man, Frank Cotrell of Vancouver, spoke briefly and pointed out that the Y's Men were rapidly small and uncultivated at present. He is supervisor over the entire of Western Canada and some of the north western states. He was of the opinion, however, that there was a great future for the Y's Men's movement in Western Canada and after thanking all for their wonderful hospitality left immediately to catch a train for his home.

Mr. B. F. Jennings of the local Y. M. C. A., President-Elect in Licence, Secretary J. E. Shotz also spoke briefly. The meeting was closed by Court Miller, the newly installed president of the local club.

Past President's Y's Men's Emblem, which was presented to him at the Y's Men's International at Detroit by his fellow Canadian Y's Men. As the pin is the only one of its kind in the World, Y's Man Newton Thompson is duly proud of his gift and following the remarks of the various gentlemen spoken to by American fellow members, will be in deserving of the emblem which he now wears.

COUNTERFEIT RING BROKEN

Raid Vancouver House And Seize Equipment Used

Vancouver, Aug. 30.—Royal Canadian Mounted Police raided one house on Hornby street yesterday, arrested two men, and uncovered what they believe to be headquarters for a counterfeiting ring which has been flooding this section of the country with about two 50-cent pieces for some months.

Arraigned in court the two men, William McIlwrigg, 38 years old, and Walter Cunningham, 36, pleaded guilty to a charge of counterfeiting.

Plaster coins were made in plaster of paris moulds. Babbitt metal being used to give the coins a silver touched up with fine files. A large number of genuine silver coins and a counterfeiting plant were seized, the police report.

TROPIC STORM PASSES OVER

Miami, Florida, Escapes Without Serious Loss

Miami, Fla., Aug. 30.—The tropical storm which blew in from the Bahama Islands yesterday, is reported ranging across the sparsely populated southern portion of Southern Florida Peninsula today leaving behind considerable property damage.

Meteorologist R. W. Gray of the Miami Weather Bureau said the centre of the disturbance appeared to have passed inland from Homestead, 30 miles south of here, last night after travelling at the rate of 20 heavy rains to a long expanse of the Florida east coast.

On advice of the Washington Weather Bureau, however, hurricane warnings were continued by Snowdrift Florida Peninsula today leaving behind considerable property damage.

MORTALITY IN CANADIAN LOW FOR 6 YEARS

Live Births Total 23.2 Per Thousand of People

INFANT DEATHS

Heart and Cancer Diseases up But T. B. Deaths Down

The preliminary report on Vital Statistics of Canada for 1931, issued today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, shows that year as having the lowest mortality rate recorded under the national system of vital statistics, which dates declined compactness back to 1926 for the nine provinces of Canada and to 1921, for the eight provinces exclusive of Quebec. The reduction extended to infant mortality, which also showed the lowest rate so far recorded, and to maternal mortality, which for the first time underwent a significant decrease. Births were also recorded, the previous year with marriages, which had already fallen in 1930, continued to decline.

Live births numbered 240,108, or 23.2 per 1,000 persons in 1931 as against with 243,485 or 23.9 per 1,000 in 1930. Illegitimate live births totalled 8,340 in 1931, forming 3.47 per cent of all live births, as against 8,098 and 3.32 per 3.5 per cent in the preceding year. Stillbirths numbered 6,977 or 2.91 per cent of all births. In 1930 there were 7,707 stillbirths, giving the same percentage of all births.

There were 104,449 deaths in 1931, giving a rate of 10.1 per 1,000 population. For 1930 the number was 102,306 and the rate 10.7.

Deaths under one year of age numbered 20,933 in 1931, a rate of 84.8 per 1,000 live births. These figures compared with 21,743 deaths and a rate of 89.2 in 1930. The rate for 1931 was the lowest yet recorded, that for 1926-1927 being for which figures under the national system run back to 1921 the ten years the reduction of 18 points, from 88.1 in 1921 to 69.7 in 1931.

There were 1,215 maternal deaths in 1931, giving a rate of 4.9 per 1,000 live births. In 1930 there had been 1,284 deaths and a rate of 5.8. From 1926 to 1930 the rate had oscillated between 5.6 and 6.0, and 1931 showed the first significant reduction in this class of deaths.

Amongst the chief causes of general mortality were diseases of the heart with a rate of 123 per 100,000 in 1931 against 118 in 1930, cancer with a rate of 83 per 100,000, and tuberculosis with a total rate for all forms of 70.1 per 100,000. Measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough and diphtheria also had the least fatal deaths in 1931 against 2,819 in the preceding year, and a combined rate of 17 against 26 per 100,000. Violent deaths numbered 7,166 against 7,478 with a rate of 7.0 against 7.3.

The number of marriages, which dropped from 77,288 in 1929 to 71,825 in 1930, showed further decline to 66,578 in 1931. The marriage rate per 1,000 population was 6.5 as against 7.0 in 1930 and 7.1 in 1929 to 7.0 in 1930 and to 6.4 in 1931.

The report contains many details of interest, such as those relating to births and cities, the ages at death, the principal causes of death, etc. It may be obtained by application to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

25 POUND "LUNGE" GIVES MAN BATTLE

Toronto, Aug. 29 (By The Canadian Press)—Christy Barber, veteran Lake Simcoe fisherman, landed today, he was a better man than a 25 pound muskellunge.

Barber was trolling quietly in a canoe when he got a strike that nearly capsized and spilled him into the water. He thought at once of the fish and wrapped his line around one leg.

Barber had a tough struggle swimming to shore, but he eventually wore down the stamina of the fish and landed it.

Then he swam back and got his hat which was floating on the surface of the lake.

Optometrists Warn Against Viewing Eclipse With Naked Eye or Colored Spectacles

Stars Still Shine, Flowers Will Close And Night Come

STRANGE SIGHTS

Probably Another Partial Eclipse in July 1963

Stars shining out of a darkened sky in the middle of the day, flowers closing their petals, puzzled chickens going to roost, farm animals roving restlessly in the fields, dogs howling, the court of insects stilled to a deathly silence, strange winds bringing with them deep sadness, and a shadow sweeping over the face of the earth, blotting out everything in its path, and other strange sights are promised for Wednesday afternoon.

Not for many years will this confluence of astronomical events as will occur shortly after three o'clock Wednesday afternoon, be seen, on July 30, it is believed that there will be another partial eclipse visible in certain parts of Ontario which will follow approximately the same path as the one which will occur tomorrow. Presumably by then, with the data scientists will be able to collect from the present one a great deal more will be known concerning future celestial phenomenons which are to follow.

Warning concerning the damage to eyes on viewing the eclipse without sufficient protection has gone out from these optometrists, who point out the fact, that serious trouble may result from exposure to the rays of the sun if viewed with the naked sight. Protect the eyes, they warn, with either smoked glass of some such suitable medium. The glass must be almost opaque or black. As it is hard to procure this medium type the suggestion that those who wish to view the eclipse make it themselves. Get a piece of glass and smoke it over a flame. Protect with a piece of window or plate glass with a piece of the sun viewed over the top of a lighted candle. Sufficient lamp black will form on one side of the glass to give a good covering. Do not rub this off as many do, continues the warning, but use it as it forms. The pieces of glass should be tested before the actual eclipse occurs. Further warning that artificial aids like shields of varied colors are not suitable and will not, shield the harmful actinic rays from the eye, but only isolate colored spectacles and sun shields are useless. In a pinch, black photographic film will come in handy if it is black enough.

BOY ALMOST A SKELETON

Arrests Made of Parents Who "Kept" Child Upstairs

Gallipolis, Ohio, Aug. 29—Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Hooton who are alleged to have held an unwanted child in an upstairs room of their home, naked, half starved, unbathed and practically helpless, finally arrested today, arraigned before Justice of the Peace Fred Millikan they were held for action of the Gallia County grand jury and released without bond.

At the County Children's Home tomorrow, five-year-old Loren Hooton, frotzled at intervals in an attempt to be kept almost forgotten. The matron said the boy was practically a skeleton from starvation, but belief was expressed that with care he would recover full health.

Keepers Asked To Stand by During Eclipse

Ottawa, Aug. 30 (CP): — When the eclipse of the sun occurs next Wednesday afternoon a large section of the St. Lawrence River between Montreal and the sea, will be in almost total darkness. But there will be no danger to the ships plying on the great inland waterway, Lighthouse Keepers throughout the affected area have been ordered by the Department of Marine to stand by their stations during the day and lights wherever necessary for safe navigation.

FEW TRUCKS GET IN CITY

Picketers Enforcing Strict Watch Over All Highways

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 29.—Iowa and Nebraska farmers picketing roads into Omaha from the east, the south and the west, in a drive to retain higher prices for produce were enforcing a strict watch over the highways today and very few trucks were getting into the city.

Records at the Omaha livestock market as estimated set the hog run at 5,500. This was termed a "rather light run" by market observers, but just how much is blockade had to do with the light receipts was a debated question.

All roads into Omaha from the west were open but Douglas County farmers planned to meet tomorrow at Elkhorn, Neb., to discuss plans for closing those roads.

The pickets near Blair, Neb., north of Omaha, refused to allow any trucks to pass south of the city. The situation was the same, the picketing orderly and peaceful, however, and there were no reports of violence.

Quiet situation prevailed on the Iowa roads.

REFUSED SEAT IN CABINET

Breach Between Hitler And Von Papen is Widened

BERLIN, Aug. 30.—On the eve of the opening of the New Reichstag, Chancellor Franz Von Papen finally told Adolph Hitler yesterday, he could not take a hand in the government of Germany and further replied in kind last night.

After the National Socialist Chieftain had broken bread with the Chancellor and Herr Von Schleicher, Minister of Defense, the Associated Press learned from an authoritative source that the former had been told it was too late to consider his proposals for a seat in the cabinet.

In a political address to the 230 National Socialist members of the Reichstag, by far the strongest block, Von Papen's friends indicated that the breach between he and Von Papen had widened to a point where he could not, possibly support or tolerate the present government.

IS CAPTURED AFTER CHASE

Citizens Pursue And Chase Him Thru Fields

Whitby, Ont., Aug. 29—(By The Canadian Press)—The Penitentiary at Portsmouth escaped from a train here today but was recaptured by a posse of citizens after a chase through the streets of this town.

French, who was under guard of two officers, broke his handcuffs when attempting to escape and one of his escort and jumped from the train as it was slowing down into the Whitby station.

He rushed across the fields closely followed by the two officers and fled into the town. The whole of Whitby immediately set out in a nearby field, saw the accident and turned over at least four times before coming to rest. Mr. Carey who was driving the car was killed although attempted to escape was overtaken by a citizen who had suddenly decided to swerve in front of him as a result of which he was pulled out of the car striking and not even come near capturing the supposedly desperate man, which was some distance up the road proceeding in an easterly direction.

Police Probe

Traffic Officer Byles, assisted by the Provincial Police, investigated the accident, failing to find a coroner Dr. H. C. Boyce, of Deseronto. Provincial Police state that the blame could be laid at the door of either Mr. Carey or Mr. Oliver but that the accident was caused entirely by Mrs. Woodin had simply lost control of her car and endeavoured to pass the Carey car, later seeing the Oliver car coming in the opposite distance from the west. Constable Byles at once began his investigation of Mrs. Woodin's relatives in Detroit. Failing to find any relatives at his home address, police officer calling on long distance telephone Dr. J. Mackintosh of Philadelphia, Pa., who was later located in New York City. She is a practising physician. Dr. MacHugh, who is a relative, assured the officer that she would leave immediately for Canada.

Body Taken to Deseronto

The body of Mrs. Woodin was taken to Deseronto where undertakers in Deseronto after it had been viewed by relatives and following the accident Crown Attorney J. A. Ponton was notified by request to be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday when the accident will be thoroughly probed.

After the Woodin car had turned over four times in the ditch it came to rest facing eastward or in the opposite direction to that which had been proceeding. There was no damage done to the Carey car with the exception that the front bumper was slightly bent. The Woodin car was badly damaged, the aged when all of the windows were broken. Investigation by police officers and all fenders badly crumpled. According to the tires are without a spare and the entire procedure they are at a complete loss to know why the body of the Woodin car was not damaged more than was the case. Upon investigation of the cause of the accident, the officers could find no evidence to prove that marks on the road to indicate that Mrs. Woodin had applied the brakes" of her car preceding the accident.

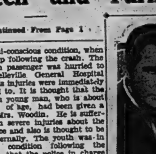
in a semi-conscious condition, when picked up following the crash. The unfortunate passenger was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where his injuries were immediately attended to. It is thought that the unknown young man, who is about 18 years of age, had been given a lift by Mrs. Woodin. He is suffering from severe injuries about the head, face and also is thought to be internally. The youth was in such a condition following the accident that the police in charge could not get a statement from him regarding the "circumstances leading up to the accident.

Driving West

Mrs. Woodin was driving her car in a westerly direction about one mile east of Marysville, when she attempted to pass a car driven by Mr. H. F. Carey of Trenton, as she pulled out to pass the Carey car, she noticed a car approaching from the opposite direction and suddenly swerved her car in front of the Carey car with the result that her right rear bumperette caught the left front of the Carey car's front bumper and she then had control of her car. Mrs. Woodin says, according to eye witnesses, darted towards the north ditch, landing a car which then turned over four times and came to rest on its left side in the ditch. Those who saw the accident immediately rushed to the assistance of Mrs. Woodin who was suffering from a broken neck and had died almost instantly. Others injured were Mrs. Carey about her neck and shoulders but no trace of blood could be found about her.

Eyewitness Tells Story

Mr. H. Oliver, who was approaching from the opposite direction at the time, described the accident as being most unique as the car suddenly in a nearby field, saw the accident and immediately darted towards the north ditch. Mrs. Woodin, who was driving the car turned over at least four times before coming to rest. Mr. Carey who was driving the car with Mrs. Woodin had attempted to pass was at the time blinded and had suddenly decided to swerve in front of him as a result of which he was pulled out of the car striking and not even come near capturing the supposedly desperate man, which was some distance up the road proceeding in an easterly direction.



Police Probe

Traffic Officer Byles, assisted by the Provincial Police, investigated the accident, failing to find a coroner Dr. H. C. Boyce, of Deseronto. Provincial Police state that the blame could be laid at the door of either Mr. Carey or Mr. Oliver but that the accident was caused entirely by Mrs. Woodin had simply lost control of her car and endeavoured to pass the Carey car, later seeing the Oliver car coming in the opposite distance from the west. Constable Byles at once began his investigation of Mrs. Woodin's relatives in Detroit. Failing to find any relatives at his home address, police officer calling on long distance telephone Dr. J. Mackintosh of Philadelphia, Pa., who was later located in New York City. She is a practising physician. Dr. MacHugh, who is a relative, assured the officer that she would leave immediately for Canada.

Body Taken to Deseronto

The body of Mrs. Woodin was taken to Deseronto where undertakers in Deseronto after it had been viewed by relatives and following the accident Crown Attorney J. A. Ponton was notified by request to be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday when the accident will be thoroughly probed.

After the Woodin car had turned over four times in the ditch it came to rest facing eastward or in the opposite direction to that which had been proceeding. There was no damage done to the Carey car with the exception that the front bumper was slightly bent. The Woodin car was badly damaged, the aged when all of the windows were broken. Investigation by police officers and all fenders badly crumpled. According to the tires are without a spare and the entire procedure they are at a complete loss to know why the body of the Woodin car was not damaged more than was the case. Upon investigation of the cause of the accident, the officers could find no evidence to prove that marks on the road to indicate that Mrs. Woodin had applied the brakes" of her car preceding the accident.

DEBUSSY

A world tribute to Claude Debussy is set up in Paris near the Bois de Boulogne. Debussy's music was to be French as Wagner was German and Verdi-Italian. His music, therefore, is the negation of what the two others stand for.

The monument, which practically tells the whole story of Debussy's work, is written Emile Vuillermoz in L'Illustration, "by its conception, its execution and its character, the living symbol of the elan of the universal enthusiasm," for the composer in recent years.

It was designed by Jan and Joel Martel, and built by subscription; the gifts coming from foreign countries, we are told were particularly numerous and generous.

"There were, one understands, many American contributions," writes Lawrence Gilman in the New York Herald Tribune, "and that fact is scarcely surprising, for Debussy's genius is more justly valued in this country than in any other save France. Where else, except in Paris, is that none-too-accessible masterwork, "Pelleas et Melisande," a fixture in the operatic repertoire surpassing season after season on the bills?"

How French Debussy was is estimated in the following paragraph translated for The Herald Tribune:

"It requires an event such as this to give our indifference or ill intelligence time to opportunity to understand the historic and racial importance of Claude Debussy in our national intellectual development.

"For several years, this delicate and fierce musician passed in a dangerous revolutionary in the eyes of ignorant people, while in reality, he was doing nothing but a continual homage to the purest traditions of our race."

What Debussy sought was a "less romantic, less grandiloquent, less bloated musical style." The production of "Pelleas et Melisande" at the Opera Comique, April 30, 1902, marked the "climax." Debussy succeeded to the vigorous accents of Italian or German declamation, which created extremely agitated rhythmic profiles, the frequenters of our musical theatres first took for monotony what was really a logical return to our national way of speaking.

Another important element in the Debussyist reform, says Mr. Vuillermoz, was "a rehabilitation of the cult of nature."

THE FAIR OPEN

One of the distinct institutions, Belleville Fair, is now open. Though it is early in the week to predict the success of the annual exhibition with any accuracy, indications on and after the opening pointed to one of the best successful from various standpoints, the exhibition of stock, farm produce, manufactures, from the viewpoint of crowds and from the entertainment and the solidarity of feeling of the importance of the fair.

That the weather will be propitious is the hope of everyone who has in mind the interests of the city and the immediate district as represented by the fair.

ECLIPSE OF SUN

On Wednesday people will have the unusual experience of witnessing the sun's eclipse, not total in this part of Canada but over nine-tenths per cent of the face of Old Sol covered by the moon. If the weather remains as it was on Tuesday the eclipse should be visible for clouds but the full light will come on just as if the solar eclipse were visible.

To the everyday man and woman the eclipse may seem of great importance beyond its spectacle. Once upon a time in unscientific ages people were terror struck and sinister forebodings were associated with eclipse stirs terror. But to the generality of men and women, boys and girls the eclipse is merely a phenomenon.

To scientists it is not so unimportant a matter. One man claimed that in the long run it had more importance to the world than a world economic conference, for the wealth of knowledge which may be brought within human understanding and which will have an important relationship to the progress of knowledge.

The scientists who are in Quebec which has the longest time of total eclipse have to work quickly as they have but two minute and three quarters to make their records. However much is done in advance and expenditures are split so that cloudiness in one area may not spell entire failure of observations.

BETTER FEEDING

Greater optimism is ruling the commodity market and in some the buying has been so spirited as to cause confusion. In this lies hope of betterent of conditions.

Many feel that the depression has worn out even its name almost. People are wearied of it and all that it entails and psychologists would explain the new trend as the natural reaction to a prolonged condition such as has existed since the year 1929.

SUMMER SONG

By Alina Michaelis

Dark is the river and deep and wide
And the course it may take, who knows?
Still is each drift with the tide,
To flow as the current flows.

White clouds float over heaven's sea;
Silent and swift, they go.
White clouds sail in an argosy
Tossed like the ships below.

Long do I gaze until daylight fails,
Lying content, at ease,
Watching the drifting cloud-ships' sails
Over the azure seas.

Ships that lower and ships that lift
Over the family sky;
Boats and clouds and the winds that drift,
All things drift—and I?

Deep is the river and broad and strong;
Dreamless it lies asleep.
Lulled by the magic of summer's song,
Softly to sea we creep.

BELLEVILLE'S ILLUSTRIOUS SONS, and there are many, who have gone out in the world and stormed the ramparts of Big Business, the professions or the arts and sciences, have a habit of coming back to Belleville for a visit, dividing and uniting visit with friends and comrades of their more youthful days. This week the latest of these returned visitors was Knight McGregor, stage and radio vocalist who has travelled far and wide singing his way into the hearts of thousands with rich, clear voice of his, which also combines sweetness with volume in such a charming degree. Belleville shares with Napanee the honor of having provided the background for Knight's youthful and young manhood hours filled with the glorious visions and dreams which only youth and the Old Land know. What his dreams have been more or less realized he maintains headquarters in New York City, with his home on the Hudson, but enjoying the last subway station where he can exchange the monoxide tainted air of the city for the fresh air of the open spaces, and the shine of the sheltered cove for the the droswy murmur of the countryside. Knight McGregor is remembered with pleasure by many theatregoers and music lovers for his fine presentation of the leading role in Shubert's "Blossomtime" which appeared in Montreal and Toronto each season ago, as well as the principal cities of the United States. Now Knight has blossomed into a popular radio singer and is a headliner for WEAF, New York connection, besides singing over WEAF, New York, and other radio key stations.

FROM FARAWAY COVENTRY, over the sea comes a smart booklet announcing the annual games of the Kingfield Sports Club in connection with the works of A. J. Cash Ltd., Coventry. Adorning the title page is a picture of the famous three Cathedrals of Coventry, one to each generation, and that from a distance it would seem that the three spires belong to one church. Incidentally the Three Spires is the trade mark of the City of Canada which still maintains its Canadian branch in this city, and is under the supervision of Mr. Frank Goodchild, of Toronto. Coventry and for the company maintains a large plant to serve the Eastern United States. Mr. Goodchild is a frequent visitor to Belleville and many are the friends he makes here. Returning to the title page of the sports program it may be of interest to note that the publication by Thomas Nelson & Sons and by Ticket at Gate 6d. each, with Children Half Price." The J. & J. Cash Company was established in Coventry over a century ago and from a small beginning flourished that Cash labels are now known and prized in all parts of the globe where men wear clean linen and women prize dainty fabrics. Coming from Coventry is not the same as "Being sent to Coventry" an expression much, in vogue in the Old Country, for folks in Belleville and other places have learned that very good things come from Coventry. Coventry, of course, is always associated with the legendry, or otherwise, of the ride of Lady Godiva, wrapped only in her long and beautiful hair, before an audience of one only, believe it or not, "Peeping Tom" who thus broke into school histories and bequeathed his moniker to thousands of keyhole snoopers and bedroom window peepers, all down the years. By the way, as any other "Peeping Tom" was the only Peeper caught, but the thought persists that he was caught by another peeper because he had a better knothole, greater vision, as it were. However, returning again to the souvenir booklet, The J. & J. Cash Company headquarters staff is to be congratulated upon the enterprise shown in the well printed booklet and evident well organized effort of the Kingfield Sports Club in presenting the annual field day of sports and fete.

BROADMINDED MOTHERS ARE NEEDED TODAY

Necessary to Understand Temper of Present Age

BY LOUIS E. REICH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Mothers in general will agree that it is more difficult to raise girls than boys. Perhaps such a statement is opinionated to some but surely, whether child be boy or girl, child-raising has always been a most difficult and painstaking job.

This is particularly true regarding daughters when they reach the age of twelve, the average age of puberty. These youngsters are so different today from what girls in their teens were even a decade or two ago, that the modern mother may well wonder just what is the best course to pursue in trying to guide her beloved daughter along paths that will lead to the best for a girl's future.

Broadmindedness on the mother's part must be necessary nowadays; for unless a mother is broadminded she will never be able to understand the vagaries and idiosyncracies her daughter presents.

The first thing to know is that the mother should discard well-established rules of conduct, or that she should endeavor to lowering of moral standards. It does mean however, an attempt to understand the modern girl's point of view. And this is not always an unreasonably helpful to her as she faces her maturing years.

The mother herself should remain her daughter's model if she is a normal womanhood. She should approve to her child, through example and precept, the necessity now of the so-called old-fashioned concepts of morality, decency, and ladylike behaviour are as wise and as irrovocable now as ever before.

But a feeling of friendship and mutual understanding must be maintained between mother and child; otherwise the girl will withdraw more and more into herself of reserve, and will become increasingly fearful of communicating such vital subjects as love and sex at times when solid advice is so sorely needed.

Every girl deep down possesses motherhood cravings, and this fact should never be forgotten; for with it, as natural adjuncts, go the instinct to protect and a certain degree of social consciousness. These should be brought out as much as possible. Inherent motherhood urges are the best possible counter balance of self-assertiveness, the overdevelopment of which is unsexed and often downright wilfulness.

Girls usually develop quicker and more genuine interest in cooking, marketing, household management, sewing and the like than they are likely to admit, even to themselves. Therefore it is the part of every wise mother to see delegates authority of this sort to her daughter, and by encouraging her to become interested in these activities prepares her for marriage. Sometimes a girl may actually be eager to cook, sew or keep house for a neighbor's family, yet shudderingly rebels against it, simply because she is afraid to admit to herself her inner feelings, or because she thinks that to do so would be cowardly and age "is isn't done."

A mother must never lose patience with her growing daughter, no matter how contrary she may seem, or how puzzling she may be. It must be remembered that the girl is even more puzzled by her own reactions to cipher her own peculiarities and emotions. At emotions, she needs somebody with experience, and who knows her, to help her to do this for her, and for this the best person is her own mother.

Never let a girl be as hopeless any girl in her teens, no matter how hopeless she may be. Avoid nagging pets and there is womanhood, to which girl teens are merely a transition stage.

Mr. Fred Ireland, principal of the Toronto gynaecologist.

In a lengthy analysis of the situation looked on the general public, Dr. Cleveland clalined:—

1. That Dr. Robb was ill-advised in making the Toronto General Hospital the paramount centre for the radium treatment of cancer with other centres to be established later in London, Hamilton, Other hospitals in Toronto and at Port William, Fort Arthur, Hamilton were as well equipped as the chosen centres and were located as points in the large population of a large and sparsely-populated province.

2. That Dr. Robb's announcement on cancer was composed of personal and boastful acquisitions, and partisan treatment, the only practising physician on the committee of experience in radium handling. The Commission was basing its recommendations in the main on circularisation upon investigations purported to be scientific, but which unlike Ontario.

3. That it was not clear how much the Government was paying for the establishment of the Toronto General Hospital centre but that apparently there was to come from the Government a gift of "the public purse" a $500,000 building and a big sum to provide for improvements and equipment.

Shown the statement last night, Premier Henry said: "I have read Dr. Cleland's point, about expenditures and the Government's part involved, said the Premier, was paying the Toronto General Hospital $45,000 a year for 10 years and the hospital was using this to alter one of the buildings for new purposes.

"I feel, that the report of the Commission will stand on its own merits and will justify the consideration and study we have given to it," said Rev. Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, who headed the Royal Commission.

Both Premier Henry and Dr. Cody stressed the fact they were following the technical advice of the criticism le Hon. Dr. Robb, at present absent in Blind River, Ont.

STORING OF GRAIN WELL ON

Central Ontario Has Taken Advantage of Fine Weather

Toronto, Aug. 30.—(By The Canadian Press)—Harvesting fields of grain are being reported in certain parts of Western Ontario while in other sections of the province yields are reported to be light or fair in 1931, says the Weekly Crop Review of the Provincial Department of Agriculture issued in connection with the Canadian National Exhibition.

In Central Ontario, Durham, Peterboro and Prince Edward took advantage of good weather to make progress in storing and threshing. Victoria county reports the supply of buffer fat to cream-eries is down 15 percent from last year.

In Eastern Ontario very little threshing has been done in Grenville but the grain in turning out well. One farmer hire reports 800 bushels of Alaska oats and barley mixture from 14 acres. The poultry industry is good, in Frontenac, in Glengarry, where clover seed is also threshing. The report representative reports, "I doubt if there will be a pound of clover seed this year."

In Sudbury district 90 percent of the grain is harvested and farmers are now harvesting oats.

TACHEREAU THINKS BENNET SHOULD ACT

Quebec, Aug. 30.—The suggestion of C. H. Cahan, Member for Parliament for Quebec-Montmorency, that Premier Bennett should ask the Premier's stand on the St. Lawrence Waterways is not taken seriously by M. Taschereau. The Member for Montmorency, Mr. Taschereau suggested, should ask Premier Bennett "to resign and hold a contest with him (Premier Taschereau)."

The suggestion is just as logical as Mr. Dorion's," said the Quebec Premier with a smile.

Toronto Surgeon Protests Ontario Government Policy On Cancer Research Report

Dr. Cleland Thinks Toronto Should Not be a Centre

NOT ACQUAINTED

Believes Commission Not Expert in Handling of Radium

Toronto, Aug. 30.—Less than a week after Hon. Dr. J. M. Robb, Ontario Minister of Health, issued his statement explaining how the Government would implement the recommendations of the Royal Commissioner on cancer treatment in the province, a controversial issue has been precipitated by a statement of Dr. Frederick W. Cleland, prominent Toronto gynaecologist.

In a lengthy analysis of the situation looked on the general public, Dr. Cleveland clalined:—

1. That Dr. Robb was ill-advised in making the Toronto General Hospital the paramount centre for the radium treatment of cancer with other centres to be established later in London, Hamilton, Other hospitals in Toronto and at Port William, Fort Arthur, Hamilton were as well equipped as the chosen centres and were located as points in the large population of a large and sparsely-populated province.

3. That it was not clear how much the Government was paying for the establishment of the Toronto General Hospital centre but that apparently there was to come from the Government a gift of "the public purse" a $500,000 building and a big sum to provide for improvements and equipment.

Shown the statement last night, Premier Henry said: "I have read Dr. Cleland's point, about expenditures and the Government's part involved, said the Premier, was paying the Toronto General Hospital $45,000 a year for 10 years and the hospital was using this to alter one of the buildings for new purposes.

"I feel, that the report of the Commission will stand on its own merits and will justify the consideration and study we have given to it," said Rev. Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, who headed the Royal Commission.

Both Premier Henry and Dr. Cody stressed the fact they were following the technical advice of the criticism le Hon. Dr. Robb, at present absent in Blind River, Ont.

HINDENBURG SIGNS DECREE

Stamps Approval of Von Papen's View of Hitler

Neudeck, East Prussia, Germany, Aug. 30.—President Paul Von Hindenburg today signed a decree giving "complete accord" with the economic program of Chancellor Franz Von Papen to the Junkers' governmental council of Chancellor Franz Von Papen.

The President agreed to set in operation legislative and emergency decrees that would carry out the governmental program and other financial measures so as to put them into operation. He has empowered the Chancellor to execute these decrees in the event that he deems it necessary the proper standard of life will be guaranteed to Germany's people.

Regarding Von Papen's report of the political situation, the official communique said:

"A detailed discussion of the inner political situation resulted in complete accord between the President's and Reich's President and the Reich's government."

The first sign Hindenburg's stamp of approval on the Chancellor's report to the Reich's President is his admit the National-Socialists into the government at this time.

HITLER IS REFUSED PLACE IN GOVERNMENT

Berlin, Aug. 30—Chancellor von Papen has definitely closed the door against Adolf Hitler's National Socialists in the government, it was learned today from a source usually authoritative.

The two had luncheon today and General Kurt Von Schleicher, strong man of the von Papen cabinet, and although no official announcement, the conversation with secretary was said to be "cordial" and that the National Socialist leader that it is too late now to consider his proposal for taking a hand in the Government.

Letters to The Editor

The Daily Ontario Intelligencer, Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sirs:

Enclosed please find a clipping I discovered in The Seattle Post Intelligencer today in regards to a skunk and family in Belleville.

It seemed good to read an article in a paper away out West about my old home town Belleville.

I just arrived here in Seattle today from a two months' vacation in Shanghai, China. Shanghai is a great city but very much unsettled now.

I may visit Canada in the next two years and drop in old Belleville before I use up all of my vacation time.

I would appreciate a copy of the old home paper by return mail.

Kind regards to everyone and come West some day.

Yours very truly,
HERBERT ROWE.

Note—The skunk story follows:

Black Skunk Found Wandering Belleville, Ont., Aug. 29.—(INS). to treat the public with a cool head. Belleville fire brigade will help traffic on the high-way near here for several hours today when the family of a black skunk and family across the road. A long line of automobiles, driven with patient, but not daring to sound the usual warning horns, halted the sextet had safely left the road.

SHORTAGES ARE STILL MOUNTING

Further $800,000 Found Short in Church Funds

Winnipeg, Aug. 30.—Out of the wreckage of the University and church funds last night loomed a further shortage of $800,000 in the Anglican Church trust monies. Investigations into the affairs of the defalcations, which terminated in the arrest last week of John A. Machray, K.C., bursar and chairman of the University of Manitoba board of governors, and of the diocese of Rupert's Land.

The shortage of the church funds of Rupert's Land was $1-500,000. Of this sum $700,000 was found of the whole amount was the property of the church. University accounts have revealed a shortage of more than $1,000,000.

UNITED KINGDOM TO REPAY FRENCH LOAN

London, Aug. 30 (C P Cable)—With the payment of 2,500,000,000 francs to France on Sept. 10, the United Kingdom will have repaid in full the entire amount of foreign obligations incurred during the financial crisis of September 1931.

The credits totalled $200,000,000 from the United States and $,000,000,000 francs from France, of which half was advanced by banks and the remainder guaranteed by the French public in the form of bonds.

The whole of the United States credit was repaid by the Treasury in March and April with the right to re-borrow $60,000,000 at any time. The last of Lord's Paper advanced by an Ottawa publishing firm in 1815.

PLAINFIELD W.M.S.

The August meeting of the Plainfield W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. C. Hall, when the meeting opened by members repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison, followed by "Whosoever heareth." Prayer by Mrs. Hall and Lord's Prayer followed. Mrs. Moynes then took charge of the devotional part and sang "Consecrate Me Now." Mrs. R. Rollins read the devotional leaflet "Abundant Harvest." Mrs. C. Hall then led in prayer. It being Temperance Sunday, Mrs. Marshall president of the Baby Band, then took charge of the meeting and short readings were given by several of the members. "A Child's Prayer" was read by Miss Olive Hall. Misses Irene Hall and Betty Mcquade sang "The Old Rugged Cross."

The meeting closed by singing "God Bless the Little Sparrow Fall." Prayer was offered by Mrs. H. Harrison. Mrs. C. Hall served a delicious lunch. Those present included 29 adults and 11 children.

REDWINGS NOT AS STRONG AS LAST YEAR

Lost Pitching Strength And Also Batting Punch

20 GAMES BEHIND

Orioles Are Now Out Doing 14 Games Behind Bears

(By The Associated Press)

The failure of the Rochester Red Wings, backed by the resources of the St. Louis Cardinals, to hit upon a winning combination this year has provided the International League with one of its major surprises.

League champions in 1928-29-30-31, the Red Wings were counted upon to furnish at least one for their fifth successive pennant even though they did suffer the severest losses in player talent at the close of the 1931 campaign.

Last Place Entering Month.

Today they were in fifth place, 20 games away from the league-leading Newark Bears. The loss of such effective pitchers as Dazzy Vill, Hermann Bell and Al Fornasiel, lack of punch at the plate have been the major factors in the Red Wings' downfall.

The most effective pitcher on the staff, perhaps last Red Wing to "reach bottom" was the Red Wings by the Cardinals after they had secured him in the famous Grover Wilson trade. Yesterday Bud held the Baltimore Orioles to five hits to win 8-1 and hang up his 11th victory of the season. Even the Red Wings made only three hits off Beryl Richmond in the first innings he worked but they made them good for three runs. They scored five runs in the seventh and eight off Forsman.

14 Games Behind.

The defeat dropped the second-place Orioles to sixth position 14 games below Newark which nosed out the Buffalo Bisons 16 to 15 in a tight slugging fest. Bears battered Joe Bloomer for 13 hits and all their runs in the first six innings while Jablonowski started for the Bears but was relieved in the seventh when Buffalo scored its final runs. Slugging of Charley Hargreaves and Johnny Neun featured Newark's attack, each getting three hits apiece. Hargreaves' blows drove in three runs.

Buck Newsome pitched the Albany Senators to a 7-3 victory over the Montreal Royals, granting only seven hits. Albany Senators shelled Porsorski from the mound in the fifth and scored the winning run off Fisher in the fourteenth when Jay Partridge clouted a homer with one on.

PUNT RACES

At three o'clock on Wednesday afternoon off Victoria Park the third punt race for the silver cup donated by Charles E. Hanna, and for the prizes donated by local merchants will be held over a triangular course around Ships, pers of punts are to meet the committee before the race to receive handicaps. The judges will be William Rogers, J. A. Thomson and Capt. J. Watson.

Yesterday's Stars

Oral Hildebrand, Indians—Scattered Red Sox' nine hits and won 8-3.

George Earnshaw, Athletics, and Billy Rhiel, Reds—Former helped Tigers with five hits in first game; latter collected three two-baggers and single in nightcap.

Lemon Bohen and Charley Ruffing, Yankees—Each chalked up two victories over White Sox.

Sam West and Heinie Manush, Senators—Their single in 13th led to defeat of Browns.

I think politics is like religion, most men inherit it.—Come Tunney.

Gar Wood's Miss Americas have married one man for life but that man is not Gar Wood. He is Orlin Johnson, Wood's mechanic, whom he once has been near death, once at Algonac in Miss America VI and once at Lido, Italy in Miss America VII. On the right side of his face the scars of Miss America VI and on the left is a scar from Miss America VII. The sixth put Johnson in the hospital for three weeks while the seventh confined him only a little more than a week but it was in the latter that Johnson was close to eternity. In 1931 at Lido, Italy, Miss America VII hobbled over the finish line. What the Father Learned lotus buds. Who has them? Not the gal who dusts furniture and purples trying peace unless she gives them painstaking care. If they fall a bit short of the poet's description she can console herself with the knowledge that her hands are carrying on, attending to the job. That's something.

Giving Hands Their Due

The home girl must remember that redness and roughness of the little mitts are mainly due to too frequent immersions. They get water-logged. Moist heat causes the flesh to swell, reactions open up to the form of fine lines as the swollen surfaces resume a normal condition. She must resort often to oily applications, friction them in, put gloves on at night. Cucumber or glycerine will serve pleasantly. Both have qualities of absorption that some hands aren't larded for the time being.

During a day of scuttling along the domestic treadmill hands are washed many times. They are seldom dried thoroughly. Nor does it always happen that soap is rinsed away. Neglect of this kind is punishment for hands and tough on those pink tips that are like lotus buds.

That old stand-by, glycerine and rosewater, is a help. But don't follow the usual formula of half and half. The combination should be one-third glycerine two-thirds rose water, even less glycerine than that if hands are chapped, painful with abrasions.

Hands appreciate a talcum rub. A new brick is to sprinkle talcum atop cold cream, form a pack, peel quickly until the flesh is glowing.

Women have learned to be careful in the treatment of the complexion not to push flesh in folds. Sometimes is but a small price to pay for character-building in his child.

The Bittle family had had plenty of money. The daughter had been indulged. She had been given every thing she asked for—money, toys, parties and all—and she was becoming selfish with her things, refusing to let her companions enjoy them. Money meant nothing to her. Selfishness had gotten a splendid start in her nature.

Then things began to happen. There just wasn't money for every whim. The child, nine years old, was given an allowance; a very small one, too. She has learned that she has to save over from one week to the next if she wants an expensive toy that heretofore had been dumped into her little lap asking. She has learned how it feels to gaze wistfully at a doll and not be the owner of that doll. And she has learned that lovely satisfaction of sympathy, and how sharers her toys with other children.

Last week her bicycle got smashed. Said she to her father, "I know you can't afford to get me another one now, but I love a bicycle. If I spend money in my bank toward getting a new one, will you put the same amount in each time?" Willingly, the father agreed.

The Beauty Box

What the beauty supplicant should keep in mind is that her complexion is going to be a long time with her, and that the oncoming years won't help it any. The beautifying half hour every night will inspire somewhat against the wear and tear of the sun-light, harsh winds and time. There should be thorough cleansing with pure soap and warm water, a warm water rinse, a gentle insertion of cream. The bristles the finger work the better for the health of the cutaneous structure, supporting tissues, glands, muscles and circulation. Nothing like it for rejuvenating.

If ankles are large because they have accumulated fat cells—not because of heavy bone formation—they will slim down under persistent treatment. There are several methods, the best of which is rope jumping. Lifting up on the toes slowly and coming down slowly throws adipose ankle cushions into a state of decay. High kicking is recommended, so is rhythmic dancing, which is becoming more and more popular with the gals who would spoil the svelte, slender shape.

Hands redden through contact with water very hot or very cold. When they have taken on a permanent blush, a daily massage with a cream made by combining equal parts of cocoabutter and lanolin (you combine them by melting, removing from heat and stirring until cool) will restore their pale surface, make them presentable for the bridge table.

In adult life not much can be done about bowed legs. Little chiliren are successfully treated by specialists who have made for them special shoes that keep the feet from turning over on the outer sides. Mostly the result is from turning the feet in the opposite direction, walking with the weight on the inner side.

Vanishing creams come now in the same shades as powders. Better than in the old days when the cream made the feminine nose resemble a marshmallow in snowy whiteness.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)
DIVORCEE'S NAME

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Does a woman, when already seated, stand up when she is introduced to an elderly man who is introduced to the President or a prince or a priest?

2. Are there any particular occasions when she ought to offer to shake hands?

3. I am divorcea from my husband. Previous to marrying my name was Laura Allen. My husband's name was Charles A. Graham. would it be all right now for me to sign my name (Mrs.) Laura Allen Graham? Or do I feel I would be all right and most correct?

ANSWERS

1. Under any of these circumstances it would be correct for her to rise.

2. She may offer to shake hands whenever she wishes. For instance, it is natural for her to shake hands when she meets an old friend, woman or man, when a woman friend is being introduced of whom she has heard much through mutual friend; when her hostess is greeting her or when she is saying good-bye to her; when she is offering her congratulations or best wishes to another person; when she is offering sympathy to another person.

3. The best form of name for a divorced woman to use is the last name of her maiden name preferred to the last name of her married name; in your case, Mrs. Allen Graham, as you will see, this form is dignified, and it quickly carries the message of just what you wish to convey. Also it has the unqualified approval and sanction of people who represent the best form and the best taste.

But most important of all it gets away from the use of the first name —a much-to-be-desired thing for a married woman, whether she is a wife, a widow, or a divorcee. A wife should use, for her formal name, the form Mrs. Charles Graham. A widow uses exactly the same form: Mrs. Charles Graham. A divorcee uses the form: Mrs. Allen Graham.

No first name ever, you see, in the formal name. An unmarried woman, of course, uses her formal name.

The second choice—but by no means such a good one as the one I have just outlined—is for a divorcee to use the abbreviation of her first name: Mrs. L. Allen Graham.

The third choice—and the one of which I thoroughly disapprove—is Mrs. Laura Allen Graham.

INAPPROPRIATE GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A gentleman has been invited to the wedding of a business acquaintance. He does not know the bride-to-be. Would it be proper to offer him their wedding invitations, (he is in this type of business) for the gift?

READER.

I realize that this suggestion of a gift would be offered by this man with the best and kindest of spirit, but under these circumstances it would not be well-advised, or appropriate. If the situation were reversed—that is, if he were a special friend of the bride's family—it would be more appropriate, for it is the bride's family who provide the invitations and announcements. The bride's family would have their own plans for their invitations and such a suggestion might lead to distinct embarrassment.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

Fall Fashion Trends

If You Would Achieve Smartness

Consider well these fashion points. The costumes illustrated feature high lights of the autumn mode and give you a splendid conception of what the well dressed woman will choose for her fall wardrobe. The coat exemplifies the mode for luxurious use of fur trimming. The slim fitting lines of the coat are enhanced by the broadened shoulder effect achieved through use of fur epaulettes and upstanding collar. The material is a black boucle and the fur on the bolero-like waist, and the cocked cuffs is black fox. The dress is a demure little model of black satin that introduces the leg o' mutton sleeve. The buttons of white to match the white satin collar and belt buckle add dash to the costume. The hats are the newy tiny affairs of felt that look moulded to the head.

Travel Coats

The Swagger Coats of Fall

Here indeed is the answer to the traveller's prayer in just the sort of coat that was made to travel the highways and byways, to find a place with the luggage for that long train trip or even to cross the ocean blue. Then, too, it's the kind of wrap the college girl will revel in, for it is particularly correct as well as comfortable at the football matches. It is developed in shades of brown and beige, with smart matching scarf. The hat is of nigger brown felt with trimmings that duplicate the darker beige of the coat plaid. Dark beige pull on gloves complete the costume.

Find Out Why If A Child Talks Too Much

A mother asks: "Why does my son talk so much? From the minute he gets home from school until he goes to sleep, he talks incessantly."

There may be a good many reasons, but the one that usually is the fundamental force that drives a child or an adult to talk all the time is a feeling of inferiority—a fear that the moment they stop talking people will forget they are here. After a while they forget the cause, if indeed they ever consciously realized what it was, and incessant talking becomes purely a habit.

Listen to Him

And a bad habit it is. It's boring to the listeners and devastating to the talker for, while he is giving out, he can never take anything in.

If I were the mother of a confirmed "talker" I should listen very earnestly to what he has to say. If it involved a project of any sort I would discuss it with him, plan for it and help him execute it. I would strive to make him feel that his thoughts and aspirations interested me to the point of helping him with them.

But, if the conversation centered in a useless babble of small-talk, I should demand that the child be quiet until he had something to say.

Teach Him to Listen

I should demand the right to talk, too, and demand that right also for guests or other members of the family. It can be made clear and justifiable to a child that it is only fair to listen, as well as to chime in.

I should try to make the child feel his importance when he was still so that the need to be constantly heard would be obviated.

I think you will find that the child who talks all the time is merely trying to hold the center of the stage permanently. He must learn to know that a good listener is far more highly regarded than a good talker; that he might really be interested in the fact that other fellow has to say, and that he can establish his identity as easily by being normally still as by being abnormally vocal.

A SUMMER RECIPE

With hot weather every housewife is looking for recipes that are tasty and, at the same time, do not require a lot of preparation. Here is one that serves both these purposes exquisitely. Not only is it easy to prepare, but it will tickle the palates of tired and hot husbands and children. It can be prepared in any good electric refrigerator.

Golden Parfait

1 c. sugar
1-3 c. water
6 egg yolks
1 pt. cream
1 tbsp. water
1-3 tsp. gelatine
1 tbsp. vanilla

Boil the sugar and water to 238 degrees F. Pour slowly on beaten egg yolks. Cook in double boiler until the mixture thickens. Add the gelatine which has been soaked for five minutes in one tablespoonful of cold water. Beat until cool and fold in the cream, which has been beaten stiff. Add the vanilla, pour into the refrigerator tray and freeze without stirring. Serves 6 to 8.

No matter how rich or poor a man may be he will have some form of the only honorable occupation.—Andrew W. Mellon.

Drastic Recommendations in Report of Committee

REPEAL WAGE LAWS

Placing of Cost of Education on School Buildings

Victoria, Aug. 30.—(By The Canadian Press)—Slashing of government services, abolition of whole departments and removal of others from Provincial to Federal control, including policing and fisheries, curtailment of free education and reduction of the number of legislative seats are suggestions contained in the H.S.D. committee report on economy and administration.

Headed by George Kidd, Vancouver business man and chartered accountant, the committee recommends urges salary reductions in all schedules, manner, dismissal of civil servants to the extent of 50 per cent. In some departments and formation of a commission to handle the unemployment situation. The report was issued late last night.

Repeal Wage Laws.

The committee recommends repeal of the minimum wage law in effect in the Province, reduction of salaries of school teachers and abolition of free text-books.

In brief the report suggests:

Curtailment of public expenditures by $5,000,000 annually.

Reduction of the B. C. Legislature from its 38 seats and cabinet membership to six.

The Lieutenant-Governor should take active control of certain expenditures of the government.

Policing of the province to be handed over to Ottawa.

Abandonment of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway unless a sale is made of the road within three months.

Closing of Liquor Control warehouses in the main cities.

Consolidation of the two water and the acquisition of a new warehouse at New Westminster.

School Assistance.

Withdrawal of government aids, varied from normal schools and training to entire cost of maintenance and interest charges on the buildings on the students.

Drastic curtailment of the cost of the University of British Columbia and provincial technical institution.

Reduction of school teachers' salaries by 25 per cent.

Abandonment of government assistance to farmer's and women's institutions.

Cessation of all public works with the exception of essential road maintenance.

Elimination of assistance to the Provincial Museum of Natural History, trails and bridges and reduction of departmental technical services of Colonist Printing and Publishing Co. Limited, England and Burning Co. work over to Canada House.

The committee which conducted the investigations upon which it based its report consisted of five members. Its report was submitted to the government several weeks ago while President Hoover was in Ottawa. Its release was released after the government members had time to review its recommendations.

ENGLAND TO CONVERT TREASURY BONDS NOW

London, Aug. 30. — Encouraged by the success of the conversion of the five percent war-loan to a lower rate, the government will announce tonight a scheme to convert treasury bonds totalling £153,- 252,700 to a similar manner.

The financing will involve the 4 1-2 per cent war-loan stock 1933-34, and the 4 1-2 war loan bonds 1934-44.

Details of the plan, including the amount by which the interest will be scaled down, will be issued tonight in the London Gazette.

It is believed the scheme will be along the same lines as the one converting the five per cent war loan bonds, which effected a saving of £65,000,000 annually by reducing the rate to three and a half percent.

Major Chosen.

The leading group of astronomers has chosen Magog, in the Quebec eastern townships. The British eclipse expedition will set up a large amount of variegated apparatus there for only a few hours the eclipse but to make permanent records by photograph. Substantial cement piers have been laid down for the delicate and expensive instruments. Although the pictures of eclipse will be a subject addition to the data on the subject the astronomers are concentrating on photographic records of the sun's corona. From these they hope to solve the mystery of its composition.

Prof. F. J. M. Stratton, director of Cambridge University observatory, is the guiding genius of the Magog expedition. With him are eminent scientists from the United Kingdom, Canada, the United States and European countries.

Material For Year

From the results of the observations the astronomers will have material for a year's work — and the eclipse at most will last only about two minutes at any point. As the position of view gets further away from the centre the line of totality the length of totality shortens. It runs through Farnham, Sorel, Three Rivers, Action, Mt. Orford and Magog. Maximum of totality will be approximately 100 seconds.

In Montreal however, which is one the edge of the line of the totality will be 35 seconds in one part of the city and in another part totality will not occur at all.

Continuing in 3,000 feet the eclipse flight, the shadow goes in a south easterly direction towards Saco, Maine and into the Atlantic where it ends at about the 41st parallel of west longitude.

Conway, N. H., Aug. 30.—The solar eclipse expedition is about to begin and the giant pain of the total eclipse of the sun which will be on New England is crowded with scientists and laymen. The scientific instruments of the expeditions are in place and last minute adjustments are being made.

It's the weatherman who is worrying the astronomers. He predicted "Wednesday, partly cloudy" for Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont—states where the majority of scientific camps this side of the eclipse belt are located. Massachusetts, a corner of which is within the path of the total eclipse, the prediction is "fair and warmer" Thirty aviators stood by at points along the 100-mile wide belt of the eclipse, ready to carry scientists to flights above the clouds if a haze or rain should interfere.

Conference Held

Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent, expended over a period of weeks to provide the instruments for the observations which lasts 100 seconds in Quebec, 90 seconds in Maine and 70 in Maine.

Painting the rare-hued corona in natural color in 90 seconds during the total eclipse of the sun will be now, one lone artist will undertake a harder task many of the astronomers. Charles Hitzinger Washington and Lee University, is artist, one of the war camouflage pioneers. In laying out on a table in the middle of the room the color pigments to catch a true record of the most delicate of the coronal color display in the world. He sets up no standard of judgment and form against a split second picture and says about such factors as the "purkinje effect."

Science Rooms Village

As the hour draws near for the eclipse, this town begins to assume the appearance of a science village.

The astronomical representative of the smallest state in the world joined the colony today. He was Prof. J. S. Plaskin of the Society of Jesus, director of the Vatican observatory and personal representative of Pope Pius XI. at the forthcoming conference of the Astronomical Union at Cambridge, Mass.

HELD IN JAIL AT HIS OWN REQUEST

Lake George, N. Y., Aug. 30.—A man who says he had forgotten his name became "something of a problem" in his town today but in jail at his own request today while officials County officials tried to reach authorities in Cornwall, Ont. Papers in the middle aged man's pockets indicated he was Alex Sinclair, of 228 Pitch street. He came here in an automobile with Ontario license plates.

Later Warren County authorities said they had learned that Sinclair had been a resident of Cornwall for six weeks and that he had left there from Ocean view, Va. His brother lives at Greenview the authorities said.

FINANCIAL NEWS

NICKEL IS UP ABOVE TWELVE

Old Leaders on Toronto Board Come to Life

Toronto, Aug. 30. — Recovering from the opening irregularity Base Metals shares turned briskly upward on the Standard stock and Mining Exchange market in the second hour today, establishing a half dozen new highs for the year before midday. Balance of the list responded with a strong tone.

Noranda made the best main, 10 points and climbing to $41.50. International Nickel was up 70 at $13.10, Hudson Bay 50 at $4.40 and Pend Oreille $ at $0. Linsley were a bargain group, Falconbridge gaining 34 to $1.50, Sudbury Basin 6 to $0, Ventures 5 to $1 and Sherritt Gordon a couple to 50.

Mollinger slipped 15 to $3.40 but Lake Shore improved 5 to $2.35. Mining Corporation was up 8 at $1.70 and Siganteg 9 at $1.36. Glencoe and Macassa regained a cent each to 84 and 23 respectively, in the cheaper section. Oil and Great Bear issues were relatively inactive.

Old leaders came back into their own as the market opened in forenoon trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. The rise was not substantial, although the tendency of issues regarded as the advance and the usual rinkling of new highs and large gains by issues which have been the rule.

International Nickel was outstanding selling through 12 for a new peak and a gain of almost a point in active trading. C. P. R. improved $ to $11, at midday, for a gain of 3-4. Consolidated Smelters rose to 76 up a point.

Hollinger jumped to 3.40, with Cockshutt Plow up a minimum fraction to a new 1933 top. Distillery issues were dull.

Bank of Commerce up 4 points made the best gain. Bank of Nova Scotia was up 3-4; Laurentide 2; Canadian Dredge 1 and Shawinigan 1. Royal Bank dropped 3 points, Moore Corporation 1 and Provost Metals 1.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 30.—(By The Canadian Press)—Trading on the Toronto Livestock Market was mixed with not enough sales to establish prices. Last overs totalled 1,400 head. A few good butcher cows brought $2.25 to 2.50 and medium to good butcher steers were 4.50 to 5.00.

Receipts—Cattle 863; Calves 200; hogs 700; Sheep 810.

Calves were firm at 5.50 to 7.50 for choice and downward to 3.50 for common. Stocker calves were steady at 2. to 3.

Hogs were unsettled with bids of 4.50 F.O.B. for bacon. Salesmen were holding for 4.65.

Sheep—Lambs opened steady at 3.75 for prime ewes and wethers at 4. for culls. Good light sheep were 2. to 2.50 cwt.

STOCK MARKET SEEMS WEARY

Trading Quiet on Wall Street Despite Cotton Drop

New York, Aug. 30.—The stock market sagged under a mild pressure today. While a fair assortment of coppers, rubbers, motors and oils moved forward most of the traditional leaders were logy.

Losses predominated, decline in some of the commodities notably cotton, in the early trading, was not particularly disturbing to the stock market but trading was comparatively quiet.

Goodyear, reflecting the sharp upturn in rubber yesterday, advanced about 4 points to a new high for the year and other issues up 1 to nearly 2 points to new highs since 1931 included Firestone, U. S. Rubber, Chrysler and Anaconda Copper. Losses were registered in such issues as Mesh, Kelly Springfield, Allied Chemical and Westinghouse. Losses of a point or two in the first few minutes were largely regained but early afternoon, Union Pacific, American and International Harvester were down a point and American Tobacco and U.S. Steel were off fractionally.

Coopers were helped by a slight firming of the domestic prices. Lead prices were advanced 1-10 cent to 3 6-10 up about half a cent in a foreign. Work was also a strong spot in the commodities wool top futures rising about 5 cents a pound the advance in copper price trading, was started in New York on May of last year.

POLICE SEARCH FOR ESCAPED PRISONER

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., Aug. 30.—(By The Canadian Press)—Police today searched the countryside over a wide area for Wilfrid Duch, prisoner, who escaped from the town jail this morning.

Ducharme, who was arrested yesterday by Canadian Pacific Railway police and charged with theft and assaulting a constable had been locked up for the night, pending appearance today in police court.

The manner in which the man effected his escape was not immediately clear.

MARTINS LATE IN DEPARTURE

Other Birds Betray Uneasiness to Start Flight South

Martins have left the district. They flew south this year on or about the 18th day of August, five days later than usual. This is reported by old-timers to be a sign that summer is on the wane, and that cooler months will be welcomed. Also it is a sign that their natural food, the bugs and flies, are disappearing. This, again, means better fishing in the bay, the lakes and the rivers. But it also means that summer is on the wane.

Signs that fall is approaching are not wanting. Daily, by fractions of seconds, darkness closes in on that shoch sooner. Light bills have taken a slight jump upwards, water bills as taken from the meter are correspondingly lighter. Merchants on Front Street are taking summer wear out of their front windows and replacing a few in the line of fall merchandise. Coal men have their order book and telephone within handy reach again, and hardware dealers are putting their first few ammunition and fire advertisements in the local paper. Black ducks are said to be congregating in the marshes and the coves near Massassaga. Robins are busy messing in the stubble fields and replacing a rubber in virgin concaves in the trees round about, and robins, many of them, have already flocked to the wild rice fields of Louisiana. Jenny Wren has become one less prevalent. Wild geese have already been reported in the wedge-shaped formation over Prince Edward County, coinciding their departure with the hanging up of the fishing nets describing fall fairs throughout the province. Picton fair for the Belleville fair is about to commence. Hollyhocks have gone to seed, and watermelons are ripening in the fields.

Out on a lonely lake in the northland in the silvery twilight of a harvest moon, a lonely loon with his eerie cry to a mate which swims slowly along a pine fringed shore. Both are restless. Soon time for them to be on their long journey flight. Squirrels jump from limb to limb with pouches filled with nuts they hide for the winter, coons whistle in the corn fields and woodchucks are already burrowing deeper for their winter's sleep.

Caretakers of schools are beginning the last few specks of dust from empty seats. Swimming holes will soon be deserted, playgrounds and other haunts of happy school children will be bare and cheerless. The first few brown leaves are commencing to appear on maple trees and strange fall winds have started to whistle around down town street corners.

If autumn comes, winter cannot be far behind.

MAN ATTACKS GIRL IN HALL OF HOME

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 29 (C.P.).—Police today were investigating two burglaries which occurred in the city over the week end.

Miss Mary Johnson reported she returned last night to her home to find all lights out. As she groped her way through the dark hall she said a man leaped at her and choked her. She screamed and her assailant fled. A few hours later Miss Johnson's brother-in-law, M. Connors, awoke to find the beam of a flashlight playing on his face. A voice said, "You can get up now. We've got all we want." Seven dollars were missing.

Police said they thought the same man committed both burglaries.

HER MOTHER TOLD HER

EVERY month it was the same story. Headaches and backaches and jangled nerves. Always tired out by mid-day.

She hated to talk about her trouble. She tried not to hide it. But you can't hide things like that from a mother. So her mother told her—what every mother should tell her daughter.

JUNGLE JUSTICE

By Norman G. Kirkland

An old acquaintance of mine just back from Sierra Leone after some years of wandering up and down Africa, told me this story, which I have here condensed for you.

It's all of seven years now, my friend commenced, since the day Use rusty little steamer dropped me off at the mouth of the river that ran up to old De Groot's place I had come to work for him. Before I was done and in that part of the country, and word coming up the coast that De Groot wanted a man, I offered my services.

I'd heard a lot on the trip down about the old fellow, and enough of this vast territory of several hundred miles as if he were verily king. And what I heard of this De Groot—whose overseer, and second in command I was to be—was not encouraging, to say the least, of nothing short of definite, if you will. The talk was vague, hidden, yet sinister, of things equally vague and hidden and darkly sinister.

The man whose place I was to fill had been found in the forest, dead, with a spear sticking in his side. The man whom he had replaced had disappeared—simply vanished. I did not ascertain just what number I was on the list, but there apparently had been quite a few before me.

De Groot, as I found out, was old, teak-colored and ugly, with shaggy head, jowled cheek, overflowing paunch, small pig-like eyes. His was massive, yes. Prodigious lands, etc. fulfilled all my mental pictures of the man whose reputation reached to Monrovee and Sierra Leone. The dour Dutchman, was formidable, even in repose, Sirree.

Did I have experience handling men?... Yes? Well, good! I'd need it—and everything else besides. Everything but compunction. That was excess baggage there. I didn't look bitter, ruthless, man enough, though. Where was I from?... New York! American, eh, Ha! Ha! Well, I'll find this particular section of Africa wasn't quite the same as New York.

So did De Groot nailed me down right away.. He sent me into the interior to bring through a caravan of ivory and gold and palm oil. He had me sign responsibility for the stuff—I thought it was the customary thing—over twenty thousand dollars worth, all told.

I reached the interior with my natives all right and we got the stuff loaded, and started out on the return journey. And somewhere in that rotten forest the stuff grabbed away. Just grabbed away. I was inexperienced. The natives knew it. On top, I had a fever, and —oh well, the stuff was all protected. Twenty thousand dollars worth of it! When I got back, weak from my fever, I was exactly twenty thousand dollars in the hole.

Old De Groot told me quite pondered a grim amusement, time and with contempt, lighted his small pig-like eyes:

"Enjoy! I hope you ain't in any hurry back to New York. Have you figured up yet just how many years you are going to work for me now without pay, Gibson? And until you pay it off, you stay. If you try to beat it out, why—" Somehow the significant waving of the shoulder suggested the fate of those who had gone before me.

For two years I stuck it out—two nerve-wracking, toilsome years in that primitive hell, and what with the natives and old De Groot, I could smell death every time the sun set. And I did in those two years I learned something of De Groot's many phases, cunning, two-fisted ways. He was a cruel character!

Floodlights turned on the compound all night; the heavy automatic pistol that always stayed within reach of that prodigious, hairy paw. Even when he dozed, I felt that his malignant old brain was very much awake. The natives were nasty—but De Groot had his own ways of persuading them. When they kicked up a row, he "decreased the population". Oh, it wasn't pretty! But that's what had kept him ruling along on the river for close on thirty years.—

And now the blacks were making trouble again! A consignment of stuff from the interior, carried by Bazaruto carriers, was a month overdue. De Groot had not sent me along. Now he dispatched two native runners to the Bazawini village to find out what the trouble was. The stuff must have been there, all right,—the two runners never came back.

Then old De Groot looked at me grimly and nodded. I knew his job was to go and get the stuff back. He sent carrier for a couple of hundred Kadongas, a warlike tribe under their chief, who were trained to their dagger-like tests. With these savages he flitted me and I was ready for almost anything. Two white men, not liking the job of the interior.

The second day out I crossed into the Bazawini territory and, on the third day, I reached their village. The Kadongas and the Bazawini were on anything but friendly terms at the best of times. That's why De Groot had fitted me out with the Kadongas, I supposed and I was ready for almost anything. But I was not ready for what did happen.

The Kadongas suddenly overpowered and disarmed me and left me, trussed up and helpless, in unsphanity into the Bazawini village. There they were met on an almost cordial terms by the Bazawini tribe, who danced around me and finally cast me into one of their kraals under heavy guard. For two days I lay there, treated well enough, with even a certain air of respect, fed well and wondering all the time what they were cooking up for me.

On the third day they brought me forth before their chief, and the enemy I thought ever since the time his Bazaruti porters had let that caravan dribble away and put one twenty thousand dollars in the hole. His name chief Jelingally smiled when he saw me. Reaching down beside his throne seat, he lifted up something obviously heavy. And there in his scrawny hand, extended forth for my startled gaze to reel upon, he held the massive, shaggy, bloody, severed head of —De Groot!

Then the aged chief spoke to me in a varied mixture of Dutch and English, warning me to get out of that part of the country, and went so far as to furnish me with two porters for part of the journey.

My boat eventually arrived at the delta and, soon after, informed the district commissioner of De Groot's death, relating everything just as the old Bazawini had told it to me.....how De Groot had hired the Kadongas to raid his own caravan and deliver the stuff to him secretly, so he could stick the Bazawini for the full value.....how the Kadongas had double-crossed him by disclosing the whole scheme to the Bazawini in their mutual hatred of the cunning, rough-handed old Dutchman.....and how among them they had kept the stuff. "

I stressed the story of the twenty thousand dollar consignment that had so mysteriously dribbled away on me two years before, and how De Groot had profited just too. Perhaps it was that very circumstance—De Groot playing on the Bazawini the same trick he had played on them two years before to work on me—that gained me native goodwill. The tricky trader he had been since too often, fortunately for me.

I laughingly avowed the commissioner the loot given me by the old Bazawini chief in lieu of two year's pay and interest from De Groot. He smiled and winked.

"Looks like he's given you compound interest, what?"

"It seems to have been a favorite trick of De Groot's," I said as Gibson concluded his tale.

"Yes, the favorite, perhaps," my friend answered; "but evidently just one of many. Sometimes I feel I wouldn't care to know about those other men who went before me."

SEVEN INSTITUTE BRANCHES MEET

Home of Miss B. Jones Scene of Interesting W. I. Rally

An event of much interest to Institute workers took place on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 16th, on the spacious lawn of Miss B. Jones, Belleville, when the Quinte branch W.I. were "At Home" to seven other branches namely Tweedsmuir, Wallbridge, Plainfield, Gilbert's Mills, Wellington, Rive-Valley Melrose and Redneresville. The lawn was daintily with the summer bloom and added touches of flags and banners and the beautiful sun beaming through the foliaged trees made a picturesque setting and ideal afternoon for an Institute rally.

Mrs. Jessie Carbutt took charge of the meeting which opened with the Ode, followed by the Lord's prayer A hearty welcome to the visiting branches was extended by Mrs. Gerbutt, and responded to by Miss Jones who, spoke of how pleased she was to see such a happy gathering and hoped for more occasions like it. The choir given work, such as Institutes were endeavouring to do. Our Federated member Mr., Shaw, Stirling, along with the Quinte choir, sang the branches represented, also the district secretary, Mrs. Simmons were called to the platform and in the absence of the pleasure it was to be present and hear her address Mrs. Jones for her kindness.

Mrs. Crawford Gilbert's gave a reading entitled "Sarah Trendrik Holiday" which caused the thought that all work and no play makes life a burden. A reading by Mrs. Jeffery "Mary's Prayer" Institute was enjoyed by all and caused lots of laughter.

Our guest speaker Mrs. Munro of Bloomfield was a real treat and have all learned to love was called to the platform and Mrs. Munro told us of the Imperial Conference at Ottawa as she was just returning from there a few days previous and in the interest of Institute work. She spoke of the ladies from foreign countries who were present and realized how big the task was that work was carried on here in Canada and took new ideas back home. There was no formality, pomp or ceiety, all just common folk. Speaker then called on Mrs. Munro read to us the message from Queen Mary, "Cornwallis" is next to Godliness" is a real true motto. A solo by Mrs. Hall titled "The Old Rugged Cross" was in keeping of subject, and thoroughly enjoyed.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and grace. After a social half hour, refreshments of ice cream, cake, sandwiches and lemonade were served.

The Quinte branch are very grateful to Mr. and Mrs. F. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. C. Clarke and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Purdon Company, who so kindly helped make the afternoon a decided success.

Prizes for the various races for young and old. Last but not least was the beautiful lotion tables of food things to eat, spread under shade of the wood, to which all did ample justice. The committee makers went to their several homes voting Mrs. Ridley an ideal hostess.

FARM PARLEY IS OPEN AT TORONTO

Toronto, Aug. 29 (CP). — To place all the resources of Dominion and Provincial agricultural experts at the disposal of the Canadian Farmer is the object of the conference on agricultural services. This was the message of Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, as he opened the conference here today.

"Speaking to officials representing every province in the Dominion Mr. Weir declared the conference would begin a campaign to help the farmer disentangle himself from which he loses money. For example, the keeping of inferior dairy cattle. "The most important thing before us," he said, "is to work out some plan or policy by which we can put across to the farmers the things which we know to be very much to their advantage."

HANDICAPPED MEN IN SWIM

Paralyzed Man With Blind Man and Deaf Mute Competing

Toronto, Aug. 29.—A blind man, a deaf mute and a man paralyzed from the hips down are among the swimmers who will take part in the 100-mile swim marathon for men on Wednesday. About 150 will compete. The swimmers sponsored before a group of well-known doctors for medical examination today.

The paralyzed man is William J. Ottrede, of Waterdown, Ont. He hobbles around with the aid of crutches and was passed by Dr. Barton and his staff as medically fit to take part in the swim. He claims to have swam Long Island Sound, a distance of 36 miles, with a great many a group of 11 from Charles Island to Savin Rock, a distance of 12 miles.

The deaf mute contestant is Joe Mazarkas, of Marlin, Pa., and the blind swimmer is Michael Hamboury of Toronto, who has taken part in other exhibition swims.

Nothing seems clearer than that if the people are to control the Government they must pay the rages to support it. These two go altogether.—Calvin Coolidge.

because they have discovered that it saves time, energy, and most important of all—money. In the realm of home management and in individual buying in general the advertisements act as a market guide . . . a guide not only as to where to buy and what price to pay but often as a guide as to what to buy. Many things that make life more enjoyable and comfortable are first discovered in the ads and then later repurchased through the ads. Many things that save on the family budget are discovered when the home-maker has learned to find the news of what's new by watching the advertisements. "MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"Oh, I really enjoyed coming out here today," declared Mary Faith, absently-mindedly, as she looked from the landing, on her way downstairs, she could catch a fine astonishingly large room at the end of the hall. A coop of great carved tables and wide arches. Gilt picture frames that shone in the fire glow. Many rich appointments that looked like two frozen fountains, bookish, reminiscent corners, where. A room that had a comfortable "lived in" look in spite of its size and splendor.

Mary Faith gazed at it as she might have gazed at one of the model rooms on the top floor of Hanscombe's furniture store downtown.

Not for one fleeting second did she guess that it was Neabit's.

When she got back into the plum-colored car, Neabit was at the wheel, ready to start on the next. They were wrapped in lap robes. Mary Faith's cheeks glowed.

"Mrs. Neabit, she let' dem gere for you." Lottus told her, "she's glad to go to Grand Rapids, but she says I was to tell you she got her rose-bushes wrap in burlap. Now you're all right. Open your knees while I tuck dis gere robe around you. Dere, now you're all right. Open your knees while I tuck dis gere robe around you. Dere, now you're all right. Open your knees while I tuck dis gere robe around you. Dere,

KILLED AFTER RETURN FROM HIS HOLIDAYS

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., Aug. 30—Achille Cote, 62, wholesale tobacco merchant, was instantly killed yesterday when a 22 rifle, part of a camping outfit, accidently discharged as he was carrying it with other articles down the stairway leading to the basement of his dwelling.
Mr. Cote had recently returned from his annual outing at his summer home in the north, getting away equipment used when he met this tragic end.
Mr. Cote had been a resident of Sturgeon Falls for 32 years. Mrs. Cote survives.

24 TRIPS CANCELLED — 704 TRIPS BEING MADE

Ottawa, Aug. 30—(By The Canadian Press)—Passenger air mail service is carrying on. Out of a total of 704 trips scheduled during the three months ending August 30, 1932, only 24 were cancelled, according to the annual report of the Civil Aviation Branch just issued.
The total mileage scheduled during the period was 69,440 and of this 59,640 was actually flown. The speedy air mail planes carried a total of 23,711 pounds of mail during the period under review.

FANNIE HURST'S " BACK STREET" OPENS AT THE BELLE TOMORROW

Fannie Hurst's most absorbing story comes to the screen tomorrow, when Universal's picturization of "Back Street" opens a three day engagement at the Belle Theatre, with Irene Dunne and John Boles in the leading roles.
This powerful and fascinating love-drama follows the romance of a girl and a man, held together by a sincere love in spite of the fact that the man is a husband and father. For twenty years, the attachment endures, ever increasing in intensity, until a tragedy brings the most extraordinary affair of its kind ever pictorized into sharp focus.
Throughout her life, the woman has sacrificed everything for the man she loved, while the man has maintained his position in the social world and remained a respected member of the community in which he lives.
The supporting cast includes June Clyde, Gregory Ratoff, William Bakewell, Arletta Duncan, Doris Lloyd, Walter Catlett and Zasu Pitts.
A beautiful Dressmeare gift will be distributed at the Matinee Saturday evening with the compliments of the Belle Theatre management.

Garner-Farrell Tonight

"The Wet Parade," Fannie Hurst's brilliant comedy-romance of the stage, neatly spiced with wine lines by Arthur Richman, features Walter Huston, Dorothy Peterson, Robert Young, Jean Hersholt and Jean Parker.

At The Capitol

"HOLLYWOOD SPEAKS"

A town of fleeting luxury.
A town of high lights and deep shadows.
A town where business is done in palaces.
A town of speed, aggrandizement and glamour.
That is Hollywood, as Genevieve Tobin describes it. Those are the chief characteristics of the film capital as one of the most vivacious and talented of the screen's actresses sees them. This is all particularly apropos in view of the fact that Miss Tobin's newest picture is "Hollywood Speaks," the Columbia feature that is dramatizing the rise and fall of an "extra" girl story, Wednesday and Thursday at the Capitol theatre.
"The time thing I noticed when I came to Hollywood two years ago," said Miss Tobin, during an interview between scenes of "Hollywood Speaks", "is that life in Hollywood seems to be geared to an airplane motor and driven exclusively on high test fuel.
"Hollywood could run rings around Charlie Chaplin as a kind of race. Its parties, its work, and its relaxation are all intensified. They seem to eat, play, and work at a pace ten times that of New York or Paris.
"Stage people in New York stay up late, it is true, but they don't get up until late in the day. In Hollywood, six-thirty is my regular hour before I report for work in a studio. A human being can't play around and keep any such working regime as that.
"Even Hollywood's need more of a necessity here in Hollywood when one is cooped in the movie studios all day. Without it, one's system breaks down in no time. Without tennis, swimming and golf, I am dead of long walks, I never could keep myself in good condition enough to bear up under the strain. Everyone I know, from man to woman, feels the same way about working in pictures.
"When Hollywood people play, they play more madly, more impetuously than other people. That is merely a reaction, a reaction that one sees right back to one's first impression of the town, speed. Living in Hollywood is also somewhat like sailing in a schooner-race. While the wind is with you, you have to take advantage of all your sail. Any moment a squall may burst and sink you. Or you may be becalmed.
"That is another reason for what may seem to be the devil-may-care attitude on the part of Hollywood people. Popularity, fame and attention comes in bunches. There is no formula for success in Hollywood. It may happen your way and again it may not. But when it does, take it in its stride. When you feel it slipping, quit."
All of these facts are dramatically brought out in the story of "Hollywood Speaks." In addition to Genevieve Tobin, the cast includes Pat O'Brien, Lee Tracy, Junior Durkin, Frank Darien, Edmund Lawlor and Leni Stengel. Eddie Buzzell directed from a story by Norman Krasna.

PARLIAMENT IS AT STAKE

German Government Faces Unique Situation

Berlin, Aug. 30 (AP).—Germany reached today another of the bewildering crossroads that have marked her history since the war and this time the fate of the parliamentary government hung in the balance.
The capital fairly bristled with police for the occasion, the gathering of the sixth Reichstag since 1919. The Landtag or Prussian Diet, also was assembling, and each had an organizing session before it.
Even before the 608 members of both bodies took their seats there confronted them the threat of a dissolution decree, a coming since the beginning of the month-ency attested by Chancellor Franz Von Papen's absence.

He was in Neudeck, East Prussia, with President Paul Von Hindenburg.
The opening session of the Reichstag was called for late afternoon today with Frau Klara Zetkin, Germany's veteran radical, in the chair by virtue of her seniority. She will preside until a president has been elected. Because Frau Zetkin is a communist, it was believed the Nazis and Nationalists would seek to rush through the election of a president, who will be Frans Bioleh, Nazi lieutenant.
One Nazi storm trooper was shot to death and two dangerously wounded at Charlottenburg by a group of communist ambushers during the night. There were barricades also near Malchin and Gadebusch, where two storm troopers were seriously injured.

11 FATAL DEATHS

Quebec, Aug. 30—(CP)—A total of 11 deaths from infantile paralysis took the toll of the epidemic that has prevailed in Quebec City since the beginning of the month.

PHOTOGRAPH SUN'S ECLIPSE

Canadians to Study Radio Phenomena And Eclipse

Ottawa, Aug. 30 (By The Canadian Press)—What is concluded sky is essential to the success of the majority of scientific parties poised at advantageous points in Canada for observation of tomorrow's eclipse of the sun, the expeditions sent out by the National Research Council of Canada are not so much concerned in that respect. One party only, headed by Doctors C. G. Lawrence and L. E. Howlett, is called to Drummondville for the purpose of photographing shadow bands with a motion picture camera, will depend upon fine weather for success.

The remaining parties from the research laboratories will investigate radio phenomena and only a severe magnetic storm can interfere with their work. At Kingston, Ont., Vankeek Hill, Ont., Cornerbrook, Nfld., and Colleys Bourget, Que., parties will endeavor, by scientific observations during the eclipse, to settle questions relating to the layers of ionized atmosphere above the earth which form the "roof" for radio signals and have a great influence on radio broadcasting.
These parties are headed by scientists from McGill University and the Roole Polytechnic, Montreal and the Royal Military College, Kingston, all working in cooperation with the National Research Council.

Sleeping in Tent at Cottage at Port Carling

TORE FURROW

Bolt Ploughs Way 100 Yards in Ground After Striking

Gravenhurst, Ont., Aug. 31—(By The Canadian Press)—A bolt of lightning that tore a furrow of 100 yards through their tent to the shore of Lake Rosseau at Port Carling, Muskoka, killed one Toronto boy and burned his brother yesterday.

William Gordon Saul, seven, is dead and his brother, Jack, 11, is suffering from burns on his leg as result of the bolt, that struck at their little summer camp. The boys were on a metal bed at the time of the flash. Jack's escape from death was a miracle.

The victims of the lightning are children of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Saul of Toronto. They had spent the summer at the Port Carling cottage, and usually used the tent for playing.

A few nights ago the boys took a fancy for sleeping out in the tent instead of the cottage.

The fatality occurred during a storm at 5.30 o'clock yesterday morning. The occupants of the tent were awake, but still in bed.

Billy was killed instantly, according to coroner Joyce. Nevertheless a Hydro-Electric employee worked over the lad for three hours administering artificial respiration before hope was abandoned.

Gordon Riddington, uncle of the boys, who was sleeping in a nearby bed, was only slightly dazed by the bolt.

BREADKNIFE CAUSES WOUNDS SAYS VICTIM

Montreal, Aug. 30.—(By The Canadian Press)—Bernard Bellaire, 23, died early today from wounds in the abdomen received during a brawl in a house Sunday night. Before Bellaire's death Stanley Smith, 31, and Andrew Purcell, 25, were already charged with aggravated assault.

Preliminary hearing was held yesterday at Bellaire's bedside in the hospital. Bellaire testified that Smith inflicted the wounds with a breadknife. Purcell had started the brawl, Bellaire said, and Smith had joined in.

Ceylon abounds in magnificent ruins of the great cities and temples of the ancient Sinhalese kings the ruins being second in extent and interest only to those of Egypt.

VON GRONAU FORCED DOWN

Bad Weather is Cause of Stop in Flight to Japan

Tokyo, Aug. 31.—Capt. Wolfgang Von Gronau and his three companions enroute around the world in a flying boat, were compelled to alight at Kafiaga Island in the Aleutians at 11 a.m. Tokyo time, by bad weather.

This information was contained in a radio message from Capt. Von Gronau picked up by Gochishi radio station at Hokkaido. The message added that the Germans who left Dutch Harbor, Alaska, on Tuesday, intended to resume their flight to Attu Island, the last of the Aleutian chain tomorrow.

Paramushiru, northernmost of the Kurile Islands, is expected to be the fliers' first halting place in Japanese territory.

The Von Gronau flight began last month off the North German coast, and proceeded via Iceland, Greenland, Labrador and Canada to Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

The fliers left Dutch Harbor yesterday for the 650-mile flight to the end of the Aleutian Island chain, which stretch westward into the Pacific and is United States territory.

Strange Phenomenon May Have Been Fire Ball Exploding Over District

COOKSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 31.— In the vicinity appeared to have been recorded.

Residents of this district pondered today over the cause of a loud explosion heard during a rainstorm late Tuesday. Thomas Sandford said he and his young daughter saw what appeared to be a huge ball of fire explode over one of his farm fields, Shrubbery and trees

Director John Patterson of the Toronto Meteorological Bureau, was of the opinion a fire-ball, strange phenomenon whose origin has never been solved, had visited the district for the first time. He said the occurrence was in no way attributable to today's eclipse of the sun.

DISCOVERY IN PLANT LIFE IMPORTANT

Ithaca, N.Y., Aug. 31—(AP)—An important discovery in plant breeding, practicably equivalent to growing oranges and other warm country fruits in northern states, was announced yesterday before the International Congress of Genetics.

The discovery will make possible crossing of northern and tropical fruits, and will open the way for creation of many new varieties, said Dr. N. I. Vavilof of Leningrad, Russia, who credited it to Dr. T. D. Lysenko of Odessa.

Including fermentation in seeds before planting they is the basis of Dr. Lysenko's discovery. It makes possible shortening the period of growth, transforming winter varieties of plants into spring ones and late varieties into early.

IMPORTANT RESOLUTION PLACED BEFORE MEETING

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—(By the Canadian Press)— That Dominion and Provincial Governments be asked to lop have 35 per cent. of the cash reserves of large companies used for, continuing salaries of unemployed attached to the staffs of these companies in normal times is one of the motions to be presented to the Ontario Municipal Association, which convenes here today.

Submitted by Dr. F. Gardiner, East Windsor Alderman, the resolution says "Such action would go a long way to prevent depressions by continuing the flow of money, thereby causing sufficient money to be in the hands of the working public as to be a factor in the category of a buying public."

BLAMES GOV'T FOR LOSSES

Editorial States Responsibility Must be Laid to Gov't.

Winnipeg, Aug. 31—Asserting editorially that the government of Manitoba "will have to make good every dollar of the university's loss" the Winnipeg Evening Tribune demands an immediate and thorough investigation into the $1,500,000 expenditure of the University of Manitoba endowment fund in connection with which John A. Machray, Chairman of the board of governors, faces a charge of theft.

Claiming the non compliance of the statutes had been responsible, basically for the situation the Tribune editorial declares that taxpayers faced with this unexpected burden have the right to know what public agencies failed and why they failed.

The editorial quotes from the year-old statute providing for the administration of the State University the section which requires annual report to the Minister of Education on receipts, expenditures and standing of investments and a yearly audit by the Comptroller-General.

The loss, it asserts, was not a quick thrust but resulted from the "gradual process of many years and adds: "The government of Manitoba must assume its share and a very large measure of responsibility."

LIGHT CITIES FOR ECLIPSE

Quebec Cities Ready to Meet Midnight Darkness

Montreal, Aug. 31 (CP). — The day for which scientists and laymen had been waiting for months dawned this morning with overcast skies.

Sharp at 2.14 p.m. (Eastern Standard Time) the moon's edge will cut across the sun. At 3.24 p.m. the total eclipse will start, lasting for some 30 seconds. Then the sun will begin to emerge again and at 4.25 p.m. the eclipse will be over—for 300 years or so for as this city is concerned.

School children by the thousands will be released from studies to watch the only total eclipse they will see in their lifetime without traveling; scores of firms will close their doors while still to permit employees to make for the open spaces.

Street lights will be turned on in the city and automobile headlights will cut through the blackness.

CAR PLUNGES OVER 70 FOOT EMBANKMENT

St. Catharines, Aug. 31 (CP). — Three young Chicago women were in a serious condition in hospital here last night following an accident in which their car fell 70 feet over an embankment.

The injured are Ivy Mason, Bernbula Erickson and W. Sievik. They were driving their car up a steep hill near here when it failed to turn a corner on the grade and plunged over for a distance of 70 feet. A police ambulance was rushed to the scene, where the car landed, a total wreck.

CHURCH AND LABOR

Arrangements have been made at Toronto for the attendance of Labor Unions at some of the Toronto churches of the United Church according to the New Outlook, the official paper of the church. The publication considers this news of the greatest importance from the standpoint of the church and of labor, which have not been in as close touch as they might have been.

At the suggestion of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service in co-operation with the Toronto Trades and Labor Council, a number of the downtown churches have invited unions of organized labor to attend the morning service on Sunday, Sept. 4, the day before Labor Day. The important feature is the suggestion of attendance by units came from labor men themselves. The sermons are to be based on themes of labor. Similar schemes were tried out in Vancouver, Hamilton and in Toronto some two years ago. The Toronto departure has been prepared for long and quietly with last winter conferences between labor and the church.

The influence of these services cannot but be great. The church has been charged with somewhat of an indifference to the problems of the working man and with failure to study the needs of his heart or to make the services attractive and understandable to the average man—that is to make him want to attend. Even in Belleville pulpits it has been said that many working people do not go to church or have fallen away from the church and efforts have been made to get at the cause, whether the social constitution or the failure to bring messages down to the year of grace 1932.

In the final analysis the church has to appeal to hold labor or any other class. The present age is a difficult one for the church for it is in a transitional stage of scientific and religious bewilderment, economic and social problems are trying to find a basis in religion. There are vast social and mechanical changes which have upset the equilibrium of the church. Everyone sees that this equilibrium must be restored if the church is to subsist even with changes. The change seems to be at hand.

The fact that labor comes in units to the church is one of the surest signs that labor and the church are finding a common ground, that labor is being served and that the church is finding a new expression to its sense of obligation.

After labor has officially set its seal upon attendance at church by organized labor in units, the duty of the church and the individual member of the units is to come together—that is the individual man and woman must be served, must find joy and activity in the work of the church.

This trend rapprochement of the church and official labor is a very gratifying sign of the times. It is in harmony with the advance of social legislation in this province and in the Dominion.

The church and the state must remain the two greatest institutions of the world. The state will ever exist but the church has been threatened at its very source and foundation unless it meets the supreme needs of men and women. It has the heaviest task any institution has ever faced and for that reason people will feel that it must survive because it ministers to the highest ideal. This gigantic task must take cognizance of the differences of denominations, surely bringing to a more uniform ground the various sects. It is facing a new path to which a call to one, it is facing economic and financial problems, it is facing sociological questions. It must meet them and will meet them.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

With the sun's eclipse over, brief as it was, so will pass and probably is passing the vast supernatural eclipse of the past three years. Because of the eclipse the sun did not forever disappear and because of the inherent soundness of humanity the race will also appear in the darkness of economic falling off.

Cancer research institutes which are to be set up in three cities Toronto, London and Kingston, will it is hoped contribute much to the knowledge of this curse upon mankind.

Britain is taking the sound way to revival. She is preparing another conversion loan which will mean sacrifice to the individuals who willingly subscribe however, and will bring a return to better times. These are tests of truest patriotism. These loans will wipe out foreign credits used to meet the financial stringency of a year ago when Britain went off the gold standard.

To look with bare eye upon the sun going into eclipse is dangerous. The orb of day's dazzling brilliance might blind. But in the spiritual realm the effulgence of light is while dazzling, destructive of nothing but the evil and the petty.

THE DRILLER

A government grant has been made for the road,
The clodhoppers must be left, nothing more must be sowed;—
"I want a good driller, some men for the sledge—
The foreman looks for them behind every hedge;
So he hires me to sit on an old bag of hay,
And handle the drill on Macauley's Highway.
Swing, swing, sturdily swing,
Must get this rock out before early Spring.

So I'm sitting all day astride of the drill,
Punching round holes in the rock on the hill;
The dynamite man slips a stick in the hole,
Tamping it gently with long slender pole,
He puts on the cap, attaches the fuse—
"Look out! There she goes!" the men loudly enthuse.
Swing, swing, strike with your might,
Dollar a day, pay Saturday night.

My hands they are callousèd, my muscles are sore,
But I've got me some credit at Bank's General Store,
So I'll get me some groceries, I'll get me some clothes,
I'll get my old woman a pair of silk hose;
For I've got a good job, though the work is real hard,
And a dollar a day will keep the wolf from the yard.
Swing, swing, keep your eye on the drill;
If you ever hit me, I'll be tempted to kill!

I've been Grit, I've been Tory, I've been U.F.O.
There are none of their tricks that I shouldn't know,
But when a fellow is starving, with no bread on the shelf,
He can't be too particular, must think of himself;
So I straddle a drill, and I'm here every day,
Getting the rock out of Macauley's Highway.
Swing, swing, don't miss that drill!
If the foreman won't fire you, the government will.

—Harry M. Moore,
Lake Dore, via Douglas, Ont.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON residents of Victoria Avenue thought that a tornado or cyclone was in the offing when a sudden mighty roar of a rushing roaring wind broke the silent peace of the Sabbath afternoon, and the roar steadily grew in volume, as verandah sitters hastily drew in their feet ready to make a fall dive for the cyclone cellar. The swoop of six planes, flying very low, seemingly barely over the top of the trees, explained the roar, and the verandah sitters resumed their seats with sighs of relief but with hearts beating at higher tempo.

DO YOU REMEMBER sweet Annie Bird, who played in the early "ten-twenty-thirty" drama in days of Harry Lindley? Gallery Gods and orchestra chairs of that golden period when it didn't take a New York No. 1 company to give local theatregoers a thrill, when Annie Bird was popular this talented child actress was and how popular she became with the audiences and the townspeople generally of Belleville and other towns in which she played. My Thespian friend who has travelled far and wide and trod many stages recalled "Little Annie Bird" as being later a Broadway favorite under the name of Gladys Wallace, taking the leading role in "School for Scandal" and other high-class plays. My friend further recalled that "Little Annie Bird" that was, married a multi-millionaire and left the stage to preside in as many palaces as she chose to create. So that's a bit of news I never knew 'till now, but perhaps you knew all about it.

TWO MORE AVIATORS, cool and courageous, seeking fame and fortune by flying the ocean, are posted as missing, they took the long chance and through some small miscalculation, just missed the mark, considering, however, no doubt, that it were better to have tried and failed, than never to have tried at all, even if death were the price to pay for trying. To live gloriously even if briefly, and to die gloriously, is better than to have lived ingloriously and lived too long.

PHYSICAL AND MENTAL SIDE IN HAND CRAMP

Interesting Psychological Study Concerned With Cramp

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

One sometimes hears the term "writer's cramp" used as a joke. When a person fails to pen a long-promised letter, for instance, we say he has writer's cramp.

Yet the condition is an actual one and a mighty serious at that. Usually the symptoms do not appear suddenly. Gradually a kind of discomfort is experienced when using pen or pencil. Later on, as the disorder gets more deep-seated, is definite weakness of the hand when writing is attempted.

Cramps in the hand and arm muscles and twitchings of these muscles are not uncommon symptoms may develop, making the patient believe his hand is paralyzed, and soon all writing or work of similar nature becomes impossible. This is a typical case of writer's cramp.

Often when the hand is at rest that is, when no attempt is made to write—there are no symptoms, but when writing is attempted they reappear with added suddenness. Sometimes such repeated trials cause intense pain in the hand, with spasms of the muscles involved.

Although a case of writer's cramp may develop from the act of writing, which necessitates excessive writing, there are cases that begin with writing only, but later on suffer pain, tremor and spasm when the hand or hands are used in other ways, such as playing the piano, or wherever dexterity of the fingers is necessary.

Symptoms very like writer's cramp and occurring in much the same diagnostic group, may befall piano players, telegraphers, seamstresses, shoemakers, typewriters, engravers, lithographers, painters, compositors, sculptors, cigarette and cigar makers, post office employes who sort the mail, and even masons and brick-layers, and a host of others who use the finer hand muscles in their work.

One naturally would think that writer's cramp or any of its related conditions would arise from using the hand muscles excessively, but yet such is not the case. Writer's cramp results not so much from excessive condition. It is a functional condition. The trouble does not lie in the nerve or muscles, but in the mind!

All the writer's cramp disorders, should be called "occupation neuroses". This term indicates that the disorder is a symptom of a nervous or functional nerve disturbance concerned with the daily round of work of the patient.

As an example of the cause being in the mind, I might cite the case of a young man who wanted to become a novelist and who developed a typewriter cramp whenever he used the typewriting machine—analysis of his mental processes in the unconscious revealed the fact that, although he really wanted very much to become a writer, he suffered from a conflicting motive that he lacked the required educational background. Knowing also how to use the typewriter or any longer pen, he had unconsciously developed the typewriting

ABILITY TO BELT HOMERS YANKS FORT

Have Won Many Games by One Run Margin

MAKE RECORD

11th Straight Victory is Registered by Cubs

By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer

The ability to belt home runs into the distant bleachers when there are men on bases and the game hanging by a thread has been an outstanding characteristic of the Yankees in their bestdog flight toward the American League pennant.

A glance at their record reveals the clouting New Yorkers have won a total of 36 games by the slender margin of one run, and that in 19 instances they pounded one or more into the circuit to achieve victory. The prodigious punches of Ruth, Gehrig, Lazzeri and the team's other slugs guns have put the Yanks where they are today.

Yesterday it was Gehrig whose two homers brought victory over the Washington White Sox, 6 to 5. Johnny Allen did not pitch much of a ball game, but Tom Zachary, Lou's 30th and 31st four baggers brought in five runs and made it easy for the big rookie to score his 16th triumph in 17 games. Billy Sullivan made four of Chicago's 13 hits.

The lowly Boston Red Sox gave the day's prize performance in knocking a ten pound ball to bear in the first inning and beating Cleveland, 6 to 2. Three solid hits and a base on balls sent the Indian ace shorn-eared, and the Sox went on to score five runs before Jack Russell retired them.

Jimmie Foxx drove home run with Cochrane on base broke a tie in the seventh inning and gave the Athletics a 8 to 4 decision over the Detroit Tigers. Lefty Grove followed seven hits in scoring victory No. 15.

Led by Cuse Bluege who batted across five runs with a pair of doubles and a single the Washington Senators continued their willing sport with a 11 to 7 conquest of St. Louis. Although he was knocked from the hill in the sixth inning, Bill McAfee registered his fourth success since joining the Senators.

The Chicago Cubs set a season's record in the National League by defeating the New York Giants 9 to 8 in 10 innings. That brought it amounted to a gift for the leaders who scored the winning run in the ninth on a hit, balsman's two walks and a double by Cuyler.

Pittsburgh picked up a game on the enlivening the Boston Braves twice, 6 to 5 and 3 to 2. The Pirates rallied to score five runs in the eighth inning to win the first game and again in the ninth with a four-run winner in the eighth.

The Brooklyn Dodgers made only six hits off Syl Johnson and Ted Carlson, but they built them into a 5 to 4 victory over the Reds. Tony Cuccinello's home run with one on featured a first inning rally that netted three runs.

Cincinnati and the Phillies were idle.

Yesterday's Stars

John Wrich, Red Sox—Mailed Indians with four hits.

Lou Gehrig, Yankees—Drove in five runs against White Sox with 30th and 31th home runs.

Cuse Bluege, Senators—His two doubles and single accounted for five runs against Browns.

Jimmie Foxx Athletics—Rapped 40th homer with one on to beat Tigers 6-4.

Pie Traynor ,Pirates— Collected five hits against Braves in twin bill, including three doubles and two triples.

Guy Bush, Cubs—His relief pitching stopped Giants.

Tony Cuccinello and Danny Taylor, Dodgers, aided in Dodger victory over Cardinals with home runs.

GOGGLES NOT SO GOOD

Jockey McCoy was probably the first rider to start wearing goggles. Now they are quite the style with many, but it is the general opinion that the jockeys who demonstrated greater risk in using them. At Ottawa during the first meeting a boy who looked to be on a winning mount, tossed off the reins and went to the assistance of another rider when the latter's glasses became clogged with mud so that his vision was obscured. At Stamford the stewards called Jockey Heman into the stand after he had won on Wesly's Rose. They put him through an eye test and the result was that they demonstrated to the boy, that for his own protection, as well as others in the race, it would be better if he discarded his goggles. He took their advice and put the glasses away for the balance of the day.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Providing the Kingston Ponies win from New Toronto on Wednesday afternoon would it not be a good idea to try and have the third and deciding game played in Belleville? The local ball park can be properly groomed, following the Belleville Fair, which is now in progress, and put in excellent condition for Friday night. At least it is hoped that an effort will be made along these lines.

After looking back over the C.O.B.J. season we are of the opinion that the Belleville Nationals under the guidance of their veteran manager, Walter Grove, are to be congratulated on the manner they made during the schedule. Wash Grove had players. Pessemier Mills and Alec Welk, and built an entirely new team around them. Six of these players had been released by the senior company before the season got under way. O.B.J. Casey, Scarlett, Cooke, Chamberlain, Hilton and Savage were the players mentioned while Harry Morgan had but one season on the senior's bench a few games last year. The youngest ages of these players are also to be taken into consideration when it is pointed out that the youngest of them were under 21 years of age.

Perhaps Art Scarlett was the most important ball player and manager of the Nationals at the close of the season. Art Welk has closed his best season as the veteran Feeney Mills once again showed his prowess by hiking to the .316 clip for the season. Welk had a batting average of .311. Perhaps we all expected too much from the youthful Nationals during their first year in senior competition, but after viewing carefully the situation we think that they are to be congratulated. It might be well to sit down here and now with the prayer management the Belleville baseball fans have been well up in the league race and had they got into a three out of five play-off series with the Falconbridge Nickels we are personal opinion of what the Peter Pattens they had four remember, would have been a long series to the faltering Ponies.

We notice by recent Canadian Press reports that Bellerville only entry Tommy Fedder, in the big swim has safely passed his examination with flying colors. Tommy is reported to be in the very best of condition and expected to be in the money this year. He is the smallest, in stature, of all the 300 odd swimmers entered. Tommy made a splendid showing during the hard cold grind last year. He should finish better this year.

The Kingston press comes well in the fore in regard to the reversing of the league decision regarding the replaying of the Frontenac-Belleville Fruit game tonight. The Kingston magnate, or what not, seem to think that everything should be done their way or not at all. Then the Kingston press also takes a "rap" at Umpire Meagher but sadly neglected to remember that Umpire A. Twigg was about the best player for the Frontenac team. In regards to the interference plays related by the Kingston sports-writer on tonight remind him that the base umpire has as much, and some times more, to say in regards to plays interfering on the paths than has the umpire-in-chief. Some people would do need a rule book for fear they might learn a little about baseball rules.

When the present Belleville Fruit and Kingston Frontenac series opened there was the feeling, especially in Belleville, that the old thing "was in the bag." Now that the Fruit lassies are up even with their Limestone City rivals the "home wasterers" are anything but in an enviable mood following the final decision handed down by President Hamilton of Ottawa. Cooky Lee "Stub" Barrett put his players through a stiff practice yesterday in preparation for the evening's final tilt between the two teams at the old Meyer's Bridge field. In all probabilities the Fruit team will probably be Lowe at Preston will be Manager Desmarais' choice for mound duty.

Carathion dropped out of the softball tournament at the Belleville Fair and Wallbridge was taken in in their stead. The games played on Tuesday afternoon were very hotly contested when Consecon staged a belated rally to defeat Centenary and Victoria sprang a surprise to who when Colleges Hill shot on Wednesday, Wallbridge and Victoria will meet while on Thursday the winners of this game will battle Consecon in the semi-finals. Victoria won the flip and will now play the winner of Thursday's tilt in the final game on Friday.

CONSECON AND VICTORIA WIN

Softball Tournament at Fair Proves Popular Feature

Consecon and Victoria advanced into the semi-finals of the softball tournament being staged by the Belleville Fair Board, when they each defeated Centenary 4 to 3 in a hectic last innings rally and Victoria emerged victorious over College Hill nine by the score of 4 to 3 on Tuesday afternoon.

The opening game of the tournament between Consecon and Centenary saw the latter take the lead only to fall by the wayside when the winners staged a belated rally to tie the score and then with a rumber on the plate E. Hayes was the hero of the day when he hit one of Pitcher Short's slants high up and far away for a home run in the last inning.

In the second game the College Hill lads took the lead but they also could not stand the pace set by the fast Victoria team and literally melted away before the onslaught of Victoria hits. The losers used George Hankinson and Lynch, a left hander on the mound but could not pull through with the needed hit when they were most wanted. Wannamaker was on the hilltop for the final game nine and pitched steady ball throughout.

Following the double header yesterday Hankinson dropped out of the tournament and Wallbridge was admitted in their stead. They meet the fast Redmerville nine on Wednesday afternoon. According to the grey Victoria won the toss and will meet the winner of Wednesday's game. The final game will be between the winner of tonight's Wallridge-Redperville game and Victoria.

MAN STABBED FIVE TIMES BY COMPANION

Montreal, Aug. 31.—With five knife wounds in his body, the most serious in the abdomen, Hugues Miocloc, 41, known as Steve Miocloc, was in hospital here today while Lionel Noel Mailloh, 40, who gave himself up at a police station last night, was being accused, to detectives, "I have killed a man in a fight," was being held pending the result of Mailloh's injuries.

AIRMEN WIN FIRST GAME

Defeat Glen Miller 24-2 in Snappy Softball Game

Trenton, Aug. 31 (Special).—The Air Force team, which has gone through the season without winning, came through here last night and won over Glen Miller by the overwhelming score of 24 to 2. The airmen, boasting a number of new faces in their lineup and it has been a big improvement over the 1931 team, showed that they must play a good brand of ball to win. The boys from out on the prairies have pepped up the air force team to the point where they have a chance with any of the locals. The men from up the river, while playing a good brand of ball, had no chance with the airmen. Several runs have made up their minds to win ness during the season and last night's game was the first so the boys have accomplished their objective and now can rest on their laurels. If the Air Force enter a team in the local league again next year and are able to keep the team together they no doubt they will give some of the older teams some real competition. Wheeler and Gibb were on the mound for the flyers and pitched a good brand of ball but had plenty of support.

GOLF

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 31—The British Walker Cup golf team seeking to regain the trophy the United States today stole a lead on its rivals in the annual series by announcing their lineups for today's opening foursome matches at the country club.

The sturdy veteran, Cyril Tolley, former British amateur champion and a member of five international Walker Cup teams, made pairings as follows:

1—Justin Tony Torrance and Leonard Crawley.

2—John Burke and John Stout.

3—Jesse Sweetser and John Riddian and Eric McBurney.

Although he has probably decided upon his foursome selections, Francis Ouimet, United States amateur titlist and team leader said he would not name them until tonight.

Ouimet has five inexperienced international match players in his squad of 13. But Sweetser, who appears to include himself, George Voigt, Jess Sweetser, Maurice McCarthy; Don Moe and Harrison R. Kinney Johnston. The latter is handicapped by a twisted ankle and he may not play.

CHRISTANANDA TO SPEAK HERE

Famous Hindu Missionary Renews Acquaintances in City

Sadhu John Nelson Christananda, apostolic touring preacher or missionary from India and founder and director of an Indigenous Mission among the high caste people of South India, is in the city, renewing acquaintances made here some months ago, when he spoke to the two service clubs, Rotary and Kiwanis at their weekly luncheons and left a most favorable impression with his perfect English and his discussion of current events especially dealing with life in India and the part that great country is taking in world affairs.

For the past twelve years Christananda, who speaks seven languages fluently, has been travelling in different parts of the world spreading the gospel, and who now is on his way west after touring Eastern Canada will again speak in this city on Sunday next. In the morning he will speak at Emmanuel Church, while in the evening he will address a congregation at the Gospel Alliance Tabernacle on West Moira street. The Sadhu would be pleased to meet any of those whom he met on his previous visits at either of the services.

Fall Fashion Trends

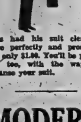
Fashion Thinks of Furs Even If Days are Warm

It does seem rather early to be thinking of furs but designers have been busy all Spring and Summer preparing new styles for the delight of the fashion wise. Here we have an enchanting new coat that shows one of the favourite furs of the Parisien, silver fox. Fashion designers use it with lavish hand, especially for trimming fur wraps. It is used stunningly in the coat illustrated for the fur is Persian lamb whose sombre black is an ideal foil for the silver fox trimming. The coat follows the slim line that all fur wraps will adopt this season.

The Mode of Elegance

The young lady at the left is feeling smartest of the smart for she is wearing one of the regal new frocks of the moment. The new sleeve treatment and higher waistline effect used in this black velvet frock will make it stand out at bridge parties and teas. The draped neckline of white velvet and the inserts of the same material outlining the puffed sleeves add an unusual touch to the garment. A frock, indeed, that will make the wearer a personage in any company.

WHEN BABY CRIES



The mother of a very young baby said hopelessly the other day "I started right. I'm sure. I put Elsa to bed along on rocking, no light, no attention to crying, and everything was fine until lately. Now, at six months old, she kicks up a terrible fuss about being put to bed, and cries when I leave the room. What's happened to her?"

Well, I'd say nothing alarming has happened to Elsa—just some thing that means development, and a realization at last that she IS alone in the dark. Elsa realizes also and with great glee, that her lung power has increased tremendously and that her stick-to-it powers have taken on a sustained strength. In short, she can cry louder and longer now, and with a purpose. Her purpose is to persuade Mother by any method to come in and see what's the matter. The fact that she smiles a welcome, "sings" and crows and acts ecmestly elated when Mother responds ought to tell the whole story, but I know the uncertain feeling that grips a mother's heart when a child cries, and cries, and cries. It isn't a pleasant feeling.

Once again the young mother must begin at scratch, and this time teach baby consciously that he must get to sleep unrocked, alone and in a darkened room; for now he is conscious of it, where before it was a matter of routine over which he had no power and less concern.

Thus twice in a child's life we must accustom him to the dark, and the hardest time is the period Elsa's mother is now enduring. She must prove to Baby that, although he knows and she knows he is alone, unrocked and unlighted, her plan is the one that is going to be adhered to. This only takes a week or a little more at the most, then it is over. But don't weaken! Baby has a line on you now that he didn't used to have, and will be only too quick to take up any advantage he gains at this time.

Surely He's Pleased!

EDITORIAL WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

1. I would very much appreciate all information that you may have concerning an informal house wedding, followed by a reception (informal too).

2. Please send me a form for the invitation.

3. Would a written invitation help to make the affair informal.

J.

1. For the simple home wedding the decorations will, constatently, be simple. Flowers in vases and bowls are placed at convenient and effective places. Sometimes only blooming plants are used, sometimes the main decorations are greenery of various kinds.

The most effective place for the ceremony is usually before a mantel or a fireplace, or in a bay window, or between two windows in the living room. This space can be banked with greens, branches of white pine and hemlock, ferns or mountain laurel, or, in summer, with wild flowers, or, at any season, with large forms of greenery of some kind. Garlands of foliage or flowers are sometimes used most effectively for the background of the place where the ceremony is to be performed. Usually there are two tall items of decoration at the end of this improvised background....two floor candlesticks, for instance, or two simple tall stands for graceful trailing ivy. Or very tall, simple white vases containing white flowers, are beautiful.

The rest of the room should be left as much as possible as it ordinarily is. Heavy central pieces of furniture are, of course, moved to the sides of the room, and it is well to leave several chairs in position so that any older guests may sit, if they wish.

The problem of music for the house wedding is not easy, but appropriateness should be the plan. The Wedding March may be played by a small string orchestra of a few pieces, or by a violin or a piano alone, or it may be sung.

Usually the bride, at a house wedding, has only one attendant, the maid of honor or matron of honor. Usually there are no ushers. The groom has a best man.

As the guests arrive, the bride's mother, the hostess, stands near the door of the room in which the ceremony is to take place, and receives the guests. The bride and her attendants, and the groom and his attendant do not appear before they enter for the ceremony.

When the wedding party is ready the bride's mother is notified and she takes her place in the part of the room reserved for the family of the bride, the left of the ceremony place. On the right of this place stand the mother and father of the groom and the members of their family and their friends.

At the first notes of the wedding march or at some other signal, the clergyman enters the room and takes his place at the improvised altar, facing the assembled guests. Then the groom enters with his best man and they take their places at the right of the altar. If there are ushers, they lead the procession, two by two. If there ve no ushers, as we say, two bridesmaids, they come first, together. Then comes the maid of honor, alone, followed by a flower girl, if there is one. Last come the bride and her father.

The maid of honor stands at the bride's left, to help her with her train and flowers, and the best man stands at the right of the groom to produce the ring at the proper time.

After the ceremony, the groom kisses the bride, the clergyman offers his "best wishes" the bride and his "congratulations" to the groom, and the couple turn in their places to receive the greetings first of their attendants, then of others of their other relatives, and then of their friends. In a house wedding there is no receiving.

The mother of the bride writes a note announcing the wedding.

Dear Jane,

Florence and Tom are to be married at our home on Tuesday, the first of September, at four o'clock at a very informal wedding. We are asking only relatives and the close friends of both, and you would make us all very happy if you and Jack will come to the ceremony at four, and plan to stay afterward to help us cut the wedding cake. You will come.....won't you?

Dearest love from us all, to both your dear friends.

Affectionately,

2. Yes, the informal, written invitation gives the "key" to the informality of the occasion.

(Mrs. Beechman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

CAR STRIKES AGAINST BRIDGE CEMENT PIER

Stirling, Aug. 31 (Special)—Passengers in a car, which struck a cement pier at Donnan's Bridge, two miles east of Stirling early Wednesday morning C. Wilde and Miss Elizabeth Wright were injured but not seriously by flying glass, sustaining minor cuts about the face and hands and later were treated for those injuries. The car was wrecked and towed to Stirling garage for repairs. Traffic Officer Sykes went to the scene of the accident.

EDUCATION OR MARRIAGE

By Beatrice Fairfax

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

This is the time of the year when girls get to get letter from girls and boys, asking if they should get married or keep on with school and college. And if they're under age, or short on education, I always beg them to keep on with school and have a better equipment before they take on the responsibilities of marriage.

It is an absolutely tragic thing for a boy, who has no profession, trade or proper training for earning a living to marry. Perhaps he has been able to pick up some hand-to-mouth job during the summer vacation, it pays fairly well, and under the influence of a pair of lovely eyes, moonlight, and the primal urge to love, he decides to cut school and get married.

He may keep the job for a few months, then some change in the management, or the boy himself falling due to anxiety or lack of responsibility—and the job is gone. Those unskilled hand-to-mouth jobs are hard to find, as many boys who have tramped the soles off their shoes have found out. And when they have nothing in the way of equipment to fall back on—the real trouble begins.

The girl is in the same boat as her young husband, she has married too young. Perhaps she hasn't finished her grade school work, or there has been a year or two at high school at most. As for anything in the way of training for a job, it has never entered her pretty head. She can't add up a column of figures correctly or write an institution. The fault lies with reckless people who rush in, without "due consideration" as the marriage service has it. Not every girl who is a joy to take out of evenings has the stamina to stand by those words in her marriage vows: "In sickness and health, for richer or poorer," That takes real grit.

If these days, though we have muddled and blundered, vocational training is open to everyone who has the ambition and industry to take advantage of it. Cupid may be blind, but young people contemplating marriage should not only see things clearly, but try to acquire something in the way of second sight as well.

LATE MRS. IRWIN MISSED BY FRIENDS

West Lake, Aug. 31—The sudden passing of Mrs. Robert Irwin on Sunday morning, came as a shock to friends and neighbors.

While Mrs. Irwin has not been in good health for some time, she had been able to attend to her housework duties as usual and her death on Sunday was very unexpected. A woman of sterling qualities, she will be greatly missed by many neighbors with whom she was a favorite. Her husband predeceased her several years ago. Her nephew Mr. Allon Irwin whom she had reared from childhood, and his young son Eugene to whom she was much attached, have the sympathy of a large circle of friends. The funeral service was held at the home Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Clayton Burr of Bloomfield conducted the afternoon service at the United Church on Sunday in his usual efficient manner. The canning factory opened for the season on Friday.

Tomato picking is in order now among the farmers.

A NEW BREAKFAST DISH THAT LOOKS HANDSOME and tastes even handsomer

HERE'S a wonderful new breakfast food that you're going to like a lot—and often! It's called "Grape-Nuts" Flakes, and if you haven't tried it you've missed a very, very pleasant experience!

"Grape-Nuts" Flakes is a cereal nobody has to learn to like. You'll take to these big, crinkly, sunshiny flakes with the very first spoonful. They're crisp and golden and dimpled—a tempting, delicate form for the grandest of breakfast flavors—the glorious flavor of "Grape-Nuts" Cereal!

FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS WERE REACTIONARY

Decline Fairly General in Active Trading

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—Toronto Stocks were reactionary in the afternoon session today, but most issues were of a fractional nature. The decline was fairly general, low ever, in active trading.

Consolidated Smelters established a new peak for the year of 80 and dropped back 1 1-2 at mid-day. International Nickel, Brazilian Traction, Hollinger, Steel Corporation of Canada all showed fractional losses at noon. Ploughs and Imperial Oil were unchanged in spite of trend. Bell Telephone lost a point to 104, Massey Harris after selling up 1 to 58 dropped back to the previous close. Bank stocks were steady.

TRADERS CASH IN PROFITS

Selling Movement Hits Stocks And Grain Market

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The stock market ended the second month of August today with traders generally actively cashing in their paper profits.

Rather disappointing reports from this steel industry, and the approach of the Labor Day week-end accelerated the selling movement, which also affected the grain market as well as stocks. A brief upturn in the morning failed to carry prices above the previous day, and by midday the list had receded to show many losses of 1 to 4 points. Here and there some recoveries of a point or more from the bottom in the fourth hour but they were not fully maintained.

Notably heavy issues were the Standard Brands, Utilities and Rails. U. S. Steel common lost 2, while preferred 4. Miscellaneous issues off 2 to more than 3 included Allied Chemical, American Can, North American, Western Union, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Reading Great Northern preferred, Texas Corporation Smelting, Eastman, and Coca Cola. Chain store issues showed less a point or more, including Safeway, Kresge, Woolworth, Montgomery Ward and New York Central.

Brighter aspects of the day's news included the weekly report of Electrical Power Production, which set a first gain for the fourth week of August since 1929. There was an obvious feeling in speculative quarters that it might be well to let the market drift momentarily, giving business a chance to catch up. But the weekly report of no deterioration in Wall Street in the restored confidence in the future.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 31 (CP). — Left-overs totalled 1100 at the opening of the Toronto Livestock Market today. The quality of the offering was very plain. Trade was slow and there were few sales up to 11 a.m.

Receipts were: Cattle 330; calves

EASIER TREND LIGHT TRADE

Recessions However Confined to Inter-Listed Issues.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 31.—Mining Lead price trend developed an easier tendency in the second hour unlisted prices of light profit-taking on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market today. Significant recessions were confined to inter-listed stocks which reflected a downturn on the Montreal boards.

Bevanlie was in renewed demand at the opening and showed a gain. Hamilton taken of 3 at 36, a new high for the year. Siscoe recovered 5 to 90 and Howey Gold a couple to 60.

Oil and Silver Groups were mixed and Falconbridge down a fraction. Small losses also appeared in Premier and Pen Pete.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT FAIR IS HUGE SUCCESS

Livestock Exhibit One of the Best Seen in This District in Years

EVERY BREED OF CATTLE ARE SEEN AT FAIR

Largest Exhibit of Cattle Ever to Grace Fair Grounds

CRAMPED FOR SPACE

Improvised Sheds Are Erected at Last Minute

There are other sounds besides the blare of the calliope or the grinding drone of the merry-go-round at the Midway for ardent fair-goers to investigate; there is the soft lowing of cattle, and the stamp of horses' feet in the flat sheds on the north side of the Fair Grounds to follow up. And the Intelligencer man was never stocked better for animal lovers to inspect their fill at the beautiful animals, which have been quartered in the old barns, the new barns, and even the auxiliary newer barns and stables, which have been put up by carpenters at the job at the grounds, who found that even the new additions, which have been put up this year were not enough to take care of the many entries which have been made.

What makes cattle low and horses stamp and whinny in their stalls at the fairs?

Mr. Garnett Kerr, Campbellford, who was busy around some of his exhibits of cattle here yesterday, took time out to answer the question.

"They're a little nervous and strange to their surroundings. In a day or so they'll all right, but just now they can't make things out. They're so used to seeing only certain things."

A well groomed cow turned around in her stall and emitted several deep calls.

"She's looking for her calf, mostly," Mr. Kerr explained. "It's been weaned long ago, but she still keeps crying for it."

Down at the far end Mr. O. H. Whole Mark from Little Britain, whose stock occupied the last stalls proudly showed off some of the specimens. He had Colswell and Dorset sheep, and some fine Berkshire swine also. "They're not all we have," he explains. "We sent a lot of the cattle to the Toronto Exhibition. We hope to sop good prizes, too." This will explain why Belleville fair always was good exhibits. What is good enough for Toronto Exhibition is most certainly good enough for the Belleville Fair also. Mr. Mark was very certain on that point.

Swine Exhibit Heavy

Mr. R. J. Carbutt, whose stock occupied the first few stalls, showed a number of fine Yorkshire hogs. One hog, a Yorkshire boar, which will be the largest hog in captivity, reared centrally in the middle of the clean straw, and grunted amiably. A number of Leicester sheep also had dark nose shades at the south of the paddock. Those, who have been acquainted with the fairs knew that Mr. Carbutt as one of the most outstanding fall fair men to be found in Canada. Over eighty, Mr. Carbutt still takes a keen interest in selecting animals. Prizes, which have been received during his annual exhibit could be too numerous to mention. This year he hopes to add to his laurels.

Why is it that Picton Fair Board wouldn't alter any regulations to enable Picton and Prince Edward County to show animals at their fair?" asked Mr. Carbutt. It seems rather funny for them to refuse to show their stock in their own neighboring counties. A lot of people are wondering why they don't do it," pursued Mr. Carbutt, when an answer was not forthcoming.

Mr. Martin, Carlton, Corbyville, whose stock was short-woolled sheep, and Berkshire hogs and dark bears, could offer no answer to the same question.

The next few stalls were occupied by the stock belonging to Mr. A. H. Salmon, Consecon, who exhibited a nice lot of Hereford cattle and Dorset sheep. He was busy grooming them. "One of the best fairs yet," declared Mr. Linton. "A nice turnout," he added.

Explanation Given

Mr. J. P. Verden of the Anecdia Stock Farms, Picton, answered the question, which had been bothering some of the exhibitors down the line. Several beautiful Shorthorns munched contentedly in their stalls as he spoke.

"Picton this year decided, that their prize lists were not large enough to compete with other fairs. Prince Edward County Exhibitors are showing at fair," he declared.

Mr. Carbutt, who had asked the question in the first place, strolled up, and accepted the answer. "Looks like Belleville and Shannonville, were the only ones, who were not afraid of competition any more," remarked Mr. Carbutt with finality.

More Hereford cattle, and the owner, Mr. A. L. Linton, Cobourg, busy grooming. He also will exhibit his prize stock at the fall fairs, which follow Belleville Fair. Hopes to get a lot of prizes, too.

Mr. C. E. Griggs, Rice Lake Farms, Roseneath, had a fine collection of Shorthorns in his allotted stalls. Also Clydesdales. Bleecker, Holloway, next to him, showing a number of solid red cattle. A large bull "kind as a kitten" lay, as cases of beef; and a very large bull boy loosing in more straw and walking under the animals head's to get rid of. "Not a bit of danger." Change At Other Fairs

Clarnell Kerr, Campbellford, with a selection of Jerseys, which had been acclaimed Champion Herd" at the LaChute, Quebec Fair, from which he had just returned proudly showed the awards. "Hope to get more prizes at the Belleville Fair," he declared. "We'll have about two more months on the road, Kingston Fair is the last stop after Belleville."

Mr. Allan Hubble of Havelock, had many Jerseys nine of the diminutive milk givers chewing contentedly in their stalls. On the exhibit of the Jarrell Bros. of the Hazlewood Jersey Farm, Canning, tied for honors with the same class of cattle. "This is the largest exhibit for the fair," Mr. Jarrell Bros.

Little Jersey calves, pushing and butting each other, were a feature of the exhibit of Mr. J. M. Boyd, also of Canning. Mr. Boyd had a framed card to a number of children who gathered around to look at the calves.

Mr. W. Collins and Son, Plain field, had more of the same breed. Mr. Collins, Jr., was busy, too, in a number of adults and children of Scotch descent. Evidently there was a fascination about calves, that was hard to define. Many a child, who visited them at the stalls.

Many Ayrshires

Far over on the other side of the grounds the Ayrshire stables held more cattle. Mallory Bros. from Consecon, had a fine herd, head of large, sleek Holsteins from the Laurentian Valley Farm, too, to be used to show at some of the later fairs.

Mr. W. M. Gray, Foxboro, who also exhibited the same class, attributed his interest in the fair well with his stock to the fairs which will follow Belleville. "We were also pleased in these stalls were some of the stock of the Hastings Heifer Club.

Robt. Merritt and Son of Napanee had several pedicels open for inspection of the large number of Ayrshires exhibited. One bull, which will be made by this stable, the Sinville Stock Farm, will be exhibited at Belleville, Odessa, and Kingston. Mr. Rutherford of the Agricultural Extension Law, had a long line of Ayrshires slabed in the stalls. Many more Ayrshires would have been put up this year, as did Mr. Alec Hume and Mr. Alec Campbell, who had fourteen head of the same stock. More Ayrshires, the Hon. Mr. Dr. Ryan, M.P.P., played on the paddock greeting ownership of a beautiful bull, there were on show. These same animals will be displayed all the local fall fairs throughout this section.

ALREADY 6,000 HAVE VISITED CLEAN MIDWAY

Show All Canadian And Employees Most Courteous

SPLENDID RIDES

Staff of Over 200 is Employed And Show Well Managed

It's an avenue of strange sights, strange sounds, bright lights and queer noises. It's flanked on each side by a tented city, which contains the glare of the all night ring circus, the educational features of a big industry, the thousand and one devices more fun per square inch than the proverbial barrel of monkeys. Upwards of six thousand people have so far visited the bonnie, bright midway, the sideshows, the merry-go-round, "The Whip", "The Loop", Ferris wheel, and various attractions and so far have failed to register a single kick or complaint against any of the operators or workers on the Midway of Bill Sim's Greater Shows, which moved into the Fair Grounds on Monday, and have prepared to stay until the last day of the Belleville Fair. Mr. Midway, Bill Sim, that they hoped it would be," declared Mr. Midway, Bill Sim, the genial owner of the Belleville Fair Board. The midway is under the direct supervision of Warden R. M. Mitchell, of Hastings County, President of the Belleville Fair Board.

Manager Sums Up.

Mr. R. H. Goeke, Manager of the All Canadian Sim's Greater Shows, has instructed his staff to be courteous to the public. "Reputable shows can afford to gain knowledge at any of the fall fairs throughout the country. Our shows, therefore, do not hope to do business with any municipality if they ever, already have any complaints or dissatisfactions behind them when they pull off into the next fair to play over. We have a reputation as well as has the merchant or business man of your town has. Our whole existence depends on satisfying the public and avoiding trouble. The day of the fly-by-night carnival shows have about passed. Now every good midway should strive to be a family affair. It is my ambition, and I believe that every member of the family. That is our motto, and has been, ever since we started. Any legitimate complaint will be looked into at once. We run down and find out what the trouble is, if it is the fault of any of our employees have done anything they have been warned against that would cause dissatisfaction, we train trouble in the past has been settled amicably and to the satisfactions and cities in which we play. This Midway is the largest in Canada. It maintains a staff of over two hundred employees, of which a number are local men, who are hired at each town and city, which they play. Eight baggage cars on a special train are needed to transport the equipment. There are fourteen paid attractions, including the Whip, Loop, merry-go-round, Whip and others, every employee of the Midway, especially Paint so far has been investigated by the veteran of all midways, Mr. R. H. Goeke.

Motorcycles Hummed

To wind up a perfect day for the kiddies the Quinte Motorcycle Club gave a demonstration in front of the grandstand. This was enjoyed to the utmost by all present. The grandstand was filled to capacity by kiddies and their parents, friends and parents. Those taking part in the demonstration were Messrs. G. Davies, D. Pfaff, Ha. Ackerman, W. Leavitt, O. Chambers, K. Knudsen, B. Dorse and R. Knudsen. The members of the club gave a demonstration in which they performed breath-taking stunts before the grandstand. Plank bridges which the riders raced down the track and drove up a high bank, then turned their machines through space to land some 15 or 20 feet away after which the jump was also applauded. The last feature was death taking. Other dare devil tricks were performed by the members of the Quinte Motorcycle Club before they staggered their final act of a three mile race in which one machine crashed into the north fence on the east side.

The running race, in which one of the drivers was thrown by his horse, injuring Louis Bennett, veteran harness horseman, was won by Ernie Potter with R. Palmer second.

By the time the kiddies wended their way once more through the midway they were ready to call it a day and return home telling tales of wonder and mystery to their parents and friends of the great 1932 Belleville Fair.

Largest Opening Day Crowd in History of Fair

Without exception the largest crowd ever to grace a Belleville Fair opening day was present on opening of Children's Day at the 1932 edition of the great Belleville Fair on Tuesday.

Hundreds of kiddies took possession of the park and with everything selling at 5 cents, or a multiple of a nickel, they reigned supreme. No matter where one looked they were faced with the shining and jubilant smiles of kiddies who were enjoying themselves to the utmost.

All through the midway they rushed and passed the various attractions and so far have failed to register a single kick or complaint against any of the operators or workers on the Midway of Bill Sim's Greater Shows, which moved into the Fair Grounds on Monday, and have prepared to stay until the last day of the Belleville Fair. Mr. Midway, Bill Sim, that they hoped it would be," declared Mr. Midway, Bill Sim, the genial owner of the Belleville Fair Board. The midway is under the direct supervision of Warden R. M. Kiddies Return Home Tired But Happy After They Romp And Play as Guests of Fair

CHILDREN HAPPY

Program in Front Grandstand For Their Benefit

MANY VISIT POULTRY BLDG.

Not as Many Entries as Last Year But Quality Better

The quality of poultry shown at this year's Belleville Fair is far above the average which has been shown in years past. Although the entries in the egg guide as large as it was last year, the fine birds exhibited by the lovers of racey poultry are far above the average shown in fall fairs.

Nearly every variety of domestic poultry are exhibited in large numbers and add considerably to the beauty of the Poultry Building at this time. Many visitors have been attraction in the poultry building by the pair of Bronze Toms and turkeys. Especially one might mention the male bird. When he struts around with his tail feathers his feathers he shows exactly how magnificent the turkey can really appear. Other fine specimens of hills and turkeys are also to be seen in evidence.

The beautiful Chinese geese with their long swan-like necks are another sight which adds considerable to the beauty of the scene. Other varieties such as Toulouse geese are also to be seen and admired. Some of these birds are of an enormous size weighing many pounds.

Variety of ducks are also shown and include a varied collection including many runners, pekins and Rouens. Some of the prettiest little ducks are shown in these many classes.

In the chicken display there are many fine breeds. Those looking birds in the country on exhibition at the fair this year. They include such birds as the Plymouth Rocks, large entry of brahmas, beautiful pair of glacks, chicken toth silver and golden, wyandottes, rhode island reds, Dorkings, white, black, red and partridge), minorcas (white and black), durkins, sussex, black spanish, leghorns (white, buffs and brown) are in great numbers.

A feature of the chicken exhibit is a beautiful showing of old fashioned breeds. There are many shown in this part of the province. Other varieties are the langshans, rhode island reds, jersey black giants, black spanish, cornish game, black spanish, cornish game, blue andalusians and old English games were also shown. Also exhibited in the chickens many beautiful birds with their gay plumage of golden (gold and silver), cochins (white and buff), polish, bantams, and many small game bantams. There are also two rare combs shown also.

A large number of pigeons are exhibited at this year's fair and are considerably to the splendor of the poultry display. Many varieties have been on exhibition. Chairman Jack Holmes and his committee have labored long to assure the 1932 poultry edition of the Belleville Fair the decided success it now enjoys.

FOR SURE FOOT COMFORT use Cress Corn Salve sold by all druggists.

Closing the port of Santos, Brazil, due to the insurrection, has interrupted an overseas trade movement from that port, averaging $12,000 000 monthly.

Clifford Revue Pleasing Peppy and Full of Thrills

The grandstand at the Belleville Fair last evening was in no ways taxed by those in attendance at the fair. Evidently they were waiting for a later time to see the night show. The bleachers however were crowded with the rather tired boyhood and girldom of the city, who thoroughly enjoyed the excellent program presented by the Belleville Municipal Band, the Turney family in their varied acrobatic numbers and the happy and clean Clifford Revue with its Radio Rambler's Orchestra. The latter is in Belleville this the last fair Belleville ever had; it is the best entertainment ever presented at the fair by its directors.

The Entertainment secured by the Turney family in the afternoon and the Revue Show presented to be followed by the Clifford Revue. With its pretty girls excellent dancing, attractive costuming and clever comedians, a show of an hour and a quarter was enjoyed by all onlookers. The directors of the fair have outdone themselves this year in providing a "before the Belleville" entertainment of worth. To a discriminating audience the show will fill all requirements. Peppy, pleasing and pleasurable.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

On the next corner stood the City Bank, and there Mary Faith She found herself looking up at the lighted windows of Morgan Van Westover on the fifth floor.... Kim was probably up there now, winding up his day's work before coffee, where he had met that Janet-girl of his.

"I think we'll go to Armbruster's for the night," Mary Nesbit was saying as he swung his car into the rewarding doorway of the Hotel Clarke. "I have a charge account there, haven't I, Mary Faith?"

There were no holly wreaths, no red-and-green lights in the windows of Armbruster's jewelry store. For Armbruster's prided itself on its unbusyness and its old-fashioned dignity. It was the oldest store on Bridge street. Never advertised even in the newspapers and it never made any display.

"Sometimes I bring my wristwatch in here to have it regulated," Mary Faith said as they stepped inside. "And just to walk into the place makes me feel like a member of Slam."

A salesman in a frock coat and a tight wing collar came up to them bowing, as Mary Faith knew he would, self, naturally. He led them halfway down the centre aisle and laid two black velvet watering cloths on the showcase in front of them.

"Don't you think an aquamarine would be nice for Judy, Mr. Nesbit? Or a white-gold signet ring with just one or two little diamonds set in it, perhaps?" asked Mary Faith. She had a queer, uneasy feeling that someone was watching her. She half turned, looking from the show-case to look about her—and there, not ten feet from her, stood Kim Farrell.

Kim was leaning over the counter holding two mesh bags in his hands. Beside him stood a girl whom Mary Faith could not see.

He was not looking at the mesh bags or at the girl. His eyes were on Mary Faith's eyes; and as she watched him he laid the bags down upon the showcase and came toward her.

"Hello," he said and held out his hand.

"Hello yourself," Mary Faith never knew how she managed to say those two words in that cheerful offhand way. She did not touch his hand.

"How are you these days, Mary Faith?"

"Oh, I'm all right. I beg alone," she answered. With an effort she turned her head away from him, then turned her whole body away.

"Don't you think an aquamarine would be just the thing?" she asked Mark Nesbit again, without clearly knowing what she said.

They finally decided on one. A small square one set in a circle of seed pearls. They waited while it was put into a white velvet box and wrapped up in white-and-silver paper.

Kim and the girl were still looking at mesh bags when they left the store. Mary Faith did not glance in their direction as she passed them. She never had had a moment's curiosity about the girl who had taken Kim away from her.

It was ten minutes after five by the illuminated clock in the tower of the City Hall Building when she and Mark Nesbit again stepped out into the sidewalk, jostled by last minute shoppers on Spring Street.

"I'm going to meet my mother at six and drive her home," he said as they turned west toward the garage. "So I'll have plenty of time to take you home first, Mary Faith. Unless you'd like to go somewhere and have some tea...."

"No thanks." Food was the last thing that Mary Faith wanted at that moment. But there's no need for you to drive me home, Mr. Nesbit. I can get a street car at the next corner."

Well, I'd like to drive you home if you don't mind—I want to talk to you." He took her arm. "My mother would like you to come out to our house for Christmas....Judy's going to a matinee with some of the girls she goes to school with, and the Grants are going down to Washington for a week, so my mother and I will be alone. She'd love to have you up about it tonight."

Mary Faith knew just what Christmas day would be like at Mrs. Puckett's. There would be little-pig sausages and wheat cakes for breakfast. Afterward Mr. McClintock would complain of indigestion and send Agnes flying for bottles of baking-soda. Then, at seven o'clock Mary Faith would go to church and that would be followed by mistletoe and holly on the wall, candles flickering, the choir-boys singing "O come all ye Faithful" that always made her heart swell and a lump come into her throat.

There would be a four-course dinner at Mrs. Puckett's at two o'clock and later on Mrs. Puckett would fall asleep with a handkerchief over her face while the Brock girls and Miss Halperin and Mary Faith played auction bridge before the fire.

At seven o'clock there would be a cold supper in the dining room and people would come in from the neighborhood to call—people who did on Sundays and holidays. At ten o'clock Mary Faith would go upstairs to bed; and Christmas, "the gladdest day of all the year," would be over for her.

"It's lovely of your mother and you, Mark," she said slowly, racking her brains for an excuse to give him for not accepting the invitation—she didn't want to accept. It was one thing to go out to the house in Rose Valley as a secretary and quite another thing to spend the day there as a guest. "But I don't believe I can go. You see, Mrs. Puckett's a sort of second-mother to me, and I always spend Christmas with her," she went on.

"You spend every day in the year with Mrs. Puckett."

"I spend every day in the week with her—and Sunday, too. And she turned him down?"

Mary Faith nodded.

"Well, all the fools aren't dead yet, it seems. Mary Faith, let me give you some advice.... You go down to that office the morning and tell that man you've changed your mind. Tell him you'll marry him and have something in your life besides a dirty office all day long and a boarding house full of fussy people to come home to at night."

Mary Faith looked down at her knees this minute and pray to heaven that he doesn't change his mind about you overnight!"

It was the first time in her life that she had ever spoken of her home as anything but a family hotel and a first-class one, at that. There was a crackle of tears behind her steel-rimmed glasses and her old chin wobbled.

A knock came on the door, and then Agnes's voice: "Miss Halperin, there's a gentleman downstairs to see you."

Mary Faith opened the door.

"It's Mr. Farrell, ma'am. Mr. Farrell that used to come to see you, you know." Agnes was smiling. She had always liked Kim and thought his extra portions of cream and dessert when he came to the house for meals.

"Close the door, Agnes, and wait there in the hall for a minute."

"Yes, ma'am." Puckett's maid spoke. "He's turned up again like a bad penny—just at the wrong time!" she said in a half whisper as soon as the door had closed upon Agnes. "I wouldn't see him if I were you, Mary Faith. Don't think that I don't know how he's treated you, because I do. I know he threw you overboard three months ago, and during what happened to you then now that you're on your feet again and have a chance to marry a man with money and position, back he comes to make you throw the second time.... Let me go down and tell him you're never going to see him again."

Mary Faith shook her head. Her face had gone dead white and her eyes were like blue-black water.

"I'm going down," she said, and she went.

Kim was waiting for her at the foot of the stairs. His fur-collared overcoat was on the hall table and he was turning and twisting his hat in his hands as he watched her come down the last flight of steps.

Her heart seemed to be beating all over her body and there was a singing in her ears; but she greeted him casually as if she had been seeing him every night for months.

"Hello, Kim."

"Get your coat," he said. "Oh, Mary Faith, I've got to talk to you. I want you to go for a drive."

Her wraps hung on the hall rack where she had put them after dinner while Miss Halperin was getting her room ready for her. Kim down and put them on with hands that were shaking.

"All right, Kim. I'm ready."

The minute the front door had closed upon them he burst forth:

"Mary Faith, I've been like a crazy man for the last three hours! To-day was take that store and let that fellow buy a ring for you! To see my girl with another man! Oh, my Lord, I couldn't stand it, Mary Faith!"

He opened the door of his little car and they got into it. They sat there looking at each other in the flickering radiance of the street lamp that stood in front of Mrs. Puckett's house.

"I wore your ring for a good many years, Kim. I wore it until I took it away from you," Mary Faith said quietly.

He nodded, his hands pressed to his temples. "I know—I know. Don't talk to me about it. Don't tell me what a fool I was."

Suddenly he dropped his hands from his face and caught Mary Faith by her wrists.

"You can't marry me or not, but I love you more this minute than I ever did in my life before."

"Only because you think I'm someone else," Mary Faith answered him. "You haven't wanted to see me for three months, Kim. You've been perfectly happy with that girl. You were perfectly happy with her to-night in that store when you were buying her a mesh bag.

Her pulses were still now, and she could think clearly once again.

"You're what Mrs. Puckett would call a dog in the manger," she said, "You don't want me yourself, and you don't want anybody else to have me."

Kim groaned. "Don't talk like that, Mary Faith....I swallow my pride and come here to try to fix things up between us—and you won't even listen to me."

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR—No. 18

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

At sight of the hideous, bestial-appearing little men running toward him, on their short crooked legs, a qualm of paralyzing fright went through the shaken nerves of Werper. With a scream he turned to flee into the gloomy corridor, but the frightful men anticipated his intention. They blocked his way, seized him, and though he fell to his knees, grovelling for his life, they bound him and hurled him into the inner temple.

The rest was but a repetition of what Tarzan and Jane Clayton had passed through. The priestesses came and with them La, the High Priestess. Werper was raised and laid across the altar. Cold sweat ran from him as she raised her cruel knife. The death chant fell upon his tortured ears. His staring eyes wandered to the golden goblets from which the hideous priestesses would soon quench their inhuman thirst with his own, warm life-blood.

He wished that he might be granted the brief respite of unconsciousness before the final plunge of the keen blade—and then there was a frightful roar that sounded almost in his ears. The High Priestess lowered her dagger. Her eyes went wide with horror. The priestess screamed and fled madly toward the exits. The great beasts roared out their rage and terror according to the temper of their courage. They fled in frenzy.

Werper strained his neck about to catch a sight of the cause of their panic, and when, at last, he saw it, he, too, went cold in dread, for what his eyes beheld was the figure of a huge Ape standing in the centre of the temple, and already a single victim lay mangled beneath his cruel paws. Again the beast roared and turned his baleful gaze upon the altar. La staggered forward, reeled and fell across the body of Werper in a swoon.

JOHN BOLES AND IRENE DUNNE IN "FANNIE HURST'S GREATEST NOVEL "BACK STREET."

Ever since Romeo and Juliet played out their beautiful but dangerous romance, followers of literature, the drama and the screen, have been captivated by ideal lovers. At least a pair of ideal lovers has been brought in the screen. They are Irene Dunne and John Boles, and they can be seen in that most talked-of and romantic able book of Fannie Hurst's "Back Street," which Universal has been a year and a half in bringing to the screen. A lot of this time was expended in a thorough and exhaustive search to play the roles of Ray Schmidt and Walter Saxel. They had to have a lot of unusual qualifications. One of these was that they must be able to look and act characteristics of those who attended over a period of almost thirty years.

But the most important qualification of all was that they look like and act like ideal lovers. For that is what these two characters are in the imagination of Fannie Hurst's fertile brain, were to the nth degree. And that is what Irene Dunne and John Boles are. We have the word of John M. Stahl, one of the screen's most successful directors of domestic drama, for it.

It is true that in adapting the novel to the screen certain liberties were taken with the characters of both Walter Saxel and Ray Schmidt. The principal change was in the character of Saxel, the most outstanding characteristic in the book was his selfishness. On the screen this is carelessness.

"Back Street" is the feature attraction at the Belle today, Thursday and Friday, matinee daily.

Tom Mix and Tony

Tom Mix and "Tony" the wonder horse are appearing at the Belle, on the double feature program on Saturday and Monday in his newest thriller "Rider of Death Valley."

Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen, Richard Arden and Adrienne Ames are featured in the second feature offering "Guilty as Charged" which will be notable for shivers, laughs and thrills galore.

The coyote preys on domestic stock such as sheep, calves and poultry, but it is difficult to get the rabbit.

Alberta's big game regulations require hunters to wear a coat and cap of scarlet material.

At The Capitol

"HOLLYWOOD SPEAKS"

Genevieve Tobin and Pat O'Brien teamed together by Columbia under the directorial hand of Busby Berkeley have made a Hollywood picture that does its fascinating eavesdropping on the higher-ups of filmdom with a deft grace and revealing accuracy. The picture is "Hollywood Speaks," and it is showing now at the Capitol Theatre.

The garlands that were bestowed on Miss Tobin for her performance in "One Hour With You" will be repeated as a result of her work in "Hollywood Speaks." With all her delightful poised charm, she interprets the dramatic role of an extra girl, who fights to stardom. Pat O'Brien plays a newspaper columnist in the perfect fashion and audiences have relied on Pat O'Brien to deliver since he smashed his way into popularity and fame in "The Front Page." Lucien Prival, as a temperamental movie director, puts conviction into his role. Ralf Harolde is great as the gangster, and Margaret Livingston, Rita LaRoy and Anderson Lawlor do excellent bits of character work.

An extra girl, who pines for stardom . . . who would commit suicide if she could not attain her goal . . . stardom, by means of another girl's death is the type of girl played by Genevieve Tobin. And before the picture ends she has attained her desire . . . leaving a suicide and a dead man behind her.

Based on realistic incidents, "Hollywood Speaks" is presented with all the glamour and the drama that characterizes Hollywood. Edna Buswell has handled the story with finesse and a nice sense of dramatic climaxes. "Hollywood Speaks" is well worth seeing—and important is everyone who wants to become intimately acquainted with the film colony.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Old Mr. Toad Forgets the Heat

Astonishing it is and strange
How suddenly a mind can change.
Old Mr. Toad, the fat, the rich,

Old Mr. Toad had left the Smiling Pool. His staying days were over for this year. He was as eager now to get to the Old Briar Rose Brown's garden as he had been a few weeks ago to get to the Smiling Pool. He left the Smiling Pool at the Old Orchard and went creeping out from the Purple Hills by Old Mr. Toad's private path in night unless the day happens to be rainy or at least dark and damp.

Just as soon as the Smiling Pool says Old Mr. Toad, "It dries my skin so that I am not comfortable that I cannot bear. How people move about in the daytime when it is actually seem to enjoy it is something beyond my understanding."

Now while Old Mr. Toad had been singing in the Smiling Pool he had fasted. That is he had gone without food. When he left the Smiling Pool he began to think of something to eat. So he traveled a little way in the night using now and then to catch insects or swallow a tasty worm that happened across.

The night was very warm for there had been no rain for some time and jolly round bright Mr. Moon had been shining down. It became hot almost as soon as Mr. Sun began slowly climb up in the blue, blue sky. Daylight came when Old Mr. Toad happened to be where he had nothing under which to hide and the ground was baked so hard that he couldn't very well dig in.

"I'll have to keep going until I find a place where I can keep out of the sun," he grumbled. "I just can't stand it. I ought to have stopped before daylight. That is a time to be traveling. If only I were up there in that garden now I wouldn't care how hot it gets. Ha! What do I see? There is an old board I can crawl under. I'll just spend the day under that board. I'll move on when night comes. Phew! It is hot! There is nothing in all the Great World that could make me travel another step today now that I have found this board."

He slowly hopped to one end of the board and crawled under it. It was a big board and it lay across some sticks so that it was not flat on the ground. There was room for Old Mr. Toad to crawl in by flattening himself a little. Then, too, the earth was not caked hard as under here and he knew that he could dig himself in if he wanted to. He did hollow out a little place and in it squated in comparative comfort.

"This is a good thing I found this place when I did," thought he. "I'll just sleep until the Long Shadows come. Then I can travel in comfort and be all rested and prepared to go to sleep.

Then he began to feel why he heard a queer sound that instantly made him wide awake. It was a queer rustling sound and it seemed to come from near the other side of the board. He wondered what if some one else was under that board. Perhaps there was another Toad under there. Perhaps there was the nest of a Mouse. Anyway he knew he wouldn't be able to sleep until he found out. If he had neighbors he wanted to know who they were.

He would hear that queer rustling sound and then all would be quiet for a while. Then he would hear it again. So, taking great care not to make any noise himself, he crept forward until at last he was very near the other end of that board. Then he discovered that his neighbor was and for one terrible minute it seemed to him that his very heart stopped. His neighbor was no other than Bluffer the Adder. Yes, sir, it was Bluffer the Adder who was under that board.

Some minutes later had you been there you would have seen Old Mr. Toad creep out from under that board and start across the Green Meadows in the hot sun at a rate you wouldn't have believed possible. He had forgotten all about the heat and how dry his skin was. He had had a complete, a very complete change of mind in regard to traveling on a bright day. No one thing did he worried him was that he couldn't travel fast enough.

CONFERENCE NEARLY OVER

Definite Conclusions as to What Must be Done

Toronto, Aug. 31 (CP)— After two days' discussion at the National Conference of Agricultural officials today nearly definite conclusions as to what must be done to get the Canadian farmer's business on a paying basis.

Special committees drafted to deal with every problem from the health of cattle to the price of eggs are due to report their findings to the conference for its approval. The broad object of the work is to help the farmer market his produce profitably by reorganizing and co-ordinating every agricultural service in the Dominion exposing the city satisfaction with the progress of the conference he summoned Hon. Robert Weir, Federal Minister of Agriculture, entered the discussion on poultry, and dairy products yesterday to tell 100 delegates, that Empire countries supply only 30 per cent of the eggs consumed in the United Kingdom and less than 20 per cent of the dairy products. The new Empire preferences should increase the percentage, he suggested.

J. S. Ferguson, Dominion Dairy Commission-er said the farmer's greatest opportunity now lies with concentrated milk products. At present, he explained, the United Kingdom imports 320,000,000 lbs. of these of which only 8.6 per cent is British and 1.8 Canadian.

Farmers could obtain better prices by reducing costs and organizing to increase their bargaining power declared W. B. Rosevear, chairman of the Ontario Marketing Board. Collectively strong, individual farmers were helpless, he said and competitive wars between the city milk distributing companies were carried on at the producers' expense.

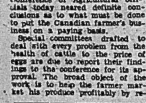
DRIVE AGAINST MOTOR BANDITS

Scotland Yard Institutes Scheme to Stop Holdups

LONDON, Aug. 31. — Scotland Yard ringed London today with a drive against "motor bandits".

Several hundred motor cars were stopped by policemen called secretly into action by Lord Trenchard, new Chief Commissioner of Metropolitan Police and head of Scotland Yard. It was not immediately disclosed whether any arrests had been made in the most impressive combing out of jittery London has ever known.

The action was taken on the heels of demands for drastic action to cope with increasing criminal violence. In recent months almost every day has brought fresh stories of hold-ups and assaults by "motor gunmen" who cruise about in automobiles.



Lord Trenchard launched his blockade in the early morning hours. There were flying squads of speedcars and motorcycle patrolmen and a large force of patrolmen.

All the main approaches to London were guarded, as were the bridges and important centres inside the city and the orders were big halt every car, no matter what it looked like.

Hundreds of motorists were stopped and questioned, and their cars searched.

of passengers were stranded at Yale Station through the tomfoolery of one of the passengers. The presence interfered with the plans of the stationmaster, and Mr. Cruickshank of obvious character did his best to harrow the feelings of the hold-up passengers by narrating the fate that years before befell the train, and dropping hints to drive the unwanted people away. But Teddy Deakin, the disturbing fellow remained in blithetical mind, laughed him to scorn and resolved to stay.

The stationmaster, however, had success in creating an atmosphere of gloomy despair and expectancy, and it required all the ingenuity of Teddy to hold his fellow-travellers in check when assistance arrived. The stationmaster rushed through the station to the accompaniment of whirring wheels, rush of steam and clatter as it came along. What did it all mean? You must not raise the dramatic denouement. It was Bluffer the Adder. Yes, sir, it was Bluffer the Adder who was under that board.

Some minutes later had you been there you would have seen Old Mr. Toad creep out from under that board and start across the Green Meadows in the hot sun at a rate you wouldn't have believed possible.
